P R E F A C E.

THE romances of chivalry, either in verse or prose, constituted so large a portion of the literature of the middle ages, that, after innumerable revolutions in taste and fashion, they must still be regarded as objects of a liberal and well-directed curiosity. Of the literary recreations of our ancestors, they supply various and ample specimens; and they abound with illustrations of the manners, customs, and habits of thinking, which prevailed during the respective periods to which they belong. The early poets of romance confounded the manners of every preceding age with those of their own; Hector of Troy they represent in all respects as such a knight as Amadis of Gaul; and their want of skill in history and chronology thus becomes conducive to their fidelity in delineating the costumes and usages of their own times.*

In the ancient dialect of this part of the island, there were many metrical romances which the negligence of our ancestors has suffered to perish, and some curious specimens have fortunately been rescued from the common wreck. Several of these are generally known to the readers of Scottish poetry, and a few others are speedily to be recommended to the attention of those who love and preserve antiquities. The romance of Alexander, of which only a single copy, and that in some degree mutilated, is ascertained to exist, is now reprinting for the members of the Bannatyne Club; and the romance of Clariodus, which is likewise of great extent, is at length presented to the members of the Maitland Club. It is printed from a folio manuscript which belonged to the late Lord Hailes, and which after his death was transferred to the Advocates Library. Nor is this manuscript without some mutilations; it commences with the eighth folio, and appears to want one or two pages at the conclusion. It seems to have been written about the year 1550, or somewhat later; but the composition is evidently of a much earlier date than the transcript, and may at least be referred to the close of the preceding century. The author's phraseology is more antiquated than that of Sir David Lindsay, and makes a nearer approach to the phraseology of Henry the Minstrel. Of a poet who has thus furnished us with so extensive a specimen of the Scottish language and versification, we can scarcely hope to retrieve the name: it was not to be expected in a manuscript curtailed of its title and colophon; nor am I aware that the author of the romance is mentioned in any existing record of our literary history. To the work itself we find an apparent allusion in Stewart's abridgement of the Orlando Furioso; which so far preserves the character of an original production, that the writer has not rigidly confined himself to the text of Ariosto, but has occasionally introduced new thoughts or illustrations.

* See a Mémoire concernant la Lecture des Anciens Romans de Chevalerie, in M. de la Curne de Ste. Palaye's Mémoires sur l'Ancienne Chevalerie, tom. ii. p. 107. edit. Paris, 1781, 3 tom. 12mo.

And Medor lyk the knycht Clariadus gois,
 Quhan he did meik Meliades conwoy

Clariodus, like many of the English romances, is derived from a French original. Mr Tyrwhitt is "inclined to believe that we have no English romance, prior to the age of Chaucer, which is not a translation or imitation of some earlier French romance ;"^c but this opinion has not been adopted by other writers equally conversant with poetical antiquities. The romance of Horn Child, or, as it is otherwise called, the Geste of Kyng Horn, is regarded by Bishop Percy as of genuine English origin ; and he infers its antiquity from the circumstance of its abounding with Anglo-Saxon idioms. It is manifestly the production of a very remote age, and, according to his estimate, it cannot be re-

Stewart of Baldynneis. MS. 4to.—This volume, stamped with the royal arms and initials, is transcribed with a considerable degree of elegance, and is dedicated to James the Sixth, who is frequently lauded with all the abject flattery which characterized the courtiers of that period. It came into the possession of the late Duke of Roxburghe, and is now deposited in the Advocates Library. Stewart's original poems display very little fancy or feeling, and his versification has no peculiar merit. His diction is generally feeble, and is often very pedantic : he is particularly fond of French words ; instead of timid damsel, he ventures to adopt such a phrase as craintive pucelle. The author has sufficient reason to apologize for his " inept orthographie." Of orthography there was indeed no standard at that period ; but Stewart's general mode of spelling is uncoutth and unsettled beyond the common example.

ferred to a later period than within a century after the conquest.^d Mr Ritson assigns it a more recent date, the close of the twelfth century, and contends that it does not exhibit a single vestige of a more intimate connexion with the Saxon, than is common to every English composition of that period ;^e but the bishop's opinion respecting its English origin has been maintained by a more recent writer, intimately acquainted with the history of northern poetry.^f Certain however it is that a very large proportion of the earliest English romances are either translations or imitations of French originals ; though it has been conjectured, and with great probability, that those which are founded on English history and tradition may have been composed in French by natives of England.

The story of Clariodus is in a great measure English. The hero himself is son to the earl of Esture, or the Asturias ; but his lovely lady Meliades is the daughter and heiress of Philipon king of England, and the most material incidents and adventures are connected with this court. In the French language there is a prose romance of Cleriadus and Meliadice, which was printed, apparently before the close of the fifteenth century.^g In a letter addressed to Mr Laing, the meritorious secretary of the Bannatyne Club, Mr Douce has stated that the manuscripts which he has examined are not older than the middle of the same century, and that the printed romance is only an abridgement. The same story is not now to be found in French verse. The Scottish author has regularly detailed the incidents of the prose romance, but has added some portion of poetical embellishment. He makes no claim to the character of an original writer, but on various occasions professes to follow the footsteps of his author.

For certanlie my author tellis me thus : ^h

He not only refers to the French original, but likewise to a translation, probably into the English language :

PREFACE.

 Full oft I put the nettill for the rose,
 And oft the bindweid for the lillie quhyte.¹

From this passage we learn that he followed, not a metrical, but a prose original and a prose version. The translator's name he has not sought an opportunity of mentioning; but the subsequent verse supplies us with some information respecting his quality:

Eik my Lord sayis in his translatioun.²

As the manuscript of Clariodus leaves the tale somewhat imperfect, it may not here be improper to supply the most material deficiencies. The French romance begins with stating that after the days of King Arthur and his companions of the Round Table,¹ how long after we are not informed, there reigned in England a worthy king named Philippon. He had espoused a lady belonging to a very high family of Gascony, and the only issue of their marriage was a daughter named Meliadice. This was the most beautiful damsel of her time, and she was instructed in every thing that the daughter of a king ought to know : she was withal so well conditioned, and was so entirely inclined to love God and the church, that it was a great pleasure to hear of her good works. The king was now far advanced in years ; and although he had a brother, 'Thomas de Langarde, who was much younger than himself, yet as he could not intrust any share of the government to a person of so wicked a disposition, he was obliged to solicit the aid of his friend the count of Esture, who speedily obeyed his summons, and repaired to England accompanied by his valiant son Cleriadus. On their arrival, they were treated with all due honour : at the very first banquet, Cleriadus appeared to great advantage ; he well knew how to mingle in the dance, and he sung so sweetly, that Philippon could not help saying to the count, " En verité, beau cousin, ie ne ouys oncques si bien chanter, ne si bien a mon gré, que rica ; but this account has been received with the utmost distrust, and he has frequently been suspected of inventing what he professes to translate. It has however been shewn by an ingenious and pleasing writer, the late Mr Ellis, that there is no sufficient reason to infer that either the historian or his friend the archdeacon was guilty of imposture ; and that there is in reality much more improbability in supposing a series of fables, intended to convey an exaggerated opinion of the national grandeur, to have been rather devised in the twelfth century, than during the ignorance and credulity of an earlier period. (Specimens of Early English Metrical Romances, vol. i. p. 89.) See likewise Turner's Hist. of the Anglo-Saxons, vol. i. p. 101. and Ritson's Life of King Arthur, from ancient Historians and authentic Documents. Lond. 1825, 8vo.

² P. 255.

vostre filz faict." The count of Esture was without delay appointed the king's lieutenant, and administered his affairs with wisdom and justice. There were four gentlemen in his train, whose names frequently recur in the course of the narrative : two of them, Amadour de Bruslant and Palixes, were his sister's sons ; the third was of Scotland, and was named Richard de Mataint ; the fourth was of Wales, and was named Guillaume de Forest. In the mean time, Cleriadus, who was deeply smitten with the charms of Meliadice, improved every opportunity of cultivating her good graces : sometimes they played at chess, sometimes he danced or sung, or played on his harp. But in the midst of this solace, he found a brilliant opportunity of distinguishing himself by his first deed of arms. One day, while the king was holding "court grande et plaine," a knight in complete armour, and attended by six squires, entered the palace, and delivered a message from his master the Duc de Jennes ; setting forth that during the said duke's minority, Philippon had without cause and without reason seized the port of Claire-Fontaine, and declaring that unless he signified his willingness to make restitution, he then defied him with fire and blood. He however added that he was authorized to leave the decision of their claims to the issue of a single combat, and was ready to meet any knight who might appear on the king's behalf. All the knights of his court, to whom he explained the justice of his quarrel, having declined to do battle with the Lombard champion, Cleriadus, who was then twenty-two years of age, tendered his services ; and, after being knighted by the king, he entered the lists with his redoubtable adversary. And with this incident commences the manuscript of the Scottish romance.

The mutilation at the end of the poem appears to have been less considerable, and probably did not amount to two pages. The grand tournament is the last incident mentioned in the prose romance, which then hastens to a conclusion. “Et eurent le roy Cleriadus et la royne Meliadice de beaulx enfans, lesquelz furent tous roys et roynes. Et faisoit souuent le roy Cleriadus armes pour lamour de sa bonne amye Meliadice. Et vesquirent long temps ensemble en toute ioye et prosperité, comme vous auez ouy par cy deuant. Et à tant se taist le compte a parler deulx et de leur faitz. Et icy finist le Romant et Cronique du Roy Cleriadus et de Meliadice sa femme ; que plus nen parle pour le present, sinon que le benoist roy de gloire vueille auoir mercy deulx et de nous quant il luy plaira. Amen.”

The tale seems to be protracted beyond its proper limits : the marriage of Clariodus offers the natural termination, and all that follows may be considered as misplaced and superfluous. In the previous part of the work, we are abundantly regaled with tournaments and feasts ; nor was it expedient to repeat the same entertainments, after our curiosity respecting the fate of the principal characters must have been so completely abated. But the merit or demerit of the story itself belongs to the author of the French romance, and the Scottish writer can only aspire to the praise of a skilful versifier. With the exception of Henry the Minstrel, he has exhibited a more lengthened specimen of the heroic couplet, than any other of our early poets ; and his versification, though occasionally feeble, and perhaps deficient in variety of phrase and cadence, is not destitute of spirit or character, and it sometimes attains to smoothness and elegance. The following couplet is easy and flowing :

Thay hade the winde so richt and eike so faire,
Thay go also swift as aigill in the aire.^m

In another passage, he elegantly describes the song of the minstrels,

Sweit as the marmaid in the orient sea.ⁿ

The subsequent verse will gratify the admirers of alliteration :

And faire ower fluide as falcon fair on flicht.^o

The poet's phraseology is not without its peculiarities. He occasionally introduces Latin and French words which retain a very extraneous appearance. In the following couplet, squires are termed armigers, and to shew is to ostend :

With that he gart his armigers ostend
The creddill of gold, gudlie to commend.^p

Clariodus may upon the whole be considered as a very readable poem. It affords a valuable specimen of the language and literature of our ancestors, and it abounds with characteristic illustrations of the manners and customs peculiar to the ages of chivalry. The pomp and circumstance of the tournament, the mode of conducting the gorgeous banquet of the feudal court, where a lady and a knight were placed alternately at the dyse,⁹ together with the minstrelsy and pastimes with which they were regaled during their festivities, are all presented in due order, and are rendered intelligible and interesting to the inquisitive reader. In the fourth book, for example, we find a copious detail of the ceremonies attending the vow of the poune, or peacock; an usage so remote from modern manners, that its first aspect is not a little singular.⁷

From some occasional expressions, it may be inferred that the author intended his poem for recitation⁸ as well as reading; and at a period when many knights and barons had not learned the letters of the alphabet, the aid of the professed reciter or minstrel was indispensable. "The word minstrel," as Warton has remarked, "is of an extensive signification, and is applied as a general term to every character of that species of men whose business it was to entertain, either with oral recitation, music, gesticulation, and singing, or with a mixture of all these arts united."⁹ It very frequently denotes an ordinary musician, and in this sense it is repeatedly used in the common version of the Bible,¹⁰

which is an excellent standard for the contemporary meaning of an English word ; but on other occasions the term bears a more elevated signification, and a minstrel is then synonymous with a poet. An ancient Scottish poet, if I rightly apprehend his meaning, represents harping and reciting as an inferior accomplishment, and a talent for poetry as the chief qualification of a minstrel : " .

To harpe or carpe, whare so thu gose,
 Thomas, thu sall hafe the chose sothely.
 And he said, harpyuge kepe I none,
 Ffor tonge es chefe of mynstralsye. v

The recitation of metrical romances long continued to afford one of the chief literary recreations among the higher ranks ; and to be able to read such compositions, was no vulgar attainment. This was one of the accomplishments of the fair Ysoude, the heroine of the ancient romance ascribed to Thomas of Erceldoune :

^u The same order of men is still to be found in certain parts of the world, where civilization has made but little progress. Among the Mandingo tribes of Africa, as Major Laing informs us, the jelle, or minstrels, earn their subsistence "by singing the mighty deeds and qualifications of rich men, who, in their opinion, have no faults. Like the minstrels of old, they are always at hand to laud with hyperbolical praise the landlord of a feast, and headman of a town." (Laing's Travels in Western Africa, p. 132. Lond. 1825, 8vo.) In Bondoo, Major Gray met with abundance of "goulahs, or singing people, who in Africa always flock around those who have any thing to give.—Dozens of them," he adds, "would, at the same moment, set up a sort of roaring extempore song in our praise, accompanied by drums and a sort of guitar ; and we found it impossible to get rid of them by any other means than giving something." (Gray's Travels in Western Africa, p. 112. Lond. 1825, 8vo.)

Barbour, the venerable archdeacon of Aberdeen, has recorded a curious anecdote illustrative of this department of literary history. The good King Robert, having occasion to convey himself and his small band of faithful adherents across Lochlomond, could only procure a boat capable of admitting three people. Bruce and Douglas were first ferried over: a day and a night were consumed in conveying the rest of the party; and while they were gradually mustering on the banks of the lake, the hero endeavoured to solace his followers by reading to them the romance of Ferambrace.

The king the quhilis meryly
 Red to thaim that war him by,
 Romanys off worthi Ferambrace,
 That worthily our cummyn was,
 Throw the rycht douchty Olywer. ---
 The gud king apou this maner

 And maid thaim gamyn & solace,
 Till that his folk all passyt was. ^y

^x Sir Walter Scott has uniformly adopted the reading of Ysoude; but, with respect to the orthography of this name, consult "Gottfrieds von Strassburg Werke, aus den bessten Handschriften, mit Einleitung und Wörterbuch, herausgegeben durch Friedr. Heinr. von der Hagen," Band ii. S. 237. Breslau, 1823, 2 Bde. 8vo.

The romances of chivalry appear to have maintained their popularity in Scotland till the close of the sixteenth century. The following animadversions occur in Alexander Hume's epistle to the reader, prefixed to the collection of his sacred poems: "In princes courts, in the houses of greate men, and at the assemblies of yong gentlemen and yong damasels, the cheife pastime is to sing prophane sonnets, and vaine ballats of loue, or to rehearse some fabulos faits of Palmerine, Amadis, or other such like raueries; and such as ather haue the art or vaine poetike, of force they must shew themselues cunning followers of the dissolute ethnike poets, both in phrase and substance, or else they shall be had in no reputation." *

It must be satisfactory for the reader to be informed, that this relique of ancient poetry was conducted through the press by Mr Kilgour of the Register House, whose well-tryed skill and fidelity afford a sufficient pledge of the minute and scrupulous accuracy with which the edition has been executed. The most wary copyist, in the progress of a tedious task, is liable to occasional fits of negligence or inadvertence; but the manuscript of Clariodus appears to have been transcribed with less than ordinary care and attention. Many palpable errors, consisting of omissions or transpositions, or of the insertion of one word instead of another, have been rectified by the aid of conjectural criticism, where the

OF

.....
.....
BRICHT as ane angell schyning in his weid,
With force of speir, upon his mightie steid ;
Rycht large of statour, strong and corpolent,
Lyke God of armis Mars armipotent,
Wode, burning, full of courage and desyre ;
For to behald he was ane awfull fyre.
Everie man meinit Sir Clariodus ;
Bot maist of all, the mone was pitious
Of his four fellowis, his daith dreiding fore.

10 Ane of them buir his bricht helme him before,
Ane uther his speir buir unto the feild,
The thrid his ax, the fourt his nobill scheild,
Into the clofe in midis of the palice,
In quhilk devysit was the fighting place.
Beholding on the stairis by and by
The King, the Queine, with mony fair lady.

When he was armit, fair, clofe and joint,
 Upon his steid ascendit at all poynt ;
 His lance he faikit manlie lyke ane knicht,
 20 As lucent lamp fo leimit he of licht ;
 Manheid at Mars he neidit naine to borrow ;
 He schynit as dois the bricht day-star at morrow,
 With cirkill of gold about his helmit cleir,
 All birnand full of bricht stonis deir,
 Circumferit with roobies radious,
 Betwixt ilk firkill bricht and glorious,
 With goldin schaikeris abone his plumes greine ;
 His ladyis abone all mycht be feine
 Ane courtche of plesance, of gold all browderit bricht,
 30 Quhilk waifit lyke ane streimer castine licht :
 The michtie bardis of his nobill steid
 Of bricht gold gleimit as ane gleid :
 Of redolent stonis schynit his weid royall :
 It was maist lyke ane thing selestiall
 Him to behold, fo angillyke of hew.
 Toward the Lumbard knicht he did perfew,
 Full of affuirit manheid and defyre,
 In thrift of knichtheid birnand lyke a fyre.
 As furious lyounis eiger to the field,
 40 Anone quhen ather uther can behald,
 Thair is no mair, bot loud gois up the foundis
 Of silver trumpits and of clariounis ;
 Togidder gois the knichtis in thair weidis,
 In gois thair spurris in fydis of thair steidis ;
 Furth gois the speiris straicht as ony lyne,
 Forward they preike with heartis leonyne ;
 As dreidfull dragonis thay togidder drave,
 Quhyll baith thair scheildis in peices clave,

- And baith thair speiris in peices brake,
 50 The palice reirdit lyke ane thunder crake :
 Abake from uther they stakirit with sic forfe,
 Quhill at the grund baith lay man and horfe.
 Clariodus was delyver and zing,
 And up he start without abasing,
 And pullit out his sword delyverly.
 The Lumbard knight still efter him could ly ;
 His fute sadly throw the stirrip geid,
 And throw the feild traillit him his steid ;
 Quhom followit Sir Clariodus so fast,
 60 That he the steid reingeit at the last,
 And him rescourfit wounder manfulie,
 Saying, Sir Knight, defend gow hardily.
 With swordis secharp thay can at uther dryve,
 Whill baith thair helmis bludy war belyve.
 Thus war thair straikes baith sad and keine
 Betwix thir knichtis wounderfull to feine ;
 As rugend lyounis ramping ferce and wode,
 Withoutin mercie scheding utheris blude
 So furiously, that ferlie was to see
 70 Undantounit beine thair nobill heartis hee ;
 As foaming boares, in thair melancholie,
 Thay bet on utheris birnies cruellie,
 So long induring without disconfitour,
 That ferlie was to everie creatour
 That them beheld and stud them about,
 How thay micht stand under sic straikes stout.
 Clariodus so knichtlie he him baire,
 That everie wicht him praisit that was thair ;
 Sore movit was the Lumbard campioun,
 80 That he, quhilk praisit was of sic renoun,

So long affailzeit was with great fighting
 With ane that was of age so wonder young.
 He raifit up his forcie arme on height,
 And at Clariodus with all his meikle might
 Ane fraike he ettillit right as he wald him flo ;
 And he anone weill neirer him can go
 And on the fyd him hit the richt arme under,
 Quhill of his ribis thrie did breke in funder ;
 Whair of the wound so lairg was and wyde,
 90 His bouellis nicht be feine out throw his fyd.
 The Lumbard knicht did with the fraik down fall,
 And ly in foune alfe pail as ony wall.
 To confort him he schoup or he wald flint,
 Clariodus, did of his hewmind hint,
 And held his heid up softlie and it schoke.
 And quhen that he out of his fwoun awoke,
 He said thir wordis wounder petiouffly,
 Ha, flour of knichtheid ! I thé mercie cry.
 The uther said, If thow will mercie crave,
 100 Make heir ane aith never to clame nor have
 The Clare Fontane, as we our cunan maid.
 Thow saifing lyfe Clariodus ! he said,
 My lord, he said, fall never challenge thairtill ;
 Rycht as thow pleifis thy mynd I fall fulfill.
 Clariodus is past unto the King,
 Declairing the cace in everie thing,
 Him praying for the knichtis lyfe also.
 The King in armis refavit him tho,
 Saying, Deir freind, quhat ze defyre of me
 110 I thinke of richt that it fould grantit be ;
 For saifit is the honour of this land,
 Rycht be the noble deidis of your hand.

This woundit knicht rycht softlie up thay take,
 And in his chalmer gart his bed be make ;
 And gat him leiches his woundis for to sie,
 The trustiest that was in that cuntrie.
 Clariodus is to his chalmer gone,
 Quhair his body unermit was anone,
 Ane leich to him beine fetchit hassilie,
 120 Quhilk did his woundis ryp attentivelie,
 Him conforting, and bade him take gud hart,
 For he belyve wald be helit of everie smart.
 The King ane furrit mantill hes him send,
 And bad alwayes thay fulde him till attend.
 Albeit in heart noble he was and wicht,
 Out of his chalmer go he no might
 For gaiking of his woundis newe and greine ;
 Bot ane sight of Meliades the scheinie
 Micht more him comfort, I dar take on hand,
 130 Nor all the leiches into Lumbard land.
 Quhen endit was the battell on this ways,
 All the lordis bounit hame with haill advyse.
 Oft visit hes the King Clariodus,
 And eik the Lumbard knyght that fore woundit was.
 Quhen awcht dayis past war and gone by,
 Meliades hes called privily
 On hir maistres, saying on this maneir,
 Ze know how Clariodus full deir
 First fould be haldin with my father the King,
 140 Syne with his barrounis, abone all uther thing,
 That for our saikis in hand tuike sic battell,
 And of his woundis he is not zit haill ;
 Sen the first day that he his chalmer tuike,
 I geid him not to visie nor to looke.

Hir maistres said, It war gour grit honour
 To visit him quhilk is of knichtheid flour;
 And now the tyme is maist convenient,
 The King is furth with all his houshald went,
 And he rycht long thinkis him alone,
 150 Of gour cuming he wald be glaid anone.
 Meliades, richt fresch and weill beseine,
 With hir hes taine twa ladyis fresch and scheine,
 With hir awin maistres, digne and verteous,
 [And] past to visie Sir Clariodus;
 Whair scho him fand with few in companie,
 On his bed-syd fitting bot quyetlie;
 Ane goun of claith of gold his farke abone,
 Furrit with mertrix. His collour changit sone
 At hir incuming, and he on fute up start,
 160 Within his breist for joye danfit his heart;
 Quhen that he saw his ladie most bening,
 For joyfulnes a word nicht not out bring.
 With humbill, sober and womanlie effeire,
 Adoun scho sat befyd him in ane chyre.
 And quhen scho did behald this lustie knight
 So fair, so gOUNG, so valiant and so wicht,
 Cupid, that lord, with his scharp grindine dairt
 Full suddanlie hes strukine hir to the heart,
 So that scho sat bot with changing hew;
 170 The fyre of heit it kindlit is of new
 Of luif within hir breist, birning so fore,
 That scho desyris of this world no more
 Bot him onlie to have in companie,
 That under Mars beine flour of chivalrie.
 This war they wyndit baith in lyk maneir,
 As nicht be sein be thair face and cheir;

- With luif fo fore thair spreitis was bereft,
 That not to speike ane word was left.
 Meliades, rycht lustie and bening,
 180 Said to the squyeris and to the madinis ging,
 Thay zonder moir in chalmer fould disport,
 Whill scho few wordis of counfall fould report
 Of mediceine unto the woundit knight.
 On this maneir than spake this goodlie wicht,
 O ze my tender freind Clariodus,
 Weill auchtin I of zow to be joyous,
 That to this regioun brocht hes sic honour ;
 And specialie, abone all creatour,
 My father aucht to chereis zow, and love
 190 Nixt God and fantis into the hevin above ;
 For quhen his knichtis the battell all refusit,
 Ze that ar zoung and not in armis usit
 On zow it tuik with manlie countinace,
 And weill mentinet to the uterance.
 Clariodus said, Madame, fo Chryft me fave,
 It is not I that all the thanke fould have
 Of this battell nor of the victorie,
 The thanke ane uther fervit mor nor I,
 That caus was hail of the discomfitour.
 200 Na, said this fair and lustie creatour,
 Nane uther was bot ze, the treuth to tell,
 Qubilk did the schame out of the court expell ;
 For had not beine zour honour and bewtie,
 Zon knight, but fail, had riddin on this contrie,
 Qubilk had beine to this realme ane lake ;
 The laud is gouris, I dar that undertake.
 Hir anfwereit on this wayis Clariodus,
 Madam, I mervell not that ze say thus,

Your noble nurtur and womanheid bening
 210 Your sufferis not to say no uther thing,
 Thais wordis came of gritt nobilnes ;
 Nor was my deidis of praife or worthines :
 Bot for to tell the trewth unfengitlie,
 Ane uther was the caus aluterlie,
 That vincuift was the Lumbard knight in feild.
 Meliades then reddilie him beheld,
 Saying, That perfoun I wald know I wife.
 Madame, he said, gif ge will graunt me this,
 That ge will me commend unto that wicht,
 220 And fullie do your biffines and nicht,
 That my fervice thay hald exceptabill,
 And of thair hienes digne and honorabill
 That thay will not my fymplenes conteme,
 Than fall I gladlie that perfoun to you name.
 At fchort, fcho sayis, thair is no thing at all
 Efter my nicht bot for you do I fall,
 Saiving my honour and my womanheid.
 Madame, he said, Pleis it your guidlieheid,
 Ge mane it fecreit keip and not difcure.
 230 Thairto I grant, said fcho, I you assure.
 Madame, he said, ge ar Kings dochter deir,
 Reveill me not, as ge have height me heir ;
 And gif ge doe your pouer, as ge say,
 Anents that perfoun, helpe me mair ge may
 Nor ony that be levand now on lyve.
 Now, Lady myne, I will me to you fcryve,
 It was your felf, if I the truth declare,
 That only was the caus of my weifair ;
 Ge war my ftrong proteftour, and only
 240 The caus dreidles of all my victorie :

Treft weill, Lady, that now I feinge nocht ;
 For, be the Lord that all the warld hes wrocht,
 Only your bewtie and your womanheid
 Put fra my heart all couardice and dreid :
 I do mein zour mercie and zour grace,
 For fen the tyme that I faw firft zour face,
 I have zow luifit ouer all eardlie thing ;
 Into my mynd full oft asking,
 That it had stand upon fic ane cace,
 250 Nane upon lyf was abill to zour grace,
 Bot be hard fighting in fik degree
 Sum deids of armis ordeinit war on hee
 That everie man for dreid fould it forfaike,
 Than wift I weill I fuld it wndertake,
 The feild, alswith to win worfchipe or die ;
 For ather had beine worfchipe unto me
 To wine my lady quhom I luifit fo,
 Or to be donne or to be out of woe.
 Then weill lang ftill held hir Meliades,
 260 Syne unto him fcho fayis on this wayis,
 How may I trow zour fawis, faying thus ?
 Ze have beine lang into the court with ws,
 And never befor fik thing to me ze movit,
 Sum tyme I wald perfavit, hade ze me luifit.
 Madam, quhen I begane zow for to luif,
 My mynd I durft not fchaw [zow] for repruife ;
 For I to zow was no comparifoune,
 Sa monie prinfis nobill of renoune
 Ze had in proffer, quhom ze lift to take,
 270 And I, unworthie was, I wndertake,
 Into fo heigh ane mater to proceid.
 And ze, Madame, the rofe of luftieheid,

Now at the leift is bund to keip fecreit ;
 Quhairfor I traift, My Hartis Lady fweit,
 Gif zow no lift rew on my painis fore,
 Ze will keip fecreit if ze will do no more ;
 And as I dar, for my wnworthines
 I cry zow mercie, flour of gentilnes,
 As I that fall unto my lyvis end
 280 Lawlie zow ferve and never zow offend.
 Advyfit was this lady quhat to fay,
 For fcho was wyfe and honorabill ay ;
 Zit nevertheles luif did hir fo owercum,
 That lang fcho fat all fpeachles and dumbe ;
 And at the laft fcho faid, Clariodus,
 Gif it be fo that luif I grant zow thus,
 Ze falbe to me trew and diligent,
 Rycht faithfull, fecreit and obedient,
 And ower all wemen that ze me love and ferve
 290 Bot feingeing ay till the day ze fterve,
 And ever about to fave my honour,
 And not for luft perfew me as ane lichour ;
 Fynd I zow fet to hurt my honeftie,
 Droidles at zow I will more greifit be,
 And have zow in moir haitret and reproufe
 Nor of befor I had zow into luife ;
 Gif we guid luif and trewth to uther meine,
 It fall the longer left ws two betweine,
 Bot gif we fchap to crabe our creatour,
 300 It fall no longer prosper nor indure :
 Thairfor fic thingis if ze lift to fulfill,
 Say on to me, and I fall fay thairtill.
 Madame, quod he, till all that ze have faid
 I me conforme, be God that me hes maid,

Now never to disobey, nor git to grieve
 For all the dayis that I have heir to leive;
 Bot ever moir to folow gowr intent,
 Richt as ge now give me commandiment.
 Than tenderlie the fair Meliades
 310 Kiffit hir knicht into maift gudlie wayis,
 And freindlie in hir armis him refavit
 Alse far as scho nicht gudlie unperfavit.
 When all agreit, than bunden war thir two
 With aithis great, ay to love uthar so
 That it fould lest withouttin departing.
 Betwixt thir loveris, in ane taikineing,
 Two litill changeis interchangit they,
 In remembrance of thair trowth for ay.
 Of uthars diverse maters spak they fyne,
 320 Whyll bricht Apollo westwart did declyne;
 Than raise hir maistres fra hir companie,
 And said that it was supper tyme neir by.
 Meliades than tuik hir [leave with wo;]
 Bot git hir heart nicht not depart him [fro,]
 With easie sichis and inward behalding,
 As for that tyme they maid [thair] depairting.
 Gritlie rejosit was Clariodus,
 That with his lady was comfortit thus;
 He heallit of his woundis day be day,
 330 Quhill all his painis worne war cleine away;
 Than passit he to see the Lumbard knicht,
 Him doing comfort oft at all his nicht.
 Clariodus in court I let dwell still,
 And of ane uthar mater speik I will.
 It is cumin to the King of Spainis eare,
 The wonderfull beawtie and the fresch effeir

Of Mandonet, the lustie creatoure,
 Quhilk dochter was unto the Earle Estour.
 He thocht he wald have hir in mariage ;
 340 And, with advyse of his haill barrownage,
 Ane fair ambassat schortlie bes he send,
 To bring this mater schortlie unto end.
 The meffage buire four knichts, mikle to pryfe,
 Sir Leonet de Beaulieu wicht and wyfe,
 Sir Leonet de Mortemer, Sir Ame de Beaufort,
 Sir Arthur de la Roye, with lustie forte,
 To Estur cuntrie fought with diligence ;
 Schawing anone thair letters and credence
 Unto the Countes wyfe and sapient,
 350 For than the Earle was not at hame present.
 Scho thame refavit with great feist and cheir,
 With companie of ladyis fresch and cleir ;
 And maid them byd, with mirrines and cherifching,
 Wpon hir Lord the Earlis hame cuming ;
 Quhilk at his cuming fairlie can them treit,
 And [did] bring furth his dochter Mandonet,
 Quhilk [pryfit was for wit and rare beautie.]
 Now schort into this mater for to be,
 Sir Leonet hir weddet with ane ring
 360 In the name only of his prince and king,
 And gave to hir ane full rich diamand.
 This beand donne, Earle Estour, avenand,
 Feistit them gudlie dayis two or three ;
 Syne them rewairdit eftir thair degree.
 Returnit ar thir knichtis hame againe
 Unto their mightie king and foverane,
 Whom in the toune of Walburgh thay fand,
 Bot three days jurnay from Earle Estours land ;

Rehearfing all [to him] both more and les,
 370 How them entreitit Earle Estours nobilnes,
 And how within a monthis space but more
 Sould be his wadding day ; quhairfore
 He hes gart warne throw all his regioun
 Baith duikis, earlis and knichtis of renoune,
 For to be thair againe the justing day
 On horſe armit redie for tornay.

Clariodus, ryding at his diſport,
 He met his fatheris meſſage, with reporte
 Of all thir foirſaid thingis to be donne,
 380 Commanding him that he ſould ſpeid him ſoune
 Hame to his cuntrie. And quhen Clariodus
 Had hard thaiſe tithingis thay have ordanit thus,
 [He] maid the meſſinger pas to his In
 But wordis mo, and hald him clois thairin,
 Quhill he anon ſould ſchaw him his intent.
 Clariodus is to his lady went,
 Meliades, and tauld hir all the cace,
 Saying, Madame, for all my dayis ſpace
 Sen that I am becum gour ſervitour and thrall,
 390 Ather gour leave heir hartlie have I fall,
 Or in this land at ſchort I fall abyde
 For weill or wo, betyde quhat may betyde ;
 For ȝow, Madam, I never think to diſpleis.
 Meliades in hart had litill eis
 When ſcho had hard Clariodus intent ;
 Saying, My Knicht, richt weill I am content
 That waddit beine ȝour ſiſter with the King
 Of Spaingie land, quhilk is ane mightie rigne :
 Bot loath I war, if otherways micht be,
 400 That ȝe ſould now depart ſo far fra me ;

To reafoun git obey will I ever mo,
 Suppose my will is ge not went me fro ;
 Bot fen it reynes to worfchip knichtheid,
 Confent I will, thairfor great God zow fpeid ;
 Ze fall firft leave ask at my father the King,
 Syne fpeike with me at zour depairting.

Clariodus unto the King is went,
 And of this mater tauld him the intent ;
 Whairof the King was glaid, and faid, Truely
 410 I am content, it is ane fair allay ;
 The King of Spaing is ane michtie King,
 And eik we fall tham have be that wedding ;
 Have we tham our freindis that be in that countrie,
 And this always cums weill, as thinkis me.
 His Thesawrer he gart be efter fent,
 And chargit him to give incontinent
 Two thoufand floringis to Clariodus,
 To fupport him paffing hameward thus.
 He did the King rycht speciallie befeike,
 420 That his four fellows pas nicht with him eike ;
 To quhilke he grantit upon heartlie wyfe ;
 His leave he tuike fchortlie to devyfe.
 Clariodus, rycht as the day up cleiris,
 Adreffis him and his four nobill feiris,
 And hes gart graith thair harnes at all poynt,
 That in thair armour thair was no difjoynt.
 Clariodus unto his lady went,
 The uterance to have of hir intent ;
 Speiring at hir quhat collour he fould taike,
 430 Or in quhat hew he juft fould for hir faike,
 Or weir in tournay quhile his hame cuming.
 Meliades nicht not ane word out bring

Ane weill long space, for inward paine and wo,
 That he sould pairt so suddenie hir fro ;
 And quhen that scho overcam, than said scho thus,
 My best belovit knight Clariodus,
 Uneis my wofull spreit may susteine
 The hevie pains now that in my breist beine
 For your departing ; bot, as I said before,
 440 My will I fall constrain with fighis fore,
 Sene with honour may it not remeid,
 And [gow] to weir I gif the cullour Reid,
 Your name and honour wald [I] not impair ;
 Fair weill my knight, and raught him thair
 Ane heart of gold with stainis casting licht :
 This fall ge have in remembrance of richt
 That ge my heart have and no mo,
 Quhilk in na maner may be pairtit gow fro.
 This heart he tuike, and thankis to hir gold ;
 450 And gave to hir ane bracet wrought with gold,
 About hir arme praying hir it to weir.
 Scho kislit him with womanlie effer.
 They tuike thair leave at utheris pitiouslie,
 With tirie faces, imbracing tenderlie ;
 And to hir ladyes all gude nicht he said,
 Bot naine he kist for aith that he had maid
 To kisse no lady efter his lady bricht
 Whill that he hade againe of hir ane fight.
 That nicht he and his fellows tuke them rest,
 460 And on the morrow them to the way hes drest.
 Clariodus in passing to his countrie
 With his foure fellows, lustie for to sie,
 Thay hapinit in ane blissfull morrow scheine
 To ryde out throw ane gudlie forrest greine,

- Quhilke callit was the Wode of Eventouris,
 In quhilk oftymes walkit knichts of King Arthouris
 Eventouris feikand, as the wfe was than.
 Clariodus said, that we will everie man
 Eventouris feike be fyndrie wayis ryde.
 470 Anone thay have depairtit and can devyde.
 Clariodus, within a litill space,
 Ane pitious voice he hard crying Aleace !
 Lamentable, as it ane woman ware.
 His steid he reingait and raid nar,
 And as he followit on the cry,
 He saw foure knichtis enarmit richly,
 Having [with] them ane lady wo begone ;
 Ane litill dwerff fast efter them can gone.
 Quhen scho had of Clariodus ane fight,
 480 Scho said, Have mercie on me, jentill knicht,
 Help, for thy manheid and for thy ladyis saiike,
 Me, that am fallie from my husband taikie
 Be the handis of thir knights fellounlie,
 Quhilk hes him left woundit cruellie
 In poynt of death. Than said Clariodus,
 Fair Lordis, be in heart piteous,
 And be affchamit fair ladyes to offend ;
 Weill glaidlier thair caus ge aught defend.
 Sir Knicht, thay said, Pas quhair gour erand lysis,
 490 Gour appetite we will serve in no wayis.
 Clariodus said, Heir I make God judge,
 I fall be deid or scho fall have refuge.
 And he anone, inermitt all in reid,
 [The quhilke his lady choifit for his weid,]
 With speir in hand, he spurit fast his steid,
 And to the formist knicht hes went gud speid,

And to the erd him drave fo fast but ho,
 Whill that his nek on force it birst in two ;
 And he was hurt a litill throw his geir
 500 Be his fellow, bot hail that baid his speir,
 Whairwith he ran upon the other thrie,
 Betwix in quhom begane ane hard mellie :
 Ane uther to the erd he drave adoun,
 His lymb to fruschit, and he fell in fwoun ;
 The lady and the dwerff fell him abone,
 And wald have cuttit his throte rycht sonne.
 Clariodus, thoct that he had mikle adoe,
 Esfyit hes, and thir wordis said them to,
 To be fo cruell and to slay ane knight,
 510 Madam, it fettis to na lady bricht.
 The uther twa knichts assemblit on him fast,
 Hard was the feild and fell, quhile at the last
 Clariodus thoct on his ladie bricht,
 And at the thrid knight straik with all his micht,
 Whill that his helme quyte from his heid he straike,
 Mercie he askit then for Chrystis faike,
 And geildit him his sword incontinent.
 The fourt knight than maid na impediment,
 Bot said, Sir Knight, we cum gour priffoneiris,
 520 And heir I obleifs me and all my feiris
 At gour command to stand and at gour will,
 So that ge list heir mercie grant ws till.
 Clariodus was woundit in the fyde,
 Zit never geildis quhile they to mercy cryed,
 For rewth hes restrainit his nobill heart
 From crueltie, and sonne he did advert
 Wnto thir knichtis, and said, For your trespas,
 At gone lady ge fall ga mercie afs

- And forgivenes ; and fyne ge fall me fweir,
 530 On fik maneir never woman [to] deir ;
 Syn to Great Britane pafs ge fall all fweith,
 And for the King the maner all ge kyth ;
 Syn to the fairest lady in the land ge speir
 Dwalland in the region far or neir,
 And geild gow to that lady benigne,
 Schawing to hir but [ony] fengeing,
 Say that the Reid Knicht hes gow to hir fend,
 Quhilk hartfullie to hir dois he commend.
 Thay sweare all be the ordour of knichtheid,
 540 That in all haift this fould be donne but dreid.
 The lady thankit oft Clariodus,
 Saying, Most nobill knicht and chyvalrus,
 Wyld is the land, and ludging heir is none ;
 Bot if ge wald difdaine with me to gone,
 My duelling place is at the forrestis end,
 Ge gar thir knichtis also with gow wend
 My husbands frindschip with them for to make,
 And I gour woundis dar weill undertake,
 For I in leichcraft have sum skeill and kuning.
 550 Clariodus hes grantit to this thing,
 And gart thir forsaid knichtis with him ryd ;
 He gart the dwerff with the flaine knicht abyd,
 Whill they sent for him efterwart ; and fo
 Togidder with the lady can thay go,
 Whill they com to the mikill forrest end ;
 Then from hors thay did thair discend,
 And with the lady they enterit in the place,
 Quhair thay refavit war with grit solace.
 The knichtis to ane chalmer than thay geid,
 560 And laid soft falves to thair woundis reid.

Scho brocht hir Lord unto Clariodus,
 Gylgeam de la Weille, worthie and famous ;
 Quhilk thankit him of his great nobilnes,
 That did his wyfe againe to him redres,
 Putting his bodie into sic eventure,
 And fyne had maid the haill difcomfitour ;
 Whairfor he geild him self and all his guide,
 To him quhilk frindlie in his quarrell stude.
 So, be the knichts war to the supper fet,
 570 Clariodus fellowis knokit at the zet,
 For thair nane uthar harberie was about,
 And of thair cuming blyth was all the rowt ;
 Bot sonne thay speirit of Clariodus,
 Gif any wist of sik ane knicht antrus,
 Quhilk from thame twinit in the morrow tyde,
 Walking alleane out throw the woodis wyde,
 In reid arrayit, baith in scheild and speir.
 The Lord anfuerit, Fair knichts have ge no feir ;
 I dar weill fay and eike thairat abyde,
 580 War all the knichtis in this warld fo wyde,
 Boune unto battell under birneis bricht,
 He nicht amongs thame countit be ane knicht ;
 Heir he is ludgit in this ilk place.
 As it befell, he tauld them all the cace.
 Be everie knicht hade tauld his eventur,
 What him betydit as he throw forrest fure,
 Alreadie was the supper to tham dicht.
 Gillgiam de la Weill spake with voice on height,
 My Lordis, ge ar all welcum to this place,
 590 Amongis ws tak in patience Godis grace.
 Fair Sir, fweitleie said Clariodus,
 Methinks it best, according war it thus,

Togidder all to foupe, nicht it gow please,
 With gone hurt knight, nicht it them ease ;
 And this I pray gow doe for the luife of me,
 In hope that we fall all the glaider be.
 The Lord him thankit lawlie at his nicht,
 Saying, Thais wordis come of ane nobill knight.
 As he devyfit, so was it donne all swyth ;
 600 To supper went thir lordis glaid and blyth,
 And everie man was mirrie and joyous,
 For gud accordance maid Clariodus
 Amongis the knichtis with all his diligence,
 And everilke feide forgiven is and offence.
 The Lady tuike upon hir great travell,
 Whyll that scho maid him of his woundis hail ;
 Then courteslie he tuike his leave and wend,
 To lord and lady oft doing him commend,
 To tham and to the woundit knightis thre ;
 610 Syn toward Esture land the way tuike he.
 When that the knichtis thrie war hail and found,
 And haillit fyne of everie grevous wound,
 Thay tuike thair leave at lord and lady eike,
 Them thankit fyne with myndis myld and meike ;
 And passit fyne in England to the King,
 Declairing him the cace in everie thing,
 How it befell as ge have hard beforne ;
 And how they all oblist war and fworne,
 To geild thair bodies to the fairest wight,
 620 That was in England into manis fight ;
 And be the way how all men did thame wife,
 Wnto the guidlie fair Meliades.
 The King said, Freindis have ge no knowleging
 Of him that sent gow with sic tyding.

The knightis said, No more of him we know,
 Bot the Reid Knight he namit was our aw.
 The King did fend to chalmer for the Queine,
 As also for Meliades the scheine,
 And gart the knichts rehearse thair taill all new.
 630 Meliades a litill changit hew.
 The knichtis said, Full weill it may be kend,
 Zou is the Lady quhome to we ar fend.
 Anone upon thair kneis in humbill wyfe,
 Thay fat all thre befor Meliades,
 And said, Madam, heir we ar all, only
 Be the Reid Knight sent, flour of chevalrie,
 To zour bewtie our bodies for to geild,
 As we that vincuist beine with him in feild ;
 Ze doe with ws Lady as lykis zow best,
 640 Zouris we ar, demaine us as ze list.
 Sumthing abaisit was this guidlie wicht,
 Sirs, scho fayis, I thanke that gentill knight,
 And ze also are welcum for his saike,
 Zour priffon salbe soft I wndertaike ;
 Go and disport with my father the King,
 And dwell alfe long as beine to zour lyking ;
 Syne as ze came alfe frelie fall ze wend,
 For love of him that hes zow hither fend.
 The king refavit tham on fair maneir,
 And said to them, My tender frindis deir,
 650 Heir ar ze welcum with me to remain,
 Quhen that ze list ze may return again ;
 We will not hald zow heir as priffoneiris,
 Bot chereis zow as to zour stait effeiris.
 He gart rewaird tham wonder royallie.
 Meliades them treitit gentillie,

And gave them giftis; and thay anone
 On lawlie wayis hes taine thair leave to gone,
 And to thair cuntrie passit, quhair that thay
 660 Full vertuoullie leivit thair for ay.
 Clariodus hes sped him day and nicht,
 Whill of his fatheris castell he gat a fyght.
 Of his cuming his frindis was full blyth;
 Thay drest them to the mariage belyth,
 For on the morne thair tryft was for to ryde,
 The king of Spaine did on thair cuming byde.
 On morrow as the day it waxit licht,
 The court was on horse alreadie dicht;
 Fair Mandonet was lustilie beseine,
 670 In clothing as effeirit to ane queine,
 With croune of gold abune hir hairis bricht
 Of leming stainis casting pleafant licht;
 The Earle wes cloathit in full rich array,
 With him his Lady fresch as is the May:
 Bot all exceidit them Clariodus,
 In cloath of gold and stainis pretious.
 With nobill court, this royall rout furth raid,
 Whill thay com quhair this mightie King abaid.
 The nobill King gart two Duikes refave
 680 The young Lady, and hir to chappell have,
 Quhair scho was maryit with great solemnitie,
 And feastit with triumph and royaltie;
 Syn all the day did sing, dance and disport,
 The circumstance war long for to report.
 The king of Spaine he had ane sifter fair,
 Quhilk Donas height of collouris rycht preclaire;
 This lady oft behald Clariodus
 With frindlie cheir, and luikis amorus,

- Of manlie having and knichtlie governance
 690 Heiring the courte greatlie him advance,
 Quhilk it fa far into hir hart can finke,
 Whyll at the last of luif scho tuike a drinke ;
 So birning was hir heart with inwart fyre,
 For thrift of love, heat birning defyre,
 That scho wes vexit with the feveris quyte,
 Quhairof as now me list not to indyte.
 The day passit, the nicht sonne efter went,
 On morne the King gart cry ane tornament ;
 Ane hundreth knichts of Spangie war ordand,
 700 Aganis ane hundreth knichts of Estour land ;
 On Spaingie fyd was Leonet the knight,
 And Oliphere de Beaulieu bauld and wight,
 Sir Leyon Dormal, Sir Ame de Beaufort,
 Thair namis all it neids not to reporte :
 On Esturis half was Sir Clariodus,
 Sir Palexis baith wicht and chivalrus,
 Sir Amador de Bruiland rycht duchtie,
 Sir Gilgam de la Forrest rycht worthie,
 Sir Richard Maianis of Scottis natioun,
 710 With mony uther knichts of great renoun.
 Quhen they disjunit had was no delay,
 In knichtlie weidis thay doe thame felfs aray,
 And baith the fydis assemblit in the feild,
 With speir in hand, and coverit ower with scheild ;
 Againis the face of Phebus casting licht,
 In windois lay the lustie ladyis bricht,
 Duchefis, countefis and madanis to have fight,
 And eagit lordis that was mikle of might ;
 The King of Spaine, and the Earle Esture,
 720 And thame felfs ilk ane on ane courfour.

With trumpit found the tornament begane,
 Out throw the feild the knichtis feircely ran ;
 The rafchis of fpeiris did as the thunder rare,
 Lyke as the darding rumbling in the aire,
 The horfe feit dinnit with noyis full loud,
 Then all abune thame raife into ane cloud
 For fand and duft that thair up raife on loft,
 Of armit men the meiting was unfoft ;
 The fpeiris brake, the horfe togidder drave,
 730 The fcheildis frufchit and helmes all to clave ;
 The foirfaids knichts togidder did redound,
 Quhilk magrie thame thay fink unto the ground.
 To manis eare full terribill was the raird
 Of horfe and harneis rufching to the eard,
 The bairdit fteidis plunging on the greine,
 The awfull ftraiks of knichtis in thair teine,
 The clariounis found, the heraldis voice and cry,
 The cairfull echo galmering to the fky,
 Thefoming fteidis with fweit alfe quhyt as fnaw,
 740 With bludie fydis alfe foft as foull in fchaw ;
 Gois throw the preife, quhile that braith them ferve
 Thair is no mairbut do or fchame deferve.
 Clariodus with this git held him still,
 Whill Eftures folkis abak mauger thair will
 Constraint war ; and than he belyve
 With all his force amongs [them] hé could dryve ;
 All gois to grund befor his mightie fpeir,
 With birning mynd furth braiding as ane beir,
 As furious lyoun raiging ferce and fell,
 750 So fairis he of knichtheid floure and well ;
 He drave doune hors and knichts upon the greine,
 Was nane of Spainzie his ftraik that nicht fustine,

- They went abake richt fast befor his face,
 Whair ever he come they lift him rune a speace ;
 Throw quhom his fellowis curage tuike anone,
 And ay of Spainge schope abake to gone.
 So come thair wnwuarlie on Clariodus
 Ane Count of Spainge, bauld and chevalrus,
 Quhilk straike the bucles of his scheild in funder
 760 Richt frelie, and raif the hauberk wnder.
 His foure fellowis him drestit in his scheild,
 And fyne the Earle he fought out throw the feild,
 And strak him to the erd, baith horse and man ;
 Syne throw the feild efter his horse he ran,
 And reingeit him, and to the Earle him brocht,
 Saying to him, My Lord, I know gow nocht.
 Then leuch the Earle and said; Forfuith, Sir Knicht,
 Ze have me laid to sleip or it be nicht.
 Gude Sir, he said, or I to lugin went 770 Ze me wnarmit, contraire my intent.
 Among thamfelfis [thus] they can disporte ;
 The tornament war long for to report,
 Or all thair nobill deidis for to declair,
 Induiring quhile the fune wastwart did repaire
 [And] in his nocturne mantill did cheroude,
 The trumpits blew to the retreit full loud,
 And with their voice the heraldis cryit Ho ;
 And everie knicht did to his lugin go,
 And thame wnarmit in chalmeris haistilie,
 780 Araying thame againe full richlie
 In uther clothings, as did thame effeir ;
 Syne to the palice went to thair suppeir.
 Foure aigit knichts the King gart efter send,
 And foure heraldis that best armis kend,

And bade that on thair trewth it fould be schawd,
 Of tornament quha wan [maist] praise and laud.
 Thay answeir maid, and said, with voice on height,
 Thay have weill previt everie nobill knicht
 As men of deidis wondour chevalrus ;
 790 Bot all the praise we gif Clariodus.
 Rycht have ȝe jugit, fayis the nobill King,
 He hes the fairest knichtis begining
 That ever I saw, and maist chyvalrus curage,
 Hie God preserve him quhill he be in age.
 The heralds and the knights he gart pas
 Unto his sifter, the lustie fair Donas ;
 And bad that scho sum taikin fair fould fend,
 As he that hade the laude and the commend
 And [the] heigh praise of the tornament.
 800 And so thay did, and to the Lady went.
 Scho him hes fend, wroght full curiouselie,
 Ane plesant wompill, with stonis fet mightelie,
 Circulit and fet with subtile work of gold,
 That it ane guidlie fight was to behold.
 Thir Lordis, at commandement of the King,
 Ar passit to Clariodus the zing,
 Saying, The King hes understanding richt,
 That ȝouris beine the praise of everie knyght,
 That hes this day beine in the tornament ;
 810 Wherefore the Kingis sifter reverent,
 With uther ladyes, hes sent ȝow ane plesance,
 Off thair bewtie to have remembrance.
 Clariodus than changit hew alyte,
 And said, I thank my ladyes fair and quhyte ;
 Bot worthier knyghtis thair wer the praise to have,
 And eik moir dingne this plesance to reffave.

Throw the requeift of lordis that wer thair,
 Reffavit he hes the wompill ferlie fair ;
 And right anone about his arme it band,
 820 Thanking the King, right lowlie inclynand :
 He gart reward the heraldis richlie,
 With hie voicis they all did Larges cry.
 When fuppit hade the frefche Clariodus,
 The four auld knichtis, worthy and famous,
 With him to chalmer he tuik in companie,
 And gave to thame four clothingis of gold mightie.
 And to the Kingis chalmer went ifeir,
 Baith erle, lord, knycht and bacheleir,
 Difporting thame with ladyes of plesance,
 830 And with zoung virginis meik of countenance.
 The Kingis fifter fat with Clariodus,
 With humbill cheir, to whome fcho fpeikis thus ;
 Clariodus, It dois zow weill perteine,
 To marie with some guidlie ladie fcheine ;
 For whill ze are in this eflait, perfay
 Sir, ze be feikand aventuris ay.
 I am (quoth he) of littill availl or might,
 To have in mariage ony guidlie wight.
 Clariodus, fcho faid, full fuith they tell
 840 That faves ane man that praisis not him fell.
 The moir he beine to praisie with uther men ;
 Sir, be experience this of zow I ken :
 Thus fpeikand they of materis to and fro,
 Quhill it wes tyme to beddis for to go.
 Indurit long this feift with joy and play,
 Whill at the laft Earle Efture on a day,
 With all his court of lordis and ladyis fair,
 Thair leave hes taine, hameward to repaire :

Fair Mandonet remenit with the King.

850 [One geir did scarce compleit its revolving]
 Whill scho buir him ane sonne height Clariodus
 Efter his eime the gud Clariodus.
 Thay luifit ather uther tenderlie,
 Whom of moir not speike will I.

Erle Esture at his Lady leave hes taine,
 And toward Ingland passit is againe.

The way furth ryding with his companie,
 He met ane Squyer musing hevilie.
 The Earle demandit quhy he forie was.

860 My Lord, he said, this is the verie caus ;
 In the land of Galice, my native contrie,
 Thair enterit is, that hidious is to fie,
 Ane lyoun strong and hidious to behauld ;
 Thair is no living creature sa bald,
 That dar his will impunge or git resist ;
 He hes all [hail] devorit as he list,
 And wastit all the cuntrie up and doune ;
 Is nane so hardie dar make objectioun ;
 And I am feikand, that evill beine to get,

870 Ane knicht that dar his face againis him set
 And him distroy and vincuis with his brand,
 The quhilk, I traift, no man dare take on hand.
 Than said the Earle swiftlie, I am woe
 That sic ane nobill prince is vexit so.
 The Squyer tuike his leave, and hyne is went.
 Clariodus unto his taill tuik gud tent,
 And at his Father sonne he askit leave
 The strong lyoun in batell him to greive.
 His father is displeasit, and inschew

880 Dangeris thairin quhilk he nicht nocht eschew.

The uthar with sic instance him befought,
 That he him levit with ane dreidfull thocht.
 Clariodus was glaid in his intent,
 And with his fatheris blifling furth is went,
 Taking his leave at all the companie.
 He callit on Palexis secreitlie,
 And said, Deir Coufing, in Inland quhen ge wend,
 In humbill wayis ge fall doe me commend
 Unto my Lady, fair Meliades ;
 890 Unto hir syne present, in secreit wayis,
 This courche of plesance, faying to hir plaine,
 Scho wan it at the tornament in Spaine.
 Depairtit they than from uthar anone ;
 The Earle of Esture is to Inland gone,
 Whair he was weill reffavit with the King
 And all the court ; bot quhen they hard telling
 The perrellous passage of Clariodus,
 Then they war wofull, sad and dolorus.
 When Palexis saw tyme convenient,
 900 Unto the fair Meliades he went,
 Saying, Madame, Clariodus the knight
 Oft him commendis unto your beawtie bricht,
 And hes you sent this courtch of hie plesance,
 Of his service to be in remembrance ;
 And bad me [plane] thir wordis to you faine,
 You wan it at the tornament in Spaine.
 He tauld the laif furth into lang fermoune,
 How he was gaine to fight with the lyoun.
 And quhen his lady understode and knew
 910 The dreidfull passage that he did persew,
 Scho fell on grouse upon hir bed adoun
 With visage wan, and in a deidlie fwoune.

And quhen that scho owercam, scho gave a cry,
 Saying, O [wofull] Death I thé defy,
 What may thy cruell dairt doe me moir paine
 Nor have him with a cruell lyoun flaine,
 Whom I luif better nor I do my lyfe!
 Wha fall thé help, Clariodus, in stryfe,
 Or thé defend againis that felloun beast?
 920 Is this of luif the joy, is this the feast
 That I fall have for trewth and meinit no mise?
 Ah! fall I now forgoe my warld blife,
 That so we fould depairt, aleace, my knight!
 The trewthfullest in love, and gentillest wight,
 Thou was ane that in warld ever I knew;
 The companie of man for ever adew,
 Efter the fight of thé, Clariodus,
 That was so gentill and so gracious.
 Palexis was abaifit grittumlie,
 930 And mikill rewth had of this fair lady;
 He comfortit hir at all his power and micht,
 Saying, Madam, doe not gour self undicht,
 For, verelie I live in esperance
 Of his returne with joy and esperance;
 And gif men see gow taking sic pennance,
 Thay will ilke deime that is not trew perchance.
 Thus comfortit he this Lady in sum wayis,
 By sweittest wordis that he could devyfe.
 Clariodus and his fellow all sweith
 940 In land of Galice enterit is belyth,
 And tuike thair ludging in ane fair village
 Neir quhair this beif did the maift outrage;
 And as Phebus declynit in the west,
 Thay foupit them, and bounit fyn to rest.

The heavinis torch upryfing reid as fire,
 The birdis fang with courage and defyre,
 Up raife the mirrie lark with ftevin joyous,
 Up raife anone the fresch Clariodus,
 And him full gudlie drefsit in his weid ;
 950 He hard ane mefs, and glaidlie could him fpeid
 Whill he com neir quhair this beaft repairit ;
 Then to his feir his mynd [he] thus declairit,
 My frind, feine battell is bot aventure,
 And feine that none may be of fortoune fure,
 Gif heir I fterve be feat or deftinie,
 To frindis me commend for cheritie.
 With his fquyer, quha oft bad God him fpeid.
 He maid ane crofe upon him devotlie,
 960 Towardis this beift then paffit hardilie,
 Whilk was the ftrongeft lyoun and maift horibill
 That ever to manis fight was vifible ;
 His awfull cluikis was lang and fquare,
 Rycht fyd and felterit hang his lyart haire ;
 Scharp was his wapounis, and terribill to behald,
 His terribilnes cannot weil be tauld ;
 Reid was his eine, birnand as ane fyre,
 He raxit him, and, ramping in his ire,
 Quhen Clariodus did neir him aproch
 970 He rumbifchit whill rared everie roch,
 And lape upone him in ane rage, all woode,
 For he that day had gottine no bluide.
 Clariodus him kepit on his fpeir,
 The quhilke to him nicht do bot litill deire.
 The Knicht, that of his lyfe was in great doubt,
 Full nichtilie ftrak at the lyoun ftout ;

Bot this strong lyoun straike at Clariodus
 So feircelie, and so woundour furious,
 That he uneis nicht defend him still ;
 980 For with his cluikis, persung wounder fell,
 He rest from him dispitiouffie his scheild,
 And skatterit mailges wyd into the feild,
 And fair him woundit with his tuskis keine
 Whill that his bluid ran streimand in the greine.
 The peple stuide on hillis and on height,
 Beholding on the lyoun and the knight ;
 Sore war thair heartis quhan thay saw him bleid,
 Oft praying God him to suckour in neid.
 Hard was the batell, asper, woode and fell,
 990 So long induring that wounder was to tell.
 Thus faught they still whill it was neir the night ;
 Clariodus, him failgeing was the licht,
 And that his speir nicht him no thing availl,
 He drew his sword, and sharplie did affaill
 This dreidfull beist. And quhen the lyoun saw
 Him with his schort sword, he stuid the weill les aw,
 And lape at him lyke as he wald him ryfe.
 Clariodus than straike at him belyve
 Under the lymbé and upward in the thie,
 1000 Whair with his sword ane awfull wound maid lie.
 Quhen that this beist saw furth streiming his bluid,
 He felt him hurt, and ran as he war wod,
 And to the forrest swiftlie could he found,
 The sword with him still stikand in his wound.
 Then wonder wofull was Clariodus,
 Quhen with his sword [he] was departit thus ;
 And as he stuid and sadlie him bethocht,
 Whither [that] he fould follow him or nocht,

- So come ane Knicht richt lustie to behold,
 1010 And him in armis tenderlie did fold ;
 And Sir, he said, [ay] blifit be that day
 That ge war borne, fa may I [ever] fay ;
 Ze have delyverit me for ever more
 Of wofull torment, and evill woundis fore.
 Clariodus, quhen this ferlie can see,
 He was abaifit, and said, Quhat may this be ?
 The Knicht fayis, I fall gow tell or I gone ;
 Bot first gour woundis I will stanch anone.
 Alfweith wnarmit was Clariodus ;
 1020 And he with diverse herbis vertewus
 Stemit his woundis, and stintit the bleiding ;
 Syne said he thus, Sir knicht, but failgeing,
 My father was of Portingall ane knicht,
 And eke my mother was ane lady bricht :
 To Wairdis then was givin grite credence,
 Thairfor my mother gart with diligence
 The Waird Siferis wait quhen I was borne,
 To heir quhat waird thay fould lay me beforne ;
 Agreit thay war, and in melancholie
 1030 Thay wairdit me, gif ane knave chyld war I,
 That efter I was fevin geiris old
 To be transformit in ane lyoun bold,
 And so to be ay quhile the nobilleft knicht
 Into this warld under the funis licht
 Sould draw my blood in battell or in flour :
 I have, alleace, done evill abone meafoure,
 Bot now my fault most wickit and proterve
 All finifhit is ; quhairfor whill that I sterve,
 I falbe gouris, evin so Chryft me save.
 1040 The faireft castell in Portugall I have,

And greateſt lordſchip eik in that cuntrie,
 As it is myne, I geive it zow alſe frie ;
 Sir Porrus, in Portingal thay me call.
 I geive zow heir ane ring of gold royall ;
 I wald convoy zow throw the land glaidlie,
 Bot I will not cum upon horſe quhile I,
 For my trefpas, go pairt of pilgramage.
 Ather from uther paſſit his voyage.

The Squyer that was with Clariodus
 1050 Said unto him, My lord, it ſtandis thus ;
 I wald anone be knichtit of zour hand,
 I am ane nobill, ze fall underſtand,
 And Guy de la Riviere thay me call,
 Lord of that ilk my father is at all.
 Clariodus alſweith then maid him knight ;
 Syn on thair horſis muntit baith on heicht,
 And to the feitie went, quhair baith them met
 Full monie ane man of nicht thair at the get,
 Halfand him with triumph, laud and glorie,
 1060 Quhilk great joy he fand of his victorie,
 Unto his Innis dois him convoy ;
 Quhair that his hoſt reſavit him with joy,
 And had him unto ane chalmer him to reſt,
 [And] of his arming doing him deſt,
 As he that werie was with hard fighting,
 With grivous woundis that war fore zalking.
 For his hurting his hoſt was fore adreid,
 He cauſit him to ſup and go to bed.
 On morrow the new maid knight, Sir Gwy, gart wryte
 1070 Letters at lenth, in quhilk he gart indyte
 The maner of the battell, all at right,
 Betwixt the awfull lyoun and the knight,

And to the King of Galice hes thame fend.
 And quhen this thing was to his Hienes kend,
 Grit glaid he was, and all his court also ;
 He gart four knichtis furth them dres, and go
 Clariodus to bring to his presence.
 The knichtis passit with great diligence
 Unto the seitie, quhair they met Sir Guy
 1080 The new maid knicht, and thay full worthilie
 At him speirit quhair was Clariodus.
 And he againe to them did answeir thus,
 He is in his bed, he is git werilie,
 Dreidlie thairof ge awcht have none ferlie;
 For had ge seine him in the stour as I,
 Ge wald have littell wouderit thocht he ly :
 Bot I fall see if he awakis git,
 And syn anone zow answeir bring of it.
 He went belyve and tauld to him the cace,
 1090 How that four knichtis cumin for him was,
 Unto the Galice King him for to bring.
 Fra tyme that he had knowledge of this thing
 Anon he him dressit in his weid.
 Sir Guy full glaidlie for the knichtis geid,
 And tham allswyth brings into his presence.
 Thay helfit him all four with reverence,
 And schew to him, as ge have hard report,
 How that the nobill King did him exort
 To cum to him withoutin tarying.
 1100 He thaim refavit with great cherifching,
 Saying, I fall obey the King his will,
 And wouder glaidlie his bidding fall fulfill.
 Syn at his host he tuike his leave to wend,
 And sudanlie did on his horse affend,

- And raid furth to the Kingis palace richt,
 And from his horse anone can licht.
 The knichtis him convoyit to the King.
 The King wpraise and come to his meiting.
 Clariodus upon his kneis fat doune,
 1110 And courteslie did helpe his Hie Renoune.
 The King in armis hes him taine aloft,
 He thankit him baith heartfullie and oft
 For slauchter of the lyoun wode and fell ;
 Saying to him, Welcum of knichtheid well,
 That hes rescourfit my realme with hard fighting,
 And maid hes of my pepill ranfoming ;
 Therefor the third pairt of my realme heir I
 To zow and zouris do give perpetually.
 Clariodus inclynit to the King,
 1120 Thanking his Heenes into mikill thing ;
 Thus faying, Sir, ze do me honor more
 Nor I defervit ever or could ; quhairfore,
 To doe zow plesance God gif me grace,
 In this cuntrie or in sum uther place.
 The King went to his denner into hall,
 And on the forfaid foure knichtis gart call,
 And to ane chalmer Clariodus gart leid,
 For zit his woundis war both greine and reid ;
 He gart for leiches all the cuntrie fearch,
 1130 And brocht the best [that] men did of reherse,
 Quhilk schortlie hes taine him into their cuire ;
 He haillit him of his woundis haill and sure.
 And quhen the King was set to his denneir,
 Sir Gwy all haill declairit the manneir
 Betwix the lyoun and Clariodus
 Of the strong batell wod and furious.

- The King rycht greatlie wounderit at his tail,
 Sa did the lords all at the tabill haill.
 I leave the King thus sitting at his tabill.
- 1140 Clariodus with knichtis honorable
 Was servit in his chalmer with alkin thing
 That unto his estait was pertining.
 So come to him ane great chirurgiane,
 Be the Kings ordinance his hurts for to fane.
 This man in fapience was ane maister great ;
 It neidis not all things for to repeit,
 Bot finallie his woundis beine all feine,
 The herbe he fand that was laid on tham greine,
 Quhairof he espyit sonne the vertew,
- 1150 Sayand, the herbis kynd he weill knew ;
 He laid it on the wounds againe, but fabill,
 And said, it hes beine to gow profiteable ;
 I pray gow be of comfort gud and blyth,
 With Godis grace ge fall recover sweith,
 That ge may ryde, and on horse armis beir,
 And for gour lady breke alse great a speir
 As ge have donne in tornament befor ;
 Have nobill curage and be glaid thairfor :
 Thair still into his bede he gart him ly,
- 1160 And dynit thair with knichtis standing by :
 When he his woundis had anyntit all
 With pretious falves and balmes maist royall,
 Into his Innis into the tounc he went.
 Richt glaid [then] was the King in his intent,
 [That] he remainit in his companie,
 Clariodus, [the] flour of chevalrie.
 Quhen he had dynit, fra the buird he raise,
 And glaidlie to Clariodus he gais,

- Comfortit him with wordis tenderlie ;
 1170 And he againe him thankit courteslie.
 The King gart fend to chalmer for the Queine,
 And for hir dochter, and uther ladyis scheinie ;
 And thay ar cuming at his ordainance,
 Whome for to se it was ane great plesance.
 Clariodus hes maid great reverence
 Unto the Queine, so great of excellence,
 And wald have ryffine, bot the King wald nocht,
 So deir he had his bed with bargain bocht :
 Scho cherifit him, and did him great plesance,
 1180 His deidis doing greattumlie advance,
 And doune scho sat upon his bed fyde,
 And with him speiking thair did long abyde.
 Then said the King unto Clariodus,
 If it micht make zow mirrie and joyous,
 My dochter fall rycht glaidlie to zow sing :
 Quhairon he said, I pray zow ower all thing
 To sing ane song : the King did hir command ;
 And scho begane anon without demand,
 And with ane voice that plesant was to heir ;
 1190 Of quhois song Clariodus had gud cheir,
 So weill scho song it easit him of his noy.
 Clariodus said to the King, Ma foy,
 Zit hard I never sic finging to this day,
 Into na cuntrie, of sa zoung ane may ;
 For scho was zit bot sevin zeiris of age,
 Thocht nature had put hir in sic curage.
 Lang tyme remainit thay with Clariodus,
 To hold him out of thochtis langorus.
 On this ways daylie, schortlie to indyte,
 1200 Him visit King, Queine, and ladyis quhyte ;

And still with him remainit leichis gud,
 Whyll he was hail of woundis. To conclude,
 Now leave will I Clariodus heir still,
 And of ane uther mater speike I will.

- The four trew fellows of Schir Clariodus
 In heartis war all fad and dollorus
 For langour [that] thay could get na tyding
 Of him thay luifit atoure all eardlie thing.
 Palexis and his brother Amadoure,
 1210 Baith day and nicht oppressit with langour,
 Unto thair uther two brether hes thame drest,
 Richard de Maiance, Gilgeam de la Forrest,
 Saying to them, We are accordit thus,
 We go to pas and feike Clariodus,
 And ze two here to remaine with the King,
 Ay of the court to fend us sum tydeing.
 On this ways beine agreit finallie,
 Thir two ar passit to the King in hy,
 And askit leave to pas the said voyage.
 1220 Thay war grantit with ane blythe visage.
 Thay tuike thair leave anone at King and Queine,
 And at Meliades the lustie lady scheinie,
 Quha callit on Palexis secreitlie,
 Saying, Commend me oft and hertfullie
 Unto Clariodus, gif ze him find,
 And say, fike langour deidlie dois me bind,
 That gif I hear no tydingis haistilie,
 Than daith fall me devoure but remedie ;
 And in taikin ze fall bide him take
 1230 This heart of gold, quhilk is of culloure blake ;
 Bide him it cullour alfe quhyt with plesance,
 As it is blake with forrow and pennance.

- They tuike thair leave and to thair horfe they went,
 And speid them fast with travell diligent
 Whill thay had passit the boundis of England,
 And then frange cuntries and wyde thay fand,
 And ever efter Clariodus thay speir,
 Bot na wit gat thay of him far nor neir ;
 Then war thay wounder wobegone and fad,
 1240 Deiming fum mischance him happinnit had.
 When thay had fought him in mony far cuntrie,
 Thay happinit in ane wode with tries hie,
 Quhilk for to pas was strange and perrilus,
 Whair whyllume walkit feir knichtis antrus.
 Thay two enterit in at the forrest fyde,
 Whair sonne thay harde ane litill thame besyd
 Ane petious cry lamentabill to heir ;
 Then can Palexis at his fellow speir,
 Heir ge gone voice that beine rycht lamentable ?
 1250 Quhat ever it be, to ws it war meritabill
 To succour at our mycht gone creature.
 Then spurrit they with diligence and cure ;
 Then at the last thre knichtis they can sie,
 The quhilks, with hartis full of crueltie,
 Ane naikit man hade bunde rycht fellounlie,
 Wha ceiffit never mercie for to cry.
 Palexis said, Fair Sirs, be gour leave,
 That man ge do murther and mischeve ;
 It is agains the ordour of knichtheid
 1260 To do fa cruell and fa foule a deid.
 Thay said anone, The thing that we doe heir
 Ze can it not remeid on na maneir.
 Quoth Amadour, Ze fall him leave with us,
 Or him defend with deidis chevalrus.

- Thir knichtis thre withouttin wordis mo
 Rycht cruellie fet on the brether two.
 Palexis hes the formist knicht borne doune,
 For he was wicht and mekill of renoune,
 And with the fall his kne baine brake in two.
 1270 Then the foure knichtis can togider go,
 And two for two thay fought full fellounlie,
 And fraike at uthar wonder cruellie :
 Bot lang the battell might not thus induire,
 For Sir Palexis and worthie Amadure
 War hardie knichts, and wounder strong in feild
 As ony micht be helmed wnder scheild ;
 Thir knichtis two behuifit for to die
 Incontinent, or for to goldin be ;
 And quhen they vincuft beine aluterlie,
 1280 Thay askit mercie wonder petiouflic.
 Palexis said, Than or we grant zow grace,
 Ze mon all thre make aith into this place,
 That our command ze trewlie fall fulfill
 [In] what so ever we ordane zow till.
 Thay grantit this, and swore as thay than said ;
 And than anon thir [twa] brether them bade
 In Ingland pas to Philipon the King,
 And unto him zeild but tarying ;
 And say that Amadur and Palexis
 1290 Zow sent unto his excellent nobilnes,
 Declairing him without dissimulance
 Of this mater all hail the circumstance.
 Thay grantit to this ordinance all thrie.
 The bundine knicht then gart thay loufit be,
 And gart them also ask him forgivenes,
 For he was knicht of full great worthienes :

And bad ilk knicht thay fould thair namis schaw ;
 Ane of them faid, If it lykis zow for to knaw,
 Sir Gault de le Spyne I am but circumstance,
 1300 My fellow eike height Ame de Pleafans,
 Cardrois de la Refse they call zon woundit knicht ;
 In Provence cuntrie beine my dwelling rycht,
 My fellow is of Flanders natioun,
 The hurt knicht is of Pollis regioun ;
 Ilk ane of ws come honour to conqueir,
 And preffoners all caught as ze fall heir :
 Within ane myle fra hyne, in ane castell,
 Dwellis ane knicht wounderfullie cruell,
 Quhilke is The felloun callit but petie ;
 1310 Ane wyfe he had of wounderfull beawtie ;
 So com ane knicht by rydand upon cace,
 And reveft hes the Lady fair of face ;
 Synfyne all knichtis cumand throw his land
 He dois them vinqwife with his [mighty] hand,
 And garris them fweir to do ficlyke as he
 To uther knichts cuming in his cuntrie,
 His lady traifing for to have againe ;
 We thre hapinnit with him to be taine,
 Quhairfor this knicht we tuike in this maneir
 1320 To fave our aithes, traift weill this is no weir ;
 Men callis him The felloun but petie,
 For fen his Ledie revifcht was, never he
 Did grace nor petie to no creatoure ;
 And he is wicht and hardie over meafour ;
 He laikis no thing langing to knichtheid,
 Saif he is only crwell of his deid.
 Ather from uther can depairt anone ;
 Syn thir thrie knichtis ar to Ingland gone.

- When they war weill recoverit of thair fore,
 1330 To Philipone the King they went but more ;
 [And], as they heicht, they did them to him geild,
 Schawing how they owercumin war in feild
 Be Palexis and Amadour in feir :
 So furth to him declairing the maneir,
 The King hes them receivit tenderlie,
 Saying thir wordis to thame standing by,
 More am I holding to Sir Clariodus
 And to his coufings bauld and chevalrus
 In conqueis of my honour and renoune
 1340 Nor all the knichtis of my regioun.
 He thame feistit and treitit nobillie,
 And thame rewairdit wounder michtilie.
 Thay tuike thair leave, and passit to thair land,
 Quhen so they hade compleitit thair command.
 Palexis now and Amadur also
 War scant two mylis the Kingis castell fro
 Of Galice, quhair Clariodus beine git,
 For so the cuntrie maid thame for to wite.
 Thay ludgit in ane toune that heich was wallit,
 1350 And Joyous to name it was callit.
 Thair host them tauld how that Clariodus
 Was interteinit in that cuntrie famous,
 And how he vinqiift had the lyoun strong,
 With all the proces and circumstancis long ;
 Whair of thay war rycht glaid in thair intent.
 Airlie in morrow thay in palice went,
 Whair they met with Sir Guy the new maid knight.
 He did them glaidlie welcum at his micht.
 From them he passit to Clariodus
 1360 That was in chalmer, faying to him thus,

Two knichtis at the get ar lichtit doune,
 Rich woundour fair and gudlie of fashoun ;
 To speike with gow ar thair defyris maist.
 Clariodus than sped him furth in haist,
 Rycht woundour glaid and joyous of his cheir,
 For weill he trowit thay war his cuffings deir.
 When he tham saw, he did tham imbrace,
 And tenderlie tham kissit in that place.
 Thair cuming than went to the Kingis eare,
 1370 Whairof he had ane joy, commixt with feare
 That thay from him fould fetch Clariodus,
 Whilk in his eyes semit so gracious
 That he him lovit evin as his awin lyfe.
 For the two knichtis he sent belyve ;
 And quhen thay war brocht to his presence,
 Thay salust him with kinglie reverence,
 And he resavit tham in fair maneir,
 Saying, Welcum ge ar my frindis deir ;
 Sumthing I am adread into my heart,
 1380 That ge from me Clariodus depairt ;
 And if it be the caus of gour cuming,
 Ge fall my heart wnglaid in mikill thing ;
 Zit glaidlie for his saik I fould gow love,
 That this regioun hes brocht from sik unrove ;
 His frinds fall ever welcum be to me
 So long as I am King of this cuntrie.
 The lordis them receavit all about,
 Knights, Ladyis and all the lustie rout.
 Clariodus them tuike in secreit wayis,
 1390 And speirit all the maner and the gyfe
 Of all the court of Ingland how it stude,
 And of Meliades baith fair and gude ;

And thay at schort hes tauld him [all] the cace,
 Bot I no thing rehearse will in this place
 Of hir luif taikin, quhilk I let owergone.
 The King unto his denner went anone ;
 And after denner to the feildis went
 All throw ane meid of flouris redolent ;
 Enlange ane river maid thay thair walking,
 1400 Whair fum did play and uther fum did fing,
 Sum rowit furth on galayis on the fluide,
 Sum beholding on the feildis stude,
 Sum with his fellow raillit and maid sport,
 In joy and blisse was all the lustie fort.
 The King hes gart Clariodus with him go,
 Sir Palexis and Amadour also,
 And with his knichtis caufit them to gone
 To pastyme, and to putting of the stone :
 Bot thay all uthar knichtis did exceid,
 1410 To quhilke the King soberlie tuike heid ;
 He all confiderit and held him still,
 Whais great wisdome dantit ay his will.
 Thir brether greatlie commendit of the King,
 As he them thocht lyke in everie thing
 Unto thair Eam, Clariodus the gud ;
 It schew full weill that thay war of a blude.
 Quhen thay had lang disportit in the meid,
 The King tuike Sir Clariodus and geid
 Unto the palice, faying to him thus,
 1420 Is it zour will, my freind Clariodus,
 That zour two cusings go and se the Queine,
 And my dochter, that zoung of geiris beine ?
 Sir, said the Knight, as lykis to zour Grace.
 Then enterit they anon wnto the place,

And to the Queinis prefence fonne thay geid,
 And fcho, of ladyes, full of womanheid,
 Adrefit hir and came in thair prefence,
 Whilke mirrour was of bewtie and clemence ;
 With hir was Cader hir zoung dochter fcheine,
 1430 In zeuth upryfing wounder fair to feine.
 Unto the nobill princes faid the King,
 Take thir two knichtis into commoning,
 That new beine cuming, and fchort them with plefance.
 And fcho obeyit with humbill reverence.
 With uther knichts zoung ladyis did difport ;
 To tell the fafchioun it war lang to report.
 Still at thair pleafance they remainit fo
 Whill tyme was cum fupper to go to.
 When they had fouppit and maid rycht merrie cheir
 1440 They them difportit on this fame maneir.
 When tyme was cum to beddis for to gone,
 Then everie man went to his bed anone.
 Four knichtis did Clariodus convoy
 Unto his chalmer, quhair maid was mekill joy,
 And courfis came of meitis dalicat,
 Of michtie wyne, and fpycis aureat.
 Lang quhan they feiftit had in this maneir,
 To bed they went, baith knicht and baicheleir.
 Devoydit was the chalmer fuddenly,
 1450 Clariodus and his coufings him by ;
 To bed is went all fecreit bot them thre ;
 Of diverfe thingis fpeirit at them he,
 And thay him anwerit as he did inquire.
 Then faid Clariodus, My freindis deir,
 I have beine thinkand on zour mariagis,
 Ze fall that be with great lynagis ;

- Amadur, ze fall have in wadding
 The lustie fister of the Spanisch King
 Of Spaingie land with zow to go to bed ;
 1460 And Palexis, my coufing, ze fall wed
 The King of Galice dochter to zour wyfe;
 Be now content or never in zour lyfe,
 It is not lang fen ze hir saw, trow I.
 Weill, Sir, quoth they, ze sport zow merrily,
 What now fay ze of zour awin wadding.
 Quod he, That fall I efterwart inbring
 When ze beine waddit and to honour brocht ;
 Zow to displeafe this mater speik I nocht,
 And if thairto zour self be nocht content,
 1470 Na mair thairof to speike I me assent.
 Be this Amador fell found on sleip,
 The quhilk Palexis persavit and tuike keipe,
 And this unto Clariodus he said,
 Meliades, that fresch lustie zoung maid,
 As ze me bad, I gave the [hie] plesance,
 Declairing hir, with everie circumstance,
 The maner haill and caus of zour byding ;
 Bot quhen scho wist that it was futhfast thing,
 That to the lyoun ze fould geive battell,
 1480 Hir bricht cullour sonne waxit wan and pail ;
 Scho founit deidlie, that peitie was to see,
 In warld nicht no ladie more dolour drie :
 It war ower lang to tell zow all the cace,
 How scho with teiris hir beawtie did deface ;
 Receave this harte of gold inamellit blake,
 Scho bad zow in rememberance it take,
 And it to make alse quhyt with conforting
 As it is blake with sorrow and weiping.

- The heart recevit has Clariodus,
 1490 And kiffit it weill oft, faying thus,
 Maist fair of wichtis, fairest to praife,
 Naught may my wits all inewgh fuffais
 Your Ladyschipe to thanke with humbilnes
 According to your trewth and gentilnes ;
 When fall I doe to you so great plesance,
 As ye for me have sufferit oft pennance ?
 Meliades, wald God now [that] ye wift
 That ardant heat, langour and birning thrift
 On me so fore for langing for your presence,
 1500 Quhilke beine my warldis joy and sufficence.
 He thus regrating, Palexis fleipit found.
 When Phebus bricht had rune his course around,
 And schew his face into the orient.
 Clariodus he raife, and furth he went
 Unto the King, faying on this maneir,
 My coufingnis as ye se ar cum heir
 For me, that heir hes maid lang sojorning ;
 Now grant me leave to pas unto the King,
 Whilk speciallic thir knichts hes for me fend.
 1510 Woe was the King quhen verilie he kend,
 That he no longer with him wald abyde ;
 Then said he thus, Seing it man so betyd
 That ye from us neidis mone depairt,
 I you beseeke and pray with all my hart
 That ye wald grant at my defyre ane thing.
 Clariodus said anon to the King,
 Ye fall me no tyme pray, bot ay command,
 And I thairto obey fall but demand.
 The King said thus, Clariodus,
 1520 Advyse what is best and most pretious

- In my realem, and takit I zow pray ;
 For unto zowit falbe readie ay.
 Then, Sir, said he, feing it be zour pleafance,
 That I fall afke efter zour ordinance,
 Heir is Palexis, my freind and my coufing,
 Whom as myfelf I luif but fainzeing,
 I afke zour doughter to him in mariage,
 If that ze wald difdaine with our linage
 For to allay of zour great gentilnes ;
 1530 And I ane thing fall height zow heir dreidles,
 That he falbe, within ane zeiris fpace,
 Ane crounit king, throw help of Godis grace.
 Blyth was the King of thir wordis, and said,
 Clariodus, I hald me weill apayed.
 This Knicht anone fat doune upon his kne,
 And thankit him with great humilitie.
 The King anone has gart be brocht the Queine,
 And fair Cadar, his luftie dochter fcheine.
 Clariodus hes fent for Palexis.
 1540 When Amadur and he cummand was,
 The King said to his dochter on this ways,
 Heir ar thrie knichtis mikill for to praife,
 With ane of them if ze fould waddit be,
 Whom wald ze chofe, fay on, dochter, let fee.
 Thus unto hir he said in his bourding.
 And fcho to him hes fo maid anfwearing ;
 Of thir knichtis my chofe if I fould have,
 Clariodus I chufe above the leave,
 [Of knichtis beft, fic maik wold I like well.]
 1550 Then luich the King, and said, Its na mervell
 Suppofe ane elder woman had it said,
 When ze, dochter, that beine fo zoung ane maid,

Hes chofen him to be gour paramour.

Clariodus than changit his cullour.

Now in this mater to be schort,

Seing lang it war the proces to report,

The King with all his lordis beine advyfit;

[It was a thing quhilk gretumly they pryfit]

That Palexis the fresch and nobill knight

1560 Sould wad anon the Kingis dochter bricht;

And efter this ane bischop gar thay bring,

And handfast them but langer tarying.

Clariodus gave hir ane rich coller

With gold all fet and michtie stonis deir,

Togidder with ane diamond bricht,

At his depairting, as ane gentill knight;

The officeris and servants in the hall.

He gave rewardis, and monie giftis royall.

The new maid Knicht forget he nocht,

1570 Ane cloath of gold full curioullie wrocht

He gave to him, and uther giftis mo.

At King and Queine they tuike thair leave to go,

And of the court at everie lord and knight;

Syn towards England tuike thair gaitis rycht

With great triumph, honour and commend.

So of this first Buike I make ane end.

THE SECOND BUIK
CLARIODUS.

THIR Knights ryding towardis their contrie,
Out of Ingland quhen thay war jornayis thrie
Thay enterit in ane vaill lustie and greine,
Throw quhilk thair ran ane feimlie river scheinie ;
On it was maid ane brig with pilleris wight,
Whair that on bread ane man nicht pas furth right,
By quhilk to thame was no readie way ;
And on the brig alfe sonne as enterit thay,
Ane armit Knicht thay met, with speir in hand,
10 Sayand to them, Fair Siris ge mone stand,
Or ge ower pas ge fall have mair adoe.
Soberlie said Clariodus him to,
What beine the caus that ge wald stop our way ?
Then said the Knicht, I fall it to gow fay ;
Ane of gow thre rycht heir man gif me feild,
And if that I him vinquise under scheid,
Incontinent ane uthar I fall fay,
Or ower the brig ge fal pas on na way.

- If that it may na uthar wayis be,
 20 Then, said Clariodus, cum on thy way to me.
 Togidder joynis thir knightis of renowne,
 Thair meiting was baith hard and felloun,
 And on thair steidis them togidder bair ;
 Thair speiris flew in peiffis in the air ;
 Thair bodies met with fik ane michtie force,
 Quhilk to the eard this Knicht sent man and horle.
 Clariodus git held his sadill still,
 The uther raise with force and eiger will.
 Clariodus discendit from his steid,
 30 And to this Knicht hardilie he geid.
 They met with awfull fwordis scharpe of steill,
 Full cruellie as can thair heidis feill ;
 They smote at uther as bairis wode and keine,
 Or as twa rampand lyounis in thair teine,
 That in thair breifts furious was and wode ;
 Endlang thair fydis streimit doune the blude ;
 The rivar dymit with thair dints in ire ;
 Heich from thair helmis the sparkis flew of fyre.
 Full awfull war thir knichtis to behold,
 40 With irefull fraikis quhilk nicht not be told ;
 Ather from uther feirclie dang the scheild,
 As alfe the mailgeis scatterit in the feild ;
 They hew throw helme, throw habergeone and plait,
 Whill that thair fwordis with bluid war wat.
 Palexis than and Amadur also
 Was for thair Eame in heartis wounder woe,
 Beholding on the michtie campioun,
 Whilk was in fight alfe feirce as ane lyoun,
 Full mikill of bodie and alfe of height,
 50 With gyen corpis wounder strong and wicht.

So cruell battell had they never feine,
 They feamit as two dragounis wode and keine ;
 Thay wint thair had not beine sic fighting fell
 Bot gif it had beine betwix twa feinds of hell.
 This asper batell wode and wehement
 Wox tham betwine fo scharpe and violent,
 That long it might not indure nor left,
 On ather fyd behuifit them to rest ;
 Baith akit was thair armis and thair handis,
 60 Thay stand abake and leanit them on thair brandis,
 And up thay put thair visouris from thair face
 The air to take, and braith for to purchas.
 When they had lang tyme them reposit thus,
 We ar weill refit, said Clariodus,
 Now let us enter new to our combat.
 The uther said, Be him that me creat,
 Thow may weill thinke it is aneuch to thé,
 It is ane fill and fum pairt mair to me ;
 Zit had I never half sa mikill adoe ;
 70 I thé beseike that first thow schaw me to
 Thy name, that I aske for thy knichtheid,
 Againe or we to new battell proceid ;
 This aske I only for thy nobilnes.
 The uther said, That dar I doe doubtles,
 Clariodus to name men dois me call.
 The Knight then inclynit law withall,
 And fra his head his hewmund did unplace,
 And be the point his sword, with humbill face,
 He tuike, and to Clariodus he geid,
 80 Sayand, O flour of armis and of knichtheid,
 To thé I geild me as to the worthiest Knight
 Of all this warld, and to the gentilest wicht ;

And unto him anone his sword he gave,
 And said, My lord Clariodus, relave
 My manreid for now and ever mair ;
 I knew zow not, quhilk me repentis fair.
 Clariodus him receaves sweitlie
 Into his armis, quha thankis him heartfullie.
 This Knicht him askit forgiveines
 90 That he of folie was sa rackles,
 To fight with him quha rather he fould serve ;
 Sayand, My lord, greate blame I do deserve ;
 I have this long tyme levit wickitlie,
 Of my trespas I ask God mercie ;
 For throw my cruell lyfe and tyrannie,
 Men callis me The Felloun but peitie,
 For Joyfa Ramose they war wount me to call,
 The caus of this I fall zow tell at all.
 He schew him furth the maner les and more
 100 Of his lady as ze have hard before,
 Fra him how scho was revifchit be ane knicht.
 Clariodus all wnderftud at ryght,
 Palexis had tauld him ever ilke deale.
 He said, Sir Knicht, the caus I know full weil,
 It was me tauld or this quhair that I raid ;
 Thairfor forget it, fen thair is no remeid
 For to make cair for it or git regrate,
 Alse fair ane lady ze may have I waite.
 He said, Sir, full suith it is that ze fay ;
 110 Bot of zour gentilnes I zow pray
 To go with me this nicht to my ludging,
 For it is now rycht lait in the evining,
 And far alse to ane uthar harberie place.
 Clariodus him glaidlie grauntit hes.

Now togidder thir Knichtis went in feir
 Unto this Lordis castell fchyning cleir,
 With courious kirnellis and goldin chainis bricht.
 [When the varlotis faw The Felloun knight]
 Then doune they let the draw brig fall anone;
 120 And thay glaidlie ar to the castell gone,
 Whair that with mikle myrrines and joy
 The Knichtis to ane chalmer thay convoy,
 Whilk was arayit wounder pretiousslie :
 With gold, and filk and arais full michtie.
 When that the supper was alredie dicht,
 And all to hall went, this faid Knicht :
 Unto Clariodus faid in this maneir,
 Ten priffoneris I have with me heir,
 Whilk for gour faik full glaidlie falbe fred ;
 130 And fyn he gart them to the hall be led,
 And bad them fay, Clariodus that he
 Them loufit out of priffoun ranfoune fre ;
 And fyne anone, dispuilgeit of his hate,
 Befor thir priffoneris on kneis fate,
 And askit thame forgivennes everie knight,
 Saying, he fould amend at all his micht.
 Thir wordis he faid fo lamentabill,
 The knichtis wox in heartis merciabill,
 And him forgave with tender imbracing.
 140 Clariodus, with rewth to fe this thing,
 The teiris ower his cheikis haillit doun,
 So pitious was thair meitting and fermoune.
 When this was done, they all to supper went
 Of nobill cheir, quhair nought was indigent ;
 Full royallie thay fure with abundance
 Of everie thing that might do them plesance.

In mides of this supper raise this Knicht,
 Whilke lord was of this place, and passit rycht
 Unto ane clofit, and with him brocht againe
 150 Rose water cleir, doing thir wordis saine,
 I am callit The Felloun but pitie,
 For all men speikis of my crueltie ;
 Now think I to leive so vertouflic,
 That my gud word fall go alsé opinlie :
 Thairfor if it nicht please your Lordschipis all,
 From thence Le Fortoun de Amure ge me call,
 And I forever renunce all fellonie.
 Clariodus weill vnderstud the quhy
 That he the water brocht in coup of gold,
 160 With ane new name that he be baptifit wold ;
 Whairfor the coup he held with hand on height,
 And let the water fall upon the Knicht,
 Sayand, Le Fortoun de Amouris I thé call ;
 Fra laughter then ilk ane could neer deval ;
 Ane noyis up raise that mirrie was to heir,
 When he was baptifit on this maneir.
 When they had foupit with mirrines and joy,
 Clariodus to chalmer thay did convoy
 And his two coufingis, quhilk to bed ar gone
 170 Whill bricht Phebus on morrow com anone.
 Rycht as Clariodus anone up rose,
 Le Fortoun de Amouris to his chalmer gois,
 And with him brocht baith harneis, scheild and speir,
 And all that ganit to ane knicht to weir,
 And tham presentit to Clariodus,
 First heling him, than saying to him thus,
 Sir, brokin ar your harnes in sum part,
 Quhairfor I zow beseike with all my heart

- That ze wald weir this harnes for my saike.
 180 He thankit him, and did the harnes taikē,
 And him inarmit in it lustilie.
 And eike this Fortoun de Amouris nobillie
 The ten Knichtis rewairdit on this wyfe
 With ten fair harneiffis gudlie to devyfe,
 And ten steidis the best in that cuntrie.
 When thay rewairdit war on this degrie,
 Thay thankit him, and tuike thair leave to wend.
 Clariodus did on his horfe ascend
 Whill it was neir awcht houris in the day,
 190 Fortoun de Amouris convoyit him away.
 The way depairtit of thir Knichtis than,
 Thay tuike thair leave at uther everilke man.
 Ane reale rob gave Sir Clariodus
 To Fortoun de Amouris quhen they pairtit thus.
 Ather to uther did heartlie them commend,
 Imbraicing uther, then fra uther wend.
 And the ten Knichtis on this same maneir,
 Thair leave hes taine, [and] hamwart went ifeir.
 Clariodus, thus furth the way ryding,
 200 Ane messinger come in his [gait] meitting
 From fair Meliades his lady deir,
 Whilk was hir awin varlat Bonvaleir.
 He was rejosit thairof greatumlie,
 And him refavit wounder tenderlie.
 When he had speirit all things as he list,
 He tuike hir letteris and for joy tham kist;
 And bad his coungis ryd befor sumthing,
 Whill he advyfit war with hir wryting.
 " My best belovit Knicht, and joy onlie,
 210 To gow I me commend rycht heartfullie

Abone all uther eardlie creature.
 As I that lang thinkis abone measure,
 I have sent zow this secreit messinger
 And varlot of my chalmer Bonvaleir
 In proper perfoun with zow to speik, [and] se
 If ze be blyth, that he may say to me
 That he zow saw, and with zour self inspak,
 In mikill thing quhilk will me glaider make.
 Send wurd with him, my Knicht, I zow beseike,
 220 Of zour estait, and of zour weilfair eike.
 I bad Palexis me to zow commend,
 And eike with him ane writting wald have send
 War not that alse awtentike beine his saw
 As ony dyt in letter, as ze knaw.
 And for to schaw to zow of my estait,
 Ze have my hart all hail gouris, God wait.
 Ze left me with no weilfair nor plesance,
 Bot cruell fiching, sorrow and pennance:
 Quhairfor ane thousand tymes I zow pray,
 230 To visit me in all the heast ze may;
 For I may never be in joy perfite
 Whill I zow se, the grund of my delyt.
 Whairfor, my Knicht and only paramour,
 I have zow sent ane ballat of amour,
 Beseiking zow that freschlie for my faike
 Ze hald it, feing I did it make.
 No more as now, bot God that is above
 Keip zow, my Knicht, quhom ower all I love."
 When this ballet was red be Sir Clariodus,
 240 He was in heart richt bliffull and joyous;
 He cloffit it, and laid it nixt his heart
 Under his arme, rejoyfing him inwart;

- Syne haiftlie efter his fellowis raid,
 Calling to him Bonvaleir, and thus said,
 [Of England Court the tydingis tell. And than]
 Bonvaleir firft at the King began,
 Syne at the Queine, and tauld that thay war glaid,
 And fyne at fair Meliades the maide ;
 Syne of the Court he tauld of everie ftait.
- 250 Be they had fpeirit all it waxit lait ;
 And faft thay raid quhile they com to the plane
 Quhair they faw ftand ane fair horfe it alleane
 Neir by ane wode, quhair, throw the way richt,
 Thay raid full faft, for cumand was the nicht ;
 Whair founne thay hard into the wode tham by
 Ane cairfull voice, lyke to ane manis cry :
 Unto the voice they fped them haiftily,
 Whair that they faw ane man bundin ly ;
 Twa litill duerffis was fitting him neir,
- 260 Upon his breift thair fat ane lady cleir
 With cruell feir, and in hir hand ane knyfe,
 Saying, Falfc trator, thow fall lofe thy lyfe ;
 Heir fall thou fterve all only of my hand,
 Me may thou not remeid nor [git] gainftand ;
 Fals theif, I fall me wraike on thé full weill,
 This knyfis poynt thy dowbill heart fall feill,
 And cike I fall thy heart heir carve in two,
 Never me thow fall begyle nor git no mo.
 Clariodus difcendit from his horfe rycht thair,
- 270 Seing this cruell Lady, fa merciles fair ;
 He faid, Madame, do never that felloun deid,
 Have rewth and pitie for gour womanheid ;
 With that he tuike hir in his armis two,
 And to hir fpake fare monie wirdis mo.

This Lady, birning in hir crueltie,
 With tygir mynd, and attrie face to fe,
 Full tyrranlie as feindlie coccatrice,
 Unto the Knicht scho answeirit on this wyfe,
 Pas on, and intromet zow not with me,
 280 For at zour counfall think I never to be,
 This trator falbe dead, or ellis I.
 He said, Have patience, O my fair Ladie,
 And that ze ar ane woman have in mynd,
 And never to ane man be so unkynde
 As him to slay, doing zour self defame,
 Bring everlasting reproch to zour name.
 Scho said, I winit ze had beine ane Knicht,
 And ze ane preacher ar becum in richt ;
 So furth and in sum paroch church go teache,
 290 For heir it helpis zow no thing to fleich,
 He falbe deid, or I myself fall slay.
 And quhen Clariodus hard hir so fay,
 For lawghter uneis nicht [himself] conteine,
 For scho was as ane lyoun alse keine ;
 And said, Madam, this tyme for my faike
 Ze falbe gracious ; I undertaike,
 Gif he hes faillit, he fall to zow amend,
 And his offence war to me maid kend.
 Sir, scho said, I am this Knichtis wyfe,
 300 Whom to I have beine trew in all my lyfe,
 And him I have taine in adulterie
 As false tratour with ane far worse nor I ;
 For scho is nothing in comparifoun
 To me, nether in beawtie nor renoune ;
 Think ze not this ane thing impertinat,
 That this false tratour, theif and renegat,

- Defaice fould [thus] ane lady as am I,
 Quhilk am mair nobill of genealogie
 Nor he, or ony of his parentille ?
 310 Think ge not deid he hes defervit weill ?
 Clariodus began to fmyll a litt,
 And said, Lady, in him lysis all the wyt ;
 Bot git for worschip of your womanheid,
 Ge fall have mercie heir of his misdeid ;
 And in tyme cuming, if he to you offend,
 Mentaine I fall your quarrel and defend.
 So with fair wordis and with humbilnes,
 Relaxit he this Knicht that bundin wes,
 And tham agreit, schortlie for to say,
 320 Syne wald his leave have taine and went his way ;
 Bot thay him prayit that nicht to remaine
 With tham, quhilke he grantit, the futh to faine.
 This Knicht lape on behind Clariodus,
 Him gyding hamwart, myrrie and joyous
 That so had skaipit betuix the bow and string.
 Clariodus said, How befell this thing,
 That ge war with this Lady bundin so ?
 The trewth, he said, I fall not hyd you fro ;
 Scho fand me with ane woman in quyet,
 330 And secreit in hir heart it buire full great,
 And never schew me ane luike of displifance
 Whill in the wood it happinit thus perchance
 Me to unarme me, and ly doune to fleipe ;
 To quhilk scho and you dwerfis tuike [gude] keip,
 And on me semblit fleiping as I lay,
 And band me thus, the fuith if I you say ;
 And had not beine ge come in this cace,
 I had bein deid, but mercie or but grace :

Whairfor not fufficis my wittis all,
 340 Gow for to thanke ; bot heir heicht I fall,
 Jouris to be for terme of all my lyfe,
 That hes me fuccurit from my cruell wyfe.
 So raid thay furth unto the Knichts palace,
 Wher they recevit war with great folace ;
 Anone they foupit and maid rycht myrrie cheir,
 And fyne to bedis went they all in feir.
 Clariodus lay in bed him alone,
 And quhen his coufingis fleiping war, anone
 He callit Bonvaleir, and did him fay,
 350 Go fetch ge me ane instrument to play
 Fra gone ladie ; furth went this Bonvaleir,
 Whilk hes him brocht ane herp with stringis feir ;
 Inke and paper he gart him bring alfo,
 And fyne commandit him to bed to go,
 Saying, he had to do fum biffines.
 He paffit furth quhen all men fleiping was,
 And enterit in ane luftie garth of flouris,
 And tuike his Ladyis ballet of amouris,
 And fet it on ane note plefant and richt fweit ;
 360 And quhen it was all finifchit and compleit,
 He fang it with the harpe rycht myrrillie,
 To heir whilk was ane joyous melodie :
 When this was doune he begane to wryte,
 Unto his ladie as followis the indyt.
 “ LODSTAR of love, and lampe of luftieheid,
 Bloffome of beautie, and rofe of gudliheid,
 Illuftrar lillie, and leime of my delyt,
 To gow, the faireft flour of collour quhyt,
 I me commend ane hundreth thousand fyis,
 370 Whom in my daith my lyfe and comfort lyis ;

Gow thanking ofter nor I can heir report,
 Of your fresch ballat of plesance and comfort,
 Of your tender wryting so winder sweit,
 Whilke for to heir rejosis all my spreit.
 Amadure and Palexis baith ifeir
 Into the court I fend with Bonvaleir,
 And with no wicht I will discoverit be,
 My heartis Lady, whill that I gow se:
 And speciallie, Madam, I gow requyre,
 380 If ge will doe ocht for my desyre,
 The postrum of your garth ge gar unclose ;
 To be thair this nicht is my purpose,
 The tent hour withouttin ony dread,
 To speike at lafour with your Ladyheid,
 Whom God in gud prosperitie conferve,
 And in honour quhidder I leif or sterve."

When endit hade Clariodus this thing,
 To bed he geid withouttin tarying.
 At morne he hard ane mese with gud intent ;
 390 Syn to the lord that awcht the paleice he went,
 And quyetlie thir wirdis said him to,
 For secreit materis that I have adoe,
 I wald ane chalmer of gow borrow heir,
 Whill that my bissines compleitit ware.
 The Lord answeirit and said, Not ane only,
 Bot all my chalmers, house and harberie,
 Or then I war wyld, wode, or out of mynd,
 Confiddering ge have beine to me sa kynd.
 He thankit him ; syne to his chalmer went,
 400 Saying to thame, Loe this is my intent,
 To pas to Denmark I have maid ane vow,
 The caus quhair of I will not schaw as now,

- Perchance heirefter ze may have witting.
 Ze two fall pas in Ingland to the King,
 And schaw to him that I am haill and feir,
 And of my jurnay on this maneir ;
 Me recommending on most humbill wyfe,
 [And that full oft, to fair Meliades,]
 To hir, and eik unto the court ower all ;
 410 And quhen I may have lafour cum I fall.
 Heiring this taill, thir knichtis war full wo ;
 Bot, for his great displeafour dread they fo,
 No thing they faid, bot rycht at his command
 They wald obey withouttin mair demand.
 Then efter callit he on Bonvaleir,
 Saying, Commend me to my Lady deir,
 And unto hir ze fay that in fchort space,
 I thinke to fe hir fair and gudlie face ;
 Geive hir this letter in ane taikining
 420 That I fair weill : and fo, at thair depairting,
 Fyfte florings of gold he gave him thair ;
 And then Bonvaleir tuike [his] leave to fair.
 His coufnis tuik thair leave with imbracing ;
 And in Palexis hand he did inthring
 Ane rich flour of luftie diamand,
 The quhilke bricht was and illuminand ;
 And him commandit in fecreit wayes,
 That he fould geive it to Meliades.
 Bonvaleir and thir nobill Knichtis two
 430 Thair leave hes taine hamwart for to go ;
 Thir Knichtis two did on thair horfe ascend,
 And Bonvaleir hamwart with them wend.
 Thir Knichtis, with this varlot Bonvaleir,
 In thair voyage fo foftlie can them feir

Whill they com neir the cuntrie of Ingland.
 Bonvaleir, to thir Knightis inclynand,
 Said, I wald ryd before war it gour will.
 Thir Knichtis baith consentit him till.
 Bonvalier haifit him on fike wyfe
 440 That in schort tyme into the toune he hyis,
 As for that tyme quhair lugit was the King ;
 Anone also he changit his clothing,
 As he had not beine fra hame nor absent.
 Rycht sounne unto Meliades he went,
 And fand hir in hir wairdrope quyetlie,
 Playand on ane hearpe rycht mirrilie.
 And quhen scho of Bonvaleir had ane sicht,
 Greatlie rejosit was this Lady bricht,
 And hastilie scho speirit of his tyding.
 450 And then Bonvaleir, on his kneis fitting,
 Said, Gud tyding I have to zow, Madame ;
 Clariodus the Knicht of mekle fame
 Commending him unto zour Ladieheid,
 And bad me say unto zow but dread
 That in schort tyme he sould zour beawtie see ;
 And heir ar letteris that he derectit me,
 And bad me to zour Hienes them present.
 Scho them refavit than incontinent,
 And rede ; bot quhen scho had witting
 460 Of all his trysting and of his cuming,
 Thairfor scho tuike sic comfort and plesance,
 Scho thocht hir heart for joy begouth to dance ;
 Then said to Bonvalier, I have seine
 Zour letteris, quhilk sum centensis dois conteine,
 Within few dayis that Clariodus
 Salbe in this cuntrie heir with ws.

- Bonvalier said, Madame, sa traist ge me,
 That he fall cum quhen he may readie be ;
 He me rewairdit sa nichtilie,
 470 And alsé hes gevin me of gold sa larglie
 That I fall rich man be for ever moir,
 I gow requyre that ge him thank thairfore.
 I fall him thanke, scho said, at his cuming,
 For ge have donne zour pairt in everie thing ;
 Go furth and fetch me Romaryn alswith.
 At hir command scho com with visage blyth,
 And said, Madam, with me quhat war zour will ?
 Tydings, scho said, I have to tell gow till ;
 The nobill and worthie Clariodus, my Knicht,
 480 Salbe heir, God willing, with ws this nicht.
 Romaryn anfwairit and said, God me save,
 Those beine the tydandis fainest I wald have.
 This nicht he cumis, said Meliades,
 At ten houris but dread on this wayis,
 In at the gardine postrum thinkis he
 All privilie to have his entrie ;
 Thairfoir I pray that ge the postrum keip,
 So that the tyme [appoynted] we not sleip.
 Romaryn said, Madame, not this onlie,
 490 To keip the postrum, bot I readilie
 Wald go for zow to the warldis end,
 To bring to purpose quhilk ge two pretend :
 Confidering that, bot villanie or blame,
 Zour love to the increffing of zour fame,
 My part I fall sa weill doe to zow baith,
 That it fall never returne to zow no skaith.
 Thir two as now thay spike no more
 For perfaving ; Meliades thairfore

Unto hir Ladies went hir to disport,
 500 Fulfillit with all glaidnes and comfort.
 To court then cuming was [Sir] Palexis
 And Amadour, quhilk with all biffines
 Went to the King, quha full tenderlie
 Speirit for Clariodus, and quhy
 That he not cam. And they have anfwair maid,
 Saying, This is the caus of his abaid,
 He man in Denmark pafs for caufis feir ;
 Bot he will speid him hame founne to be heir :
 He bad ws that we fould him recommend 510 Unto your Grace, on quhome he will depend
 Abone all princes aneth the firmament.
 The nobill King in heart was not content
 That cuming was not git Clariodus,
 And baith his coufings com him fra thus.
 He speirit at them uther tydings new ;
 And they him plainlie all the maner fchew
 Of all the juffing and the tornament
 Of Spaine, and how the praisie and loving went
 All onlie with Clariodus and no mo.
 520 And word be word they tauld him also,
 How that he manfullie vinquist the lyoun,
 And all the cace they tauld with lang fermoune ;
 And how that with The Felloun but petie
 He faught, and gart him leave his crueltye.
 And quhen the King this hard fa great ferlie,
 He bliffit him and said, I trew fuithlie,
 That sic ane Knicht be not in all the world as he,
 Of strenth, and nurtur, and magnanimitie.
 Thir wordis said the King, and bad them go
 530 Unto the Queine, and to hir tell also

The ferlie thing, quhilk unto him they schew ;
 To quhom they went anone, and did falew
 Hir nobilnes ; and scho maid them to go
 With hir into ane garding to and fro
 Whill they had tauld hir all the circumstance,
 And word be word without dissimulance ;
 Quhilk was to hir ane thing maist mervellous,
 How that he micht acheive sic acts perrellous.
 Sir Amadour went walking with the Queine ;
 540 And Sir Palexis with the Ladie scheine,
 And said, Madame, Clariodus the Knicht,
 Oft him commendis unto your bewtie bricht,
 And fendis to you this flour of diament ;
 Saying, Within few dayis in verament
 He sall you se. Then said Meliades,
 Sa lang from us he bydis on sik wyse,
 I trow the plesance of his awin cuntrie
 Sall gar this land with him forgottin be.
 Palexis for to blind scho said this thing,
 550 For he nocht wist of Bonvaleiris wryting.
 Palexis said, For suith Madam I trow,
 He had rather die than forgottin you ;
 Uneis scho micht from lawghter then contine,
 And thocht that he knew litill them betwine ;
 Bot weill scho did consider his lawtie,
 For to his Eame ane gud parte keipit he.
 Be this was said, the night aprochit neir ;
 The King then dressit him to his suppeir ;
 For joy that cuming war thir knichtis, he 560 Sent for the Queine and Ladies of beawtie,
 To soup with them that night into the hall.
 The courfis com with trumpits found royall ;

Rycht nobill cheir they had, with aboundance
 Of dilicat meits and wynis of plesance.
 When they had foupit and chirit nobillie,
 And eftir fupper danfit mirrilie
 With joyous play anone and gud difport,
 The Queine unto hir chalmer went at fchort,
 And with hir went Meliades the bricht,
 570 Wha ay thoct on the cuming of hir Knight.
 And quhen it did aproch neir the hour,
 Scho faid unto the Ladyis of hir boure
 That fcho was evill difpofit, and wald ly
 Into hir wairdrop that nicht quyetlie.
 Hir Ladyis hir convoyit to the doure,
 Quhilk Romaryn clofit eftir hir fure.
 This Lady langer thoct this nicht perfay
 Nor fcho befor had thoct ane moneth day ;
 Whairfor fcho gart Romareine go full oft
 580 To hir postrum and fet hir paiffis foft,
 That naine fould hir heir. So, oft fcho paff
 Whill that fcho fand him ftanding at the laft ;
 Then fcho undid the port full bifillie,
 And fyn kneillit to him full humbillie,
 Sayand, My Lord, ze ar full welcum heir.
 He faid, Grand mercie! with ane knichtlie cheir ;
 Bot he wald not hir kifs quhill he had feine
 His awin Lady, quhilk he avowit beine.
 When fcho the zet had clofit likerlie
 590 They com togidder befor this young Ladie.
 When he hir faw he fat down on his kne,
 Bot ane long tyme ane word not [fay] micht he,
 Nor git this Lady, for ower great comforting ;
 Full war thair hearts of bliffull rejoyfing ;

Ouercum thay was with love in everie fyd,
 Whilk in thair breiftis was fo multiplied
 That they abaisit lang war in this wyse.
 And unto him first spake Meliades,
 Welcum my Knicht, welcum my sufficence,
 600 Welcum my warldis joy and hail plesance,
 Welcum my heartis love, Clariodus,
 Whais lang absence hes beine to me noyous.
 Then answairit he and said full courtesie,
 My heartis Ladie and my joy onlie,
 How have ge fairne sen our last depairting?
 Now fair I weill, quod scho, in everie thing,
 Sen ge ar cum, the caus of my weilfair.
 With that scho strentit him in hir armis thair,
 And he also did hir softlie imbrace,
 610 And kiffit uther oft into that place.
 This Knycht then besyd hir doun scho sat
 Upon ane cuschoun of rich velvat.
 Speikand fyne of divers materis of plesance
 Belonging unto loves obfervance,
 My paramour, said fair Meliades,
 To me it is reveallit in secreit wyse,
 That ge fould have beine wadit into Spaine;
 This jelusie did hote in me remaine;
 For ever, great love as it dois oft befall,
 620 Hot jelusie ower love does dwell at all.
 Clariodus said, Madam, be not adred,
 Quhen that the King of Bethingham fall gow wed,
 The King of Spainis sifter fall me have,
 And that salbe rycht fuith, sa God me save.
 And fuith it was, of Bethingam the King
 And hir freindis had spokin of hir wadding;

Quhairfor scho leuch, and said, Ze know your fell,
 All is not trew that everie man dois tell.
 Amongis them thus mirrilie they sporte,
 630 They thocht the night to tham was all to schort.
 Clariodus said, I have ane interpryse
 To do in armis, quhairfor ze mon devyse
 What cullour I fall weir ; for if that I
 Be into reid, then fall I verily
 Be knowin to all the court in everie steid,
 For wait ze weil that long I wore the reid.
 Then said Meliades in this maneir,
 Now it is Mayis moneth fair and cleir ;
 Wharfor, according to the seafoun scheine,
 640 Convenient war that ze fould weir the greine.
 Clariodus hir thankit courtellie
 Of hir cullour, and said, Madame, glaidlie
 At your command that cullour I fall use
 For saike of you, and no man to refuse
 In tournament, in peace, nor git in weir,
 Als long as I your gudlie cullour beir.
 Ane chaine of gold scho gave him lang and small,
 With love knotis that cassin war ower all ;
 And bad that he fould weir it for hir saike
 650 Abone his geir ; quhilk he did wndertake.
 And he hir gave ane luffie braslet,
 All wrocht with gold and pretious stonis set ;
 And for his saike he prayit hir to weir it.
 The day aprocht, quhairof they war effeir.
 Romaryn said, It wilbe day alsweith,
 And thair of war thir lovers nothing blyth ;
 They tuike thair leave at uthers imbracing,
 With pitious wurdis, and with kissing,

With sorrowfull sighing, and with tirie face ;
 660 Into thair myndis thinking oft, Alleace,
 That ever thay sould depairt so suddantlie ;
 Affuring uthers with aithes fikerlie
 Trewth and gude love for ever more to left.
 Depairting syne with heartis fore opprest,
 To the postrum went Clariodus,
 With sichis sad and heart dolorus ;
 Whom convoyit the Lady Romaryn,
 And at the postrum did to him inclyne ;
 Whom at he tuike his leave richt courteslie,
 670 And thankit hir baith oft and heartfullie
 Of all hir secreit service donne before,
 Sayand, He sould think on it evermore.
 Then flickit scho the postrum privilie,
 And to hir Ladie com up haiftlie,
 Whair scho hir fand makand ane pitious mone,
 Hir gudlie face with tearis all wobegone
 For sorrow of the suddane depairting
 Of him quhom that scho lovit ower all thing.
 Bot Romaryn did comfort hir so fast
 680 Whill to hir bed scho bounit at the last,
 Whair scho lay waiking, and thinking on her knight
 Whill Phebus schynit in her chalmer bricht ;
 And then scho raife and hir arrayit anone,
 And with hir Ladies to the Queine is gone.
 Clariodus, or that [the] sun up schyne,
 Was at the forsaid knichtis place againe.
 The portar trowit, for he was ane valiand knight,
 He had beine seikand eventures all nicht.
 To bed he went, and sleipit quhile it was day ;
 690 And syne he raife and sounne did him aray.

When he to God had prayit devotlie,
 And dynit eik, he said full courteslie
 Unto the Lord, Len me ane servitour
 That can ane crand doe with biffie cure.
 The Lord him grantit hes rycht heartfully,
 And callit on ane servand neir him by,
 And him betaucht, saying, Ze fall resave
 This gour man quhilk I in dewtie have ;
 For he is secreit, wyse and trew in all,
 700 Whairfoir to name we Diligence him call ;
 He fall gour varlot be withoutin dreid,
 If ze him list, for tearme of lyfe poseid.
 Clariodus him thankit reverentlie ;
 This Diligence he hes sent haistilie
 For diverse things that was convenient
 For him to weir into [the] tornament ;
 And bad him alse ane browderer him bring,
 And eike ane armurar that was cuning,
 And diverse filkis baith greine and uther hew.
 710 This Diligence full weill the waris knew ;
 He tuike the money, and went on his erand ;
 And everilk thing, rycht as he did command,
 He furnischtit hes, and bocht into schort space ;
 And brocht with him the workmen to the place
 Whair that he bade. And then Clariodus
 Went to the Lord againe, and said him thus,
 Sir, ane maister of work mon ze be ;
 Heirefterwart as ze wald, Sir, charge me ;
 Gar put gon workmen in sum quyet hous,
 720 And se that they be verie laborus
 Whill thay have maid ane harnes fair and fure ;
 And bid that they with greine fatine it cure,

Of Tutabone weill all broderit with the floure,
 For zonder cumin is ane good broderour ;
 My uther harnes they may as patrour taikie,
 And thay thairby the meitter fall it make.
 The Knight all undertuikie with diligence ;
 Bot he himself wald not cum in prefence
 Of tham that maid his harnes, dread that thay
 730 Sould him reveale againe in the tornay.
 He gart them alfe make gounis of fatine greine,
 For men and wemen, gudlie for to feine ;
 The varlots of the place he gart aray
 Of fatine greine all of ane leveray,
 Imbrowderit with the flour of Tutabon ;
 So that he left not unrewairdit one.
 Clariodus fex virginis fair to feine
 Gart all be clothit into fatine greine ;
 The zoungeft he gart aray hir lutilie
 740 With gold and ftonis winder plesandlie ;
 Abone hir treffit hair of delyte
 Was fet ane chaplet all of pearlis quhyt.
 And fex squyeris he hes gart cleath also
 In greine fatine, with this Madin to go
 Unto the King. He teichit hir parqueir
 What scho fould fay, as efter ze fall heir.
 This Madine richt to Windifchore is went,
 Wher that the King as than was resident,
 And lichtit at the palice zet adoune,
 750 Whair monie men rycht gudlie of renoune.
 Four awfull bearis was to the King present,
 [With quhilk his Knichts fould fight incontinent.]
 Great preafe of pepill com them to behold.
 This damifell, bot of fyftine geiris old,

Went throw the preiſe whill ſcho com to the King,
 Whair kneillit doune this gudlie Madine benign ;
 And firſt ſcho helfit him and ſyne the Queine,
 And then Meliades the luſtie ladie ſcheine ;
 Syne with he voice ſcho ſaid before them all
 760 Thir wordis, that rehearſe to zow I fall :
 King Philipon, unto zour Excellence
 The Grein Knicht hes me ſent with reverence ;
 The quhilk plainlie commandis me to fay,
 Ane tornay ſet is for ane moneth day
 Be him, bot heir ane litill zow befyde ;
 Gif ony Knicht, that dois with zow abyde,
 Will him affay, he fall reſavit be
 In juſting, for thoſe dayes thinkis he
 Them to affay, if thay will cum him till ;
 770 And he that is win fall be at the will
 Of him that ſtraike him doun but let,
 To quhat priſſoun he will him in ſet.
 The Grein Knicht beiris the flour of Tutabon,
 Wha will affay let him cum on anone
 To joyous Maſon not far zow fro,
 Four myllis of ſpace it is and no mo,
 The Lord of it Sir Pennent hecht dreidles
 Of La Carere, ane knicht of worthines.
 When ſcho had ſaid thir wordis oppinlie,
 780 The King and all the court had great ferlie
 Of hir language, that ſcho, ſa zoung of age,
 So nobillie compleitit had hir meſſage.
 Among the rout great preaſe was hir to ſe,
 So weill arayit, and of ſo great bewtie.
 The King ſaid, Lady, I have great joy to heir
 Zour ſpeache pronuncit with womanlie maneir ;

And for to se your bewtie maist bening,
 Your port, your cheir, your speach and gud having ;
 Your and your gyding greatlie I commend,
 790 And eike the Greine Knicht that you heir fend.
 We ar to him beholdin in great maner,
 That hes us fend so gracious ane messenger ;
 If that you pleis, ane quhill you fall abyd,
 Whill I speik with thir Knichtis me besyd ;
 Syn you fall answere have and that anone.
 He with his Knichtis ar to counsell gone.
 They war content and blyth everie Knicht,
 Consenting at thair power and thair might
 To mak them redie to the turnament,
 800 Whairon accordit thay with ane consent.
 Befor the King fat doune ane Knicht,
 Sir Broun de la Mere hardie and wicht,
 And askit thair that he the formost day,
 To just might enter in the said tornay.
 The King him grantit ; and syne returnit sweith
 Unto this Virgine so bening and blyth,
 Saying to the fair Madine, To the Greine Knicht say,
 He false servit all out ane moneth day
 At his desyre, and thanke him hartfullie
 810 That hes us chargit so honorabillie
 Unto so nobill ane act and fair disport.
 Then he dellyverit hes this Madine at schort ;
 At quhais passing into remembrance,
 Ane diamond he gave hir of plesance ;
 The quhilke scho did refave with humbill cheir,
 And thankit him upon ane fair maner.
 This lustie Madine returning haistilie,
 Hir squyeris ryding lustilie hir by,

Syn to Clariodus did hir dres,
 820 And tauld him the maner mair and les,
 How all the court had joy of hir cuming,
 And how scho was delyverit with the King,
 And how that hir beheld Meliades,
 Quhilk was the rose of everie lustines ;
 Abone mesfour commending the bewtie
 Of hir that was so angill lyke to see ;
 And fuith it was that ilk Meliades
 Beheld hir with all cure and bifines,
 For weill scho wist quhairfra scho was fend,
 830 The mair scho did unto the Madine attend.
 Quhen scho had tauld him all the remanent,
 Clariodus unto Sir Pennent went,
 And said, Ze mon ane chalmer gar provide,
 That is of herberie mekill roume and wyde,
 And gar aray it lustilie and fair,
 Perchance in it sum strangers fall repair.
 When this was said, Clariodus furth went,
 And twa paviliouns lustilie gart upstent
 Of greine filk wrocht, and in ane large plaine,
 840 Ane flicht schot syndrie, the fuith if I fould faine,
 With filkin roppis also of the famine hew ;
 Ane for him self, quhair, of the bricht gold new
 Inbrowderit was the flour of Tutabone ;
 For his companioun the uther was anone.
 Within thir twa was ordanit everie thing
 That langit unto tornay or justing.
 Be all was put to poynt and dune at rycht
 The day was gone, and cuming was the nicht ;
 Clariodus his bodie did devest,
 850 Syne to his bed he geid, him for to rest.

The mirrie day displaying in the morrow,
 The glaid foullis, devoid of nichtis forrow,
 With fugarit nots making ane mirrie found
 Aganis bricht Phebus blyth ascentioun,
 Whilk with his afour beamis of delyt
 Oppinit on bread the tender blomes quhyt,
 Doing the bloffumes breke in the spray,
 And everilk bank in grein dois he aray.
 Clariodus, the flour of Mars, his knichts
 860 Full lustilie into his weidis him dichts,
 With knichtlie cheir and curage leoneine,
 Thinking or Phebus in the waft declyne,
 That he fould for his foverane Ladyis saiike,
 With spair in hand, ane manlie counter make.
 When he ane mefs had hard, and tane difjune,
 He gart four gudlie sqyeris enter sounne
 Into the Knichtis pailgeon, and that anone
 Sould with him just ; to ferve him thay ar gone ;
 Syne ordanit he two virginis that war cleir,
 870 By the reingeis to leid his awin courfeir ;
 The Ladie of the place his helme did beir,
 Hir following foure fresche virginis of effeir ;
 The Lord himself to ferve him of his lance ;
 And all in greine arrayit for plesance ;
 His four sqyers upon the famine wyfe
 War all in greine, maist gudlie to devyfe.
 Then to his pailgeoun went he spedilie,
 Inearmit at all poyntis full richlie,
 On his companioun thair abyding still.
 880 He had with him baith trumpit and clarioun chill,
 Garring await if they saw ony Knicht
 Cum from the Kingis corut enarmit bricht.

And be it was of the day houris ten,
 Againis the fune ane Knicht cumand thai ken,
 Lucent as lampe and leming in his weid,
 Withe lance in hand, upon ane snaw quhyt steid ;
 Two knichtis him convoyit nobilly,
 And gud Sir Amadur raid him by,
 And uther fyve him for to ferve at all ;
 890 He feimit feirce and strong as ony wall.
 When he aprochit neir the pailgeoun,
 The four squyers with rycht bening fermoun
 Recevit him, and offerit him entrie,
 And prayit him to licht thair ; bot he
 Wald not licht doune, bot thankis to them gold.
 Anone quhen thus Clariodus can behold,
 Alse fuisit as falcoun he sprang upon his steid,
 As glorious angill schyning in his weid ;
 Fret full of stonis radious and licht,
 900 All browderit with gold depaintit full bricht,
 Out throw the greine gudlie to decerne,
 Whair ilk gilt mailge glemit as ane sterne ;
 And for the Lady had his helme to beir,
 Ane falsse visar for kening he did weir ;
 Hir ladies all, as ze have hard me say,
 Convoyit him furth all into greine aray.
 When that Sir Broun and his fellowis beheld
 The Greine Knicht cum so nobillie to the feild,
 Unto his feiris he said that stude him by,
 910 Zone is the knichtlieft sicht aluterly,
 And the most gudlie that ever I saw with ey ;
 And so said all the rest of his meinge.
 Clariodus threw on his helme anone,
 Sir Pennent with his speir is to him gone.

The trumpits blew and heraldis cryit all,
 The menstrellis playit with gle angellicall.
 Thir Knichts as two lampis leiming licht
 Of aureat splendor schynit as stonis bricht ;
 They smot thair steidis with spuris hardelie,
 920 And ran togidder wonder feircelie,
 Whill that thair schaftis scharp and squaire
 Flew all in peices abone them in the aire ;
 They tuike new speirris and ran togidder in feir,
 Full knichtlie com thir men of armis cleir,
 Girdand so fast as ane fireflichtis glance,
 Sir Broun on Clariodus brake his lance,
 And he him hit againe with sic force
 That he ane speir lenth strake him fra his hors.
 The Greine Knicht thene returnit to his tent.
 930 Four gudlie squyeris to Sir Broun ar went,
 Sayand, Sir Knicht, the cunand weill ze know,
 Ze mon to priffoun with on ane law.
 Sir Broun anfwairit and said, Richt weill
 Your willis I fall obey everilk deill.
 They led him to ane priffon of plesance,
 Be the Greine Knichtis nobill ordinance ;
 Quhilk chalmer was arrayit nobillie,
 With clothes of gold and arais full nichtie.
 The squyeris said, Ze most heir abyd,
 940 Whill we unto our lord the Greine Knicht ryd.
 The squyeris com unto Clariodus,
 Quhilk was hame rydand mirrie and joyous
 Toward the place of Sir Pennent the Knicht ;
 And at the zettis quhen he did alicht,
 They tauld to him all the maner cleir,
 How they demainit had the priffoneir.

Clariodus unto his chalmer went,
 And him unearmit thair incontinent ;
 Then hes he for Sir Pennent fent belyve,
 950 Sayand, Sir Knicht, ge pas and eike zour wyfe,
 And take with zow the sex virginis in hy,
 With other sqyeris in zour companie,
 And with Sir Broun ge soupe and make zow blyth.
 Sir Pennent faid, It falbe donne alfueith.
 The Knicht furth went as he commandit was,
 With all the forfaidis ladyes more and les,
 And gart bring furth with them ches and tabill,
 And instrumentis that war delectabill,
 With herp, and lute, and instruments for to play ;
 960 And in this chalmer, put in gud aray,
 They enterit foune, and faid on this maneir,
 Sir, the Greine Knicht hes fent us to zow heir,
 To do zow plesance and hold zow companie.
 Sir Broun anfwairit and faid, I traift gif I
 Have no worfe priffoun nor this I fall not pleine ;
 And so to tell the trewth and not to feine ;
 The fairest man of armis and the best
 Is the Greine Knicht, and the feimliest
 That leives now, I trow, under the fone,
 970 He feimis nocht lichtlie to be wone.
 Sir Pennant faid, And he is thair withall,
 The gentilest and the most liberall
 That ever I knew in the dayis of my lyfe,
 None lawlier in the world is borne of wyfe.
 When they had soupit and fairne rycht reallie,
 Sir Pennent tuike his leive rycht humbillie,
 And left with him four sqyeris that war wyfe,
 In all his deidis to doe him service.

When cumin was to court Sir Amadoure,
 980 To heir his tydingis the King had great langour,
 And bad him schaw as he had hard and feine ;
 And he him tauld the veritie all cleine,
 Richt as it was, diffimuling in no thing;
 Of quhilk rehearse great mervell had the King,
 To Amadur saying, halfe as it war in play,
 Be of gude curage, the morne ge mon affay.
 Amadur said, Availl quhat may availl,
 However it be, the game I fall affaill.
 The nicht passit, the morrow com alfuith.
 990 Sir Amadur, sa fone as day could kyth,
 Inarmit him and in the clofe discendit,
 And fand awcht squyeris that on him dependit,
 With Sir Palexis and uther knichtis two.
 Sueith at the King he tuike his leave to go,
 And raid furth to the place of justing.
 When the Greine Knicht had of him persaving,
 He come furth cleir enarmit under scheild,
 Convoyit with his Ladyis in the feild ;
 Whom on Palexis had great joy to behold,
 1000 And said, My brother Amadur, be bold,
 For gow befor ge have alfe fair ane Knicht
 As ever was cled in helme or birnie bricht.
 When thay war redie on ather syd,
 Full manlie can thai to uther ryd ;
 They smot thair steidis with spurris haistilie,
 And ran togidder wounder ferselie,
 That baith thair speiris abone tnem flew afunder,
 And baith thair steidis did bakward founder ;
 Thair squyeris did them serve with speiris new,
 1010 And thay anone raid utheris to persew,

Whill all to fruschit thair lanfis in the feild,
 That all men mervellit that about beheld.
 Palexis said, Gif that Clariodus
 War in the land, quhilk is unkend to us,
 I wald fay furlie the Greine Knicht war he,
 He is fo lyke to him in all degree.
 They ran at uther fa withoutin ho,
 Whill seven speiris brokine war in two.
 Weill knew Clariodus, be his valoure,
 1020 He was his coufing, nobill Amadure,
 And blyth [he] was that he into him fand
 Sic strenth, and micht, and deidis valiand.
 [Clariodus then tuike the auchten speir]
 Both great and strong, and, in ane knichtlie feir,
 He drave at him with sik ane feirfull micht,
 All to the eard he drave baith horfe and Knicht
 With sike ane force, that all that was about
 Wint that he had beine dead withoutin doubt.
 The Greine Knicht raid richt unto his tent.
 1030 The squyeris to Sir Amadur ar went,
 And speirit if he was hurt, and he said, Nay,
 Bot he ane littil fruschit was perfay.
 Thus Amadur [eik] was to priffoune led,
 Whairof Sir Broun was wounder blyth and glaid,
 And said, Welcum, [maist] gentill Amadur,
 That sik compassioun hes on your nighbour,
 That ze vouchsafe to cum and visit me.
 Then, smyling, said Sir Amadur, Pardie
 Ze neid me not to thanke so greatumly,
 1040 For zow to visit aganis my will com I;
 I ryd heir that we tak no grevance,
 For of this justing cum the uterance;

I traift that we fall get mo companie,
Or then I am diffavit verilie.

Clariodus [did] pafs to his ludging,
And him unarmit but tarying,
And bad Sir Pennent tak his Ladie bricht,
With all hir madinis, and go unto the Knicht,
And make him cheir and companie weill more
1050 Nor to the uther Knicht was donne before.
And they fo did with all thair cure and micht,
He wantit nocht perteinit to ane knicht.
Palexis pafst and fchew unto the King
As ge have hard, and feinget in no thing.
The King studiit, and had great ferlie
Of the Greine Knicht, and of his chevalrie.
Thus quhen that Amadour was ftrikin doun,
That was ay praiffit of fic renoune,
Abaisit was this nobill King, and faid
1060 Unto Palexis, Jon grein Knicht fall degraid
Our Knichtis all, bot ge remeid us fynd;
Whairfor ge fall no langer duell behind,
For ay the mair [that we thus] vinquift be,
The mair degraidis it our honestie;
Ge ar our comfort nixt Clariodus,
Whilk abfent is in this great neid from us.
Sir, faid the nobill and worthie Palexis,
I fall againis the Grein Knicht me adres,
Although he war ane infernall creatour
1070 I dar my bodie againis him aventour
Whidder that fortoun be my freind or fa,
Thair fall no dreidour bandis me him fra;
Although he fraik me doun I have no fchame,
For Knichtis that ar alfé worthie of name

Befor his speir poynt hes lyine full law,
 What fault war it thocht with my feiris I faw.

At morne as Phebus markit up his face,
 Palexis did his harneis on him brace,
 And him enarmit furelie clofe and joynt.
 1080 When that he was all readie and at poynt,
 With him Sir Gilgeam de la Forreft raid,
 Unto the feild he dressit but abaid ;
 Richard de Maianis, with uther squyeris mo ;
 Thus all on front unto the feild thay go.
 And quhen he com unto the first pailgeoun,
 The foure squyers to meit him maid tham boune,
 And him refavit wonder thankfullie,
 And treitit him richt fair honorabillie.
 He thankit them, and wald not with them licht,
 1090 Bot hovit still abyding the Greine Knicht.
 Soune this was tauld unto Clariodus,
 Quhilk [glad] was of his coufing cumand thus ;
 For weill he knew that he was Palexis,
 Ane Knicht full great of fame and worthines,
 Brother unto his coufing Amadur,
 That valiant was for to manteine ane flour,
 And was in armis his awin fellow deir,
 Whom he ever lovit weill in all maneir ;
 And he againe him lovit over all thing,
 1100 Thocht then he had of him no knowledging.
 The Greine Knicht affendit on his steid,
 Bricht as Apollo, schyning in his weid.
 His Lady him convoyit on ane space,
 Upon his heid he did his bricht helme lace.
 The Knicht, Sir Pennent, raucht to him a speir,
 He steirit his coursfour with ane knichtlie feir.

- Gylgeam de la Forrest, and Richard de Maianis,
 When they beheld his knichtlie governance,
 Thay said anone to nobill Palexis,
 1110 To doe thy devore with courage thé adrese,
 For of this wyde warld aluterlie,
 Zonder rydis the flour of chevalrie ;
 And whofo list to se ane gudlie sicht,
 Let him cum furth and luike upon gon Knicht.
 Sir Palexis, that ever was gud at neid,
 Delyverlie he lanfit furth his steid ;
 Nocht better forge could Deame Natur,
 For he was seimlie of corpis and statur,
 Lyk to his eame the gud Clariodus.
 1120 Thir two aprochit to uther thus,
 Up gois the weirlyke found of clariouns,
 Togidder gois thir michtie champions
 With speir set all fadlie into the reist ;
 With manlie heartis baith fordward they preist,
 And large alfe fast as spuris could them speid,
 And they have met withouttin aw or dreid.
 Thair speiris flew in peices in the aire,
 Whill throw the reard the cludis can all to rare,
 As it had beine ane crake of thunder fell,
 1130 The castell wall redoundit with the gell ;
 Baith hurlit bakward thair fleidis with a grane,
 Whill that the noyse dinlit baith aird and staine.
 The rumour raife throw all the feild about,
 Of the two Knichtis haveing mikill doubt
 That thay sould have fruschtit throw the steill
 With the ilke dafch ; bot thay recoverit weil :
 Also of new two speiris have they hint,
 And ran togidder as ferce fyre and flynt

- Whill that the trinfchouns ower thair heidis zeid,
 1140 And fyr out followit alse reid as ony gleid ;
 They restit never quhile they awcht speiris brake,
 So them betwine thair was ay rap for rap :
 As fearce as dragouns wood and violent
 Thair course had fetchit from the firmament,
 And breift for breift had met with all thair mane,
 Whyll with thair fetheris coverit was the plaine ;
 So strawit was the feild thir Knichtis under
 Of fettering schafte, and trinfchouns broke in funder,
 That folkis all winderit that about them hovit,
 1150 That they nocht go from thair steidis behovit.
 With the last counter thay maid that day,
 Than to himself can Palexis fay,
 Thow art no man, for be thy force I feill,
 Thou art ane feind forgit into feill ;
 For never more, sen I could sit on horse,
 Was I so machit with no manis force.
 The samine thing thocht Clariodus,
 And with ane mynd ferce and curagious
 Ane speir he gripit winder great and wicht,
 1160 And with sic force he ran upon the Knicht,
 He drave him and his hors doun togidder,
 If they wer dead or not, no man could tell quhidder,
 To grund thay ruschit with sic ane vehemence,
 All throw his michtie straike and violence ;
 Bot he, throw Godis grace, full weill eschewit ;
 His nobill squyeris him haifilie relevit.
 Upon the hand he hurt was a lyt,
 Of quhilk but dread he rekit not ane myt.
 Clariodus returnit to his tent.
 1170 Foure of his squyeris unto Palexis went,

- And did with him as with the uther two,
 Quhilk full glaidlie schup with them to go.
 Sir Amadur had joy and great blythnes,
 Quhen that he saw his brother Palexis ;
 Sir Broun was glaid also of his cuming,
 And then alfuith they fell in commoning
 Of the Greine Knicht, and of his [great] valour,
 His praife, bewtie, his face, and his figure.
 Sir Pennent com as thay war speiking thus,
 1180 Be the cunning of Sir Clariodus ;
 With him he brocht his Lady bricht and scheine,
 With all the virginis freschlie cled in greine,
 Harping, finging, and making melodie,
 With joyous found of hevinlie menstrellie.
 Unto Palexis he maid feist far more
 Nor he did to the uther twa before.
 This Ladie, quhilke was ane leich wonder gud,
 Hes stemit of Palexis hand the blude,
 And maid it to be haille in litill space,
 1190 As be the Greine Knicht scho commandit was ;
 The quhilke [fain] wald have seine [Sir] Palexis,
 And his fellowis, to doe them glaidnes,
 Bot for difcovering he wald not wend
 Whill that his enterpryse was at ane end.
 The priffoneris remainis into firmance,
 They feill no thing of forrow nor penance.
 Of Palexis went hame the companie,
 And did the maneir plainlie fertifie
 Of all the justing word be word ;
 1200 Whairof the guid King thocht bot litill bourd,
 That priffoneris his Knichts war so caucht
 Be sic ane stranger to quhom he nothing awcht.

- When he had hard that Palexis and his hors
 War baith to grund [thus] strikin with his force,
 He ferliet greatlie, fo did the court all hail,
 Of the Greine Knicht and of his [great] availl,
 Saying, Gif that Clariodus in feild
 And he alse [came] enarmit under scheid,
 The two best Knichtis in the warld war met.
 1210 The King said, Sir Gilgeam, do gour debt,
 With him the morne gour strenth ge mone affay.
 Then can Gylgeam de la Forreft say,
 Full littil or nocht my strenth it may availl
 Againis his nicht, quhen Knichtis did affaill
 Stronger nor I, and nobiller [of] renoune,
 And faillit not for to be strikin doune ;
 Bot as my fellowis git I fall affay,
 And fall not fail to do the best I may.
 Be he had anfwairit thus it waxit lait,
 1220 And unto bedis went hé and law estait.
 Gilgeam de la Forreft raife up with the day,
 And at the King tuike leave and went away,
 And with his squyeris raid to Mafon le Joyous ;
 Whom foune perfavit Sir Clariodus,
 Quhilke smartlie hes donne af his false vifage,
 And threw on him his helmet with curage,
 And with his michtie speir into his hand
 He met Sir Gilgeam fairlie on the land,
 And straike him from [his] horfe without delay ;
 1230 And fyne unto his pailgeoun went his way :
 To priffoun was he taine, and that anone ;
 His fellowis hamwart to the King ar gone,
 And tauld how Gilgeam foune was strikin doune,
 Richt as ane bairne full febill of perfoun.

The court greatlie mervellit of this thing,
 Of the Greine Knicht was all thair comoning ;
 So to and fro thay spake quhile it was nicht,
 And then anone to bed went everilk knicht.

Richard de Maianis nixt did him perfew,
 1240 And nixt him Sir Theman de la Hew,
 Syn fraike he doune Sir Triframe de Beaufort,
 And efter him Sir Clarius de la Port,
 Syne vinqiſt he Sir Cardron de la Conge,
 And efter him Sir Leoport de la Gonge ;
 So furth induring quhile did ane moneth left,
 He counterit with ane Knicht ay of the beſt
 Whill threttie Knichtis he had strikin down
 Of tham that war in court of beſt renoune.

On this ilk moneth in the letter day,
 1250 The King inquirit of ane ſquyer or tway,
 How the laſt Knight did him impartie.
 The Knight of Eſtur lichtit fuddanlie,
 And did affend into the hall anone ;
 Unto the King full glaidlie is he gone.
 The King reſavit him with great blythnes,
 And ſo did all the lordis baith mair and les ;
 The Queine and all the ladies did him kis,
 And him reſavit [alſe] with mikill blife,
 As he quho for the commoun profite hail
 1260 Exerceifand juſtice had taine great travell.
 The King him tauld, with everie circumſtance,
 Of the Greine Knight the rule and governance ;
 And all the maner, as ge heard before,
 How on the morne he ſould juſt and no more.
 And quhan the Earle hard of this tyding,
 How on the morne that it ſould taike ending,

So lawlie he inclynit to the King,
 And befought him atoure all uther thing
 That he wald releive him of his regall micht,
 1270 Upon the morne to fight with the Greine Knight.
 The King was laith to grant him his asking,
 For he the realme had haill in his governing,
 And thocht, if [that he] had beine strikin doune
 That nixt himself was greateft of renowne,
 It had to his realme dishonour more
 Nor all the rest that vinqvist war before :
 Bot this he him befought fo earnistlie,
 That be na maner he could him it deny ;
 Bot grantit him, and said, If ze will fo,
 1280 My self with zow in companie fall go,
 [The Quein, and alse the fair Meliades,]
 With all my houe ; fa help us Godis grace
 That we may vinqvise upon the letter day.
 His houshald all commandit he that thay
 Sould redie make the morne with him to [go]
 To Joyous Mafon a litill fpace them fro.
 Now rest I will to speike more of the King
 Whill I fay of Clariodus sum thing.

Clariodus hes gart ane varlot go
 1290 To Windiefchor, to fetch him speiris mo.
 This varlot hard rehearfing in the toun,
 How that the King at morne sould make him boune
 To fe the juffing upon the letter day ;
 Whairfor he sped him hame but mair delay.
 And quhen he com before Clariodus,
 He presentit him the speiris, faying thus,
 My Lord, I hard rehearfing in the toun,
 The nobill King, with monie bauld barroun,

Sall cum the morne the justing for to fie,
 1300 In all his hee triumph and royaltie ;
 The lustie Queine, and eike hir dochter fair,
 With monie ane seamlie ladie wilbe thair ;
 Ane Lord is cum unto the court this night,
 He seimes baith to be wyfe and wicht,
 The morne quhilk hes taine the justing on hand,
 The governour they call him of England ;
 The King himself he schaipis him to convoy
 With great triumph of plesance and of joy.
 I saw the Queine furth at ane windo ly,
 1310 With monie ane lady and damofell hir by.
 And thair I saw the fair Meliades,
 The tender blome of zouth and lustines,
 Distingeand the rest about with hir bewtie ;
 As the day star full of benignitie
 Surmuntis everie star situat
 In the illuminus hevinis stellat
 Scho is the lodstar full of lustines,
 Of womanheid baith ladie and maistres :
 My Lord, I trow in trewth had ze hir seine,
 1320 That scho schould greatlie [by zow] praisit beine.
 When of this tyding hard Clariodus,
 In breift he was wonder glaid and joyous,
 That uneis for glaidnes he nicht conteine,
 Remembering on Meliades the scheine,
 Quhilk was of bewtie the verie flour and rose ;
 Hir cuming so greatlie did him reiose,
 Within his breift his heart dancit aloft,
 Of his fair fortoun thanking God full oft.
 Unto the varlot for his gud tydings,
 1330 He gart be gevin fortie French florings ;

Syne gart he fetch the gud Lord of that place,
 And of this thing he tauld him all the cace ;
 Commanding him anone to caus be maid,
 For fight of Lordis, skaffaldis heich and braid
 On ather half, quhen the justing fould be,
 Hecher and lower efter thair degree
 Of nobillis and barrouns on tham fould stand ;
 And efter that to cover them, so ordand,
 With leves greine, and flouris reid and quheit,
 1340 And bricht main bloffomis bluming with delyt,
 That na tre falbe seine for leif and floure ;
 Ouerfpred with Mayis carpits of verdoure.
 He ordanit eike two skaffaldis to be maid
 [In reall stait, and all with purpour claid,]
 And fyne arayit with filkis thair abone
 And claith of gold, as michtie Mars his throne ;
 The ane he ordanit for the Kings Majestie,
 Ane uther for the Queinis royaltie
 And for hir dochter Meliades the bricht.
 1350 He ordanit eike ane fair hall fould be dicht
 Of turnour warke, owerclad with leves greine,
 And brightest bloffomis that on bewes beine ;
 And bad tham thair all necessaris intake,
 Heir ane triumphant banquet for to make.
 Sir Pennent said, My Lord, goe zow repose,
 And I anone fall follow zour purpose.
 This forsaid Knight gart searh all the cuntrie,
 And fetchit thair all workmen that war flee,
 Wrichtis, and maisters of geometrie,
 1360 And maist practitioneris of theotrie,
 Carvors, painters, and subtillest devyfers,
 To make the listis to the interprifers,

- Quha in that land of cunning was or pryfe,
 Or had ane curious mynd or devyfe.
 Name bot it was in fortrefe or in touris,
 Or in the hall was depaintit luftie flouris,
 Or in the hinging of the tapeftrie,
 Or in the liftis buildit royallie,
 Was never hard, of fo fchort provifoun,
 1370 So curious wark in no regioun.
 Clariodus went to [his] bed to fleipe,
 Bot of his Ladie ever in mynd tuke keipe,
 Now braiding in his dreime for joy,
 And now efcarting for langour and for noy;
 Now flumbering foft, now braid awaiking,
 Now ficing deip, [and] now for joy finging.
 How oft in breiftis flitis joy and blis,
 As weill ge know that lovers beine I wife,
 Of thame that loves fervandis beine alway.
 1380 Into his bed now mufing as he lay,
 He thocht if that his Father come in field
 Againeft him in armes under fcheild,
 Then that he wald aluterlie forbeir,
 And not tuich his bodie with ane fpeir;
 Bot onlie that he wald his helme unlace,
 And geild him to his Father with bair faice:
 For certanlie my Author tellis me thus,
 That wounder wyfe was this Clariodus,
 Richt juft and [gude and] mercifull in heart,
 1390 Having all tyme the dreid of God inwart;
 Devote he was, and full of humbilnes,
 Rycht gentill, and repleit with nobilnes;
 QUILKE maid him forward ay in all maneir,
 And lovit with the peple far and neir.

- Richt as the lustie candill matutine
 Begouth with cristall visage for to schyne,
 Befor Aurora, I meine the Morrow star,
 For bewtie that clippit is Lucifer,
 Throw persing licht of quhais beimis schein,
 1400 Walknit for love the rewthfull Philomen,
 With angillis voice singand befor the day ;
 Clariodus, quhilk langer fleipe no may,
 Furth walkit into his mantill and his farke
 For bissines, to gar men heast his warke,
 Quhilk all that nicht had not fleipit with ey,
 Bot bissie war in labour eydentlie ;
 Craftis men haistit thair wark perfay,
 The Knicht Sir Pennent standing thame by,
 Devising thingis maist expedient
 1410 For honour of his Lord armipotent.
 Quhen that the worthie, wicht Clariodus
 About the lists ane quhyle had passit thus,
 Seing that everie thing was donne aricht,
 Becaus he litill fleipit had that nicht,
 He went unto his chalmer and tuike rest
 Quhill that the prince of planits him up drest ;
 The goldin glemes of gleiting skyis cleir,
 Did hevinlie in the orient appeir ;
 Up raise bricht Phebus with the morrow soft,
 1420 Up raise the noife of birdis upon loft,
 Up raise the nobill King and eike the Queine,
 Up raise also Meliades the schein,
 Up raise the court, and did them all adrese
 In pretious weidis of great lustines.
 The Queine did hir aray full richlie,
 And hir atyrit full pretionllie ;

- And eike the lustie madin Meliades
 Into hir heart could na mair joy devise
 Nor scho had for to go fe the justing,
 1430 To fe him that scho did love abone all thing.
 Quhen of this passage scho was full affurit,
 With pretious stonis, and rich pearle and purit,
 Scho did hir fresche and lustilie atyre ;
 Hir schyning hair as [the] bricht gold wyer
 Hang schyning into gyltine traces cleir,
 With croun upon hir heid baith rich and deir
 Set full of roobies and sapheiris blew ;
 Ane fairer princes in all the warld nane knew.
 The Count of Estur enarmit him rycht anone
 1440 At all pairtis, save of his helme alone.
 Quhen they hard mese and fyne disjunit,
 The silver trumpit fyne uptunit.
 For hors they cryit : the King lape on rycht thair,
 All coverit with his armis gud and fair :
 The Queine raid in ane chariot on height,
 All coverit with ane claith of gold full bricht
 Browderit with pretious stonis and pearlis quhyt,
 Quhilk to behold it was [ane] great delyte :
 Ilke in ane chariot raid this goung Princes ;
 1450 Of gold and stonis great was the riches
 About hir schynit freschlie as the day ;
 Two snaw quhyt palfrayes led hir furth the way,
 With harnisching more nor I can schaw ;
 For gold and stonis nicht no man hir knaw ;
 Threttie ladies followit hir weill befeine,
 Alse bricht of bewtie as the bloffume scheine :
 The Count of Estur ascendit on his steid,
 With mony ane knicht [attyr] in fresch weid,

- Quhilk buire his speiris and with him abaid ;
 1460 With his bricht helme ane Lord before him raid.
 I let them pase rycht glad and soberly,
 And of the Greine Knicht [fum thing] speik will I.
 The Greine Knicht redie was into his tent.
 The Knicht Sir Pennent ay full bissie went,
 Putting all things in rule and governance,
 Great policie he maid at all plesance.
 When he thocht everie thing was at poynt,
 That from perfectioun thair was no disjoynt,
 For Lordis that war dwelling neir thame by 1470 He sent for twelf, abuilzeit reallie,
 For to refave the King with great honour,
 Quhilk neir aprochit with court of great valour.
 And or the King com neir the justing place,
 They micht his minsfrellis heir ane long space;
 Heich was the noyse, and curious was the found
 Of talbert, trumpit, and of clarioun.
 Quhen that the King was cuming neir the feild,
 He hovit still, and attentivlie beheld
 The gudlie entres raisit upon heicht,
 1480 All browderit and depaintit with leves bricht,
 With gudlie flouris wounder fresche to be feine,
 The blumes quhyt, and the leves greine,
 The variant hewis without of purpour thine,
 With cloath of gold arayit all within,
 The curious kinnellis ryfeing upon heicht
 Glittering and schyning so winder fair and bricht.
 Great was the joy thay had on everie fyd,
 For to behold the Greine Knicht as he did ryd.
 The King said that it was the gudliest sicht,
 1490 That ever he saw in eard of ony wicht ;

So said the lordis and knichtis all in feir.
 The nobill Queine and all the ladies cleir
 Great joy had him to se on sik ane wyfe ;
 And maist of all, the fair Meliades
 Rejosit was that Knicht for to behold,
 Whom to hir heart withoutin straike was gold ;
 To se him ryd so knichtlie in his weid,
 That love hir sa streingzeit withoutin dreid,
 That it ane feikness grew about hir heart,
 1500 That suddant start scho micht it not escart
 Of Cupidis bow so big againis hir bent,
 From quhilk ane hundreth awfull dartis went
 Ilk efter uther, with woundis greine and new,
 Throw quhais stoundis scho oft changit hew,
 Almaist hir passioun infufferabill,
 Amongs them also scho is to fune abill ;
 And efter that scho wald recover a stound,
 And with sic comfort and great joy abound,
 That uneis for glaidnes [scho] micht contene ;
 1510 And thus for love this lusty] Lady beine.
 Quhen redie war thir nobill Knichtis two,
 The Kingis herald cryit, Let them go.
 Full haistilie than rowmit was the feild,
 And to thair meiting everie man beheld.
 The Count of Estur com redie in his geir :
 And the Greine Knicht anone hes taine his speir ;
 Bot he his helme no way wald let lace,
 Whairof his felow grit mervell hes ;
 The caus quhairof ge fall wit efter founne.
 1520 Anone the trumpits blew a mirrie toune ;
 The Knichtis baith com to so wonder fair,
 That all men them commendit that war thair.

The Grein Knicht softlie did his courser steir ;
 Bot quhen he did aproch his Father neir,
 Alfweith his lance fourth of his reist he threw,
 And from his heid his helme he af drew,
 And to his Father he hes offerit his speir,
 Saying, with glaidfume visage and with faire,
 My Lord, I geild me to zow but straike,
 1530 So as ze list of me zour conquise make.
 The Count of Eftur him beholding thus,
 And saw it was his sonne Clariodus,
 Also his speir to grund he caist him fro,
 And af hes hivit his helme or he wald ho,
 And in his armis heir he did him brace,
 And tenderlie him kiffit in that place.
 Great wounder had the peple all about,
 Upon this thing had ferlie all the rout ;
 Bot quhen they wist it was Clariodus,
 1540 The clamour raise and noyse mervellous
 Amongis them, over all baith auld and zing,
 For, certes, they him lovit over all thing,
 And with ane clamour ryfing to the sky,
 VIVE, VIVE CLARIODUS, they cry.
 The Lordis lape from skaffald heir and thair,
 And maid him for to licht with freindlie fair ;
 Bot they uneis in armes nicht him fang
 For preife of peple that about him thrang.
 The nobill King so glaid was this to feine,
 1550 For joy the teiris ran doune from his eine ;
 Glaid was the Queine, and all hir Ladies eik :
 Bot maist of all Meliades the meike,
 Intill hir eyis full plefand was the ficht
 Of him that was hir fervand and hir Knicht,

- Quhilk conqueist had hir honour and renoune
 Over all uther Knichts but comparifoun.
 What fall I of hir joyes to gow wryt ?
 I can not have hir gladnes put in dyte.
 The King discendit from his skaffald thair ;
 1560 So did the Queine, and eik hir dochter fair.
 Clariodus tham met full courteslie,
 And on his kneis sat doun full reverentlie,
 Helving the King, quhom he tuike up alswewith
 Up in his armes, and with his visage blyth
 Him kiffit sweitlie, and eik so did the Queine,
 And syne Meliades that Lady scheinie.
 Lordis and ladies did fo about him thrift,
 Him welcuming, that redlie he no wift
 Whom to answeir or to thank in thair ;
 1570 Bot ay inclynand with ane visage fair.
 Quhen knight and lord, lady and baitcheleir
 Had him refavit with ane frindlie cheir,
 Richt courteslie the King he did beseike,
 And syne the Queine, and the young Ladie eik,
 To pas and tham repose into the place ;
 Thay grantit him, and went furth with solace ;
 They enterit in the place, and syne anone
 In ane fair chalmer he maid them for to gone ;
 The Lord syne of the place he gart him bring,
 1580 And his aquentance thair maid with the King,
 And with the Queine, and with Meliades.
 When this was donne, he said upon this wyfe
 Unto the King, Sir, most it gow effeiris,
 To go and loufe gon werie priffoneris ;
 To quhilk the King hes grantit with gud will,
 The Count of Estur he gart remaine thair fill,

- And eik with him his sone Clariodus,
 To make the Ladies mirrie and joyous.
 He enterit in the chalmer of plesance,
 1590 Whair that the priffoners fould dre thair pennance.
 Thir nobill Knichtis quhen they saw the King,
 They war rejosit into mikle thing ;
 Thay did inclyne and did him reverence,
 Richt as effeirit to his excellence.
 He speirit of thair fasshoun and thair cheir
 Sen the first tym thay enterit priffoneir ;
 And thay have tauld him all the circumstance
 Of all thair feisting, and thair great plesance.
 The King beheld the chalmer then wislie ;
 1600 And seing it arayit so richlie,
 Espying all thair playing instruments,
 Thair feisting, and thair plesant abaitments,
 Thair dancing, singing, with soun of minstrellie,
 The King said, Ze ar beholdin grittumlie
 To the Greine Knicht hes zow priffoned so,
 Ze have felt mair of glaidnes nor of wo ;
 Syne them befor Clariodus he brocht,
 Saying to them, Know ze the Greine Knicht ocht ?
 How lykis it zow zour taiker, schaw to us ?
 1610 And quhen they saw it was Clariodus,
 Mirrier Knights war never under the sone ;
 Thair men nicht se ane game new begune,
 Thay did inclyne to him full courteslie,
 And he imbracit tham full tenderlie ;
 He kissit Amadur and also Pallëxis,
 Quhilk was his coufings of sik nobilnes.
 The Knichts then deliverit war anone.
 The King then to the triumph hall is gone,

- Quhilk browderit was [with] leives and with flours,
 1620 Richt lustie fair and plesant ower missours.
 The King commedit it rycht greattumlie,
 So did the Queine, and eik the young Ladie ;
 The Count of Estur praisit it also.
 They wofche and to the denner fyne did go.
 To the tabill anone was fet the King,
 The Queine, and eik Meliades the zing ;
 At the same burd sat the Earle of Estur.
 The Merchellis of discretion and nurture
 Full bissilie went ben and but the hall ;
 1630 At uther buirdis that war collaterall
 They fet the Lordis efter thair degrees,
 With potent barouns, knichtis, and ladies.
 And as the first cours com in randound,
 The mirrie trumpits maid ane mirrie found ;
 Of clariouns schill, and uther minstrellie,
 I wist thair was ane hevinlie melodie ;
 The found out throw the silver mettel thrang,
 Whill all the grit hall throw the noyise rang.
 Thair monie diverse course for to declair
 1640 Ane houris lenth fould occupie and mair,
 Quhilk neidis not for to be tauld all heire ;
 Great was the feist with hie triumph and cheir.
 When filence beine of windand minstrellie,
 And buird beine servit, by and by
 The luits beine sayit and the strings,
 The squyeris dandling alway in the springs,
 The harpis beine sayit at the full
 To make hearts mirrie that war dull ;
 The guthtrone with triumph did record,
 1650 The cleare fymball with the mirriecord,

The dulcat playit alfo with portative
 Sad hevie myndis to make exultative ;
 The dulce, bafe fiddell, with the recordour
 Affayit war and fet at ane miffoure ;
 Out of Irland ther was ane clerfcheo.

[The King begouth to lauch, the Quein alfo,]

And then luich all, and maid grit game,
 He could not mirrie be that thair was drame ;
 For thair nocht wantit of all warldlie joy

1660 That ever had fair Priamus of Troy.

The mekill hall was fervit far and neir
 Of rich wynis in goldin coupis cleir.
 And betwix courfis was ane padgeane playit,
 Into play coats they curiouflie war arayit,
 By great inchanters and fubtill magicianis.
 Sweit finging was of craftieft muficianis,
 And mirrie danfing of tender virginis quhyt,
 With plesant ftories all of Homer's indyte ;
 And mirrie fabillis of Guido de Colune,

1670 Eik was thair fynis of padgeanis playit dumbe.

If I fould tell zow all the long proces,
 I fould zow irk be furfat of exces ;
 For beft is ane difcretioun moderat,
 For everie thing aucht to be temperat.
 The Kingis heralds larglie cryit aloud,
 Of gold and filver, and of feimlie fchroud,
 Gevin to them be Sir Clariodus,
 That was both wicht, wittie, and famous ;
 Quhilk all this quhyle was on his feit ftanding,

1680 For he was maifter carver to the King.

Bot founne anone he paffit af the hall,
 And tuike with him his priffoneris all ;

Saying to them, My frindis trest and deire,
 Ze do me now the plesour I require,
 That ze wald gounis weir in fuit with me.
 Thairto full glaidlie can [they] all agre.
 He gart furth bring to everie man a goun,
 That at the listis he had strikin down,
 Of claith of gold, hevinlie hewit greine,
 1690 Furrit with mertrix gudlie for to feine.
 Quhilk gouns he gart make for thame onlie,
 Of his great wifdome, and his courtasie.
 To Sir Pennent ane gown gave he also,
 [And he] himself that day wore ane of tho.
 With him thay dynit in the chalmer thair,
 Syne to the hall [thay] all togider fair,
 Quhair that the King sat [at] his denner fill.
 This lustie fort of Knichtis went him till,
 And thankit him of his great gentilnes,
 1700 To thame donne be his passing nobilnes.
 Of Sir Clariodus of great renoune
 Then said the King with richt bening fermoune
 Unto the Count of Estur; Fair coufingne,
 I weinit our Knichts fould thair ranfoum bring;
 For to have gevin Clariodus gour sone;
 Bot to gif them he hes first begune.
 The Count of Esture [ansuerit] Per mon fay,
 The nobill Knichtis speikis more largely
 Anents my sone I wait, nor he hes defervit;
 1710 Ane greater guerdoun for to have thay servit.
 Quhen this was donne, thay wolch and said grace,
 Syne to the floore they went them to folace.
 On instrumens menstrelles playit curioullie,
 Lords, knichts, and ladies danfit mirrillie.

Be this thair enterit into the hall
 The sex fair Virgins, lustie, quhite and small,
 That led the Greine Knight to the justing place ;
 As rose and lillie cullour was thair face ;
 All cled in cloath of silver new and greine
 1720 Of plesant bewtie, angellyk to seine ;
 With hairis bundin in traces of gold,
 Schyning full bricht and plesant to behold ;
 All with greine hatis on thair heidis set,
 With stainis and pearle nichtilie ouerfret ;
 With sex fair Squyers cled in the same cullour
 Them leading, for to se was great plesoure.
 First thrie com in, of quhilk the formist had
 Upon hir hand ane fair sparhalk weill maid ;
 And to the King scho kneillit courteslie,
 1730 And him presentit the halk delyverlie,
 Saying, The Greine Knicht hes this halke gow fend,
 Doing him hartlie to gour Grace commend.
 The King this halk refavit fra the maid,
 I thanke richt heartlie the Greine Knicht, he said.
 The uther thre them followit soberlie,
 Quhilk gave thre leich of hundis beninglie
 Unto the King, and all war cullourit quhyt.
 Thus said the formist madine of delyt,
 The Greine Knicht him commendis to gour Grace.
 1740 Then cryit all the court with mirrie face
 Upon this wayis, VIVE CLARIODUS,
 Baith wyse and worthie, nobill and gratious !
 Then begouth menstrellis mirrilie to play,
 And for to dance zoung knichtis did affay ;
 Clariodus anone begouth to dance,
 And fresch Mcliades of most plesance,

- Quhilk tham becam fo weill and lustily,
 Them for to se great joy had standing by ;
 The lordis, ladies, and knichtis in the hall
 1750 Danfit anone. Thus mirrie maid thay all.
 When that the dance was ceifit, then the King
 Clariodus befoght that he wald fing.
 The quhilk begouth to fing on gudlie wyfe
 The song that he had maid of Meliades ;
 Ane squyer of his him helpit courteslie,
 Whilk sang the tennour wonder plesandlie.
 When he had sung it, [then] he tuike delyt,
 And it into ane role cloffit perfite,
 And put [it] in the hand of his Ladie
 1760 Without parfaving, wonder quyetlie.
 Meliades glaidlie tuike the sang,
 And previlie scho in hir slive it thrang ;
 Syne [secreitlie] his hand scho streingit, thus,
 Half smyling, saying, Sir, ge ar perrellous
 Amongs ladies in companie to stand,
 That fo can thring thir billis in thair hand.
 All eardlie joy for ane quhile dois bot left ;
 When his lustie triumph was mirrieft
 The King gart call for horse, and that anone
 1770 But more delay, for he wald hameuard gone ;
 Sir Pennent he rewairdit moniefold,
 And held him still as knicht of his houshold ;
 His Ladie fair, and hir sex Virgins scheine,
 He gart becum in houshold to the Queine.
 To Windieschoir the King I let furth ryd.
 Clariodus behind him did abyd
 For to rewaird the fervants of the place,

And so he did rycht larglie with folace ;
 Syne followit on the Court quhilk him abaid,
 1780 And rycht humblie to the King he raid,
 And thankit him of his magnificence,
 And eik the Queine of hir great excellence,
 Quhilk gave thair nobill prefence in the hall ;
 Meliades he thankit eik withall.
 With court royall, thus raid the King furth rycht
 To Windischore, and thair he did alycht,
 Whair [that] the supper redie was at all.
 The King and Queine ar enterit in the hall,
 And to the tabill [war] set nichtilie ;
 1790 And everilk lord of honour, and ladie,
 War set at supper efter thair degrie,
 And servit fyne with great solemnitie.
 The King commandit Sir Pennent the Knicht
 Sould feistit be, and eik his Ladie bricht,
 And the sex Virgins ; quhilk was donne at all.
 Then menstrallis playit lustilie in the hall.
 Rycht as thay souppit had and said the grace,
 So com the Kingis brother Sir Thomas ;
 Him welcumit the King on fair maneir,
 1800 As ge fall efter in this proces heir.
 Ze nicht have feine ane richt triumphant thing,
 Of gudlie knichtis had beine at justing ;
 Bot fra he saw the honnour and the feist,
 That thair was maid baith more and leif
 Unto the Count of Estur and Clariodus,
 He grew in breift haitfull and invyous ;
 And in his mynd with felloune rancour fyrit
 He hes ane false and feindlie fact conspyrit

Agains Clariodus the wicht and wyfe,
 1810 And eike agains his neice Meliades ;
 Quhilk tham engreifit oft in grit maneir,
 As ze fall efter in this Treatese heir.
 The King gart have him to ane chalmer fair,
 And royallie gart him be feiftit thair.

When this was donne, the King to chalmer went,
 With mony earlis, knichtis, and lordis potent,
 With mekill glaidnes and with folacing,
 With minftrellis fyne, quhair thay did dance and fing
 Ane weill lang fpace; fyne everie lord anone
 1820 Hes taine his leive, fyne to his Inis is gone.
 Meliades hir leave hes taine at the Queine,
 And went to chalmer with hir ladies fcheine ;
 And quhen fcho was in chalmer quyetlie,
 With hir awin fecrite fervants gone onlie,
 With the advyfe and leive of hir maiftres,
 Scho caufit dame Romaryn hir adrefe
 To fetch the Lady of Joyous Mafon,
 To make to hir ane mirrie collation.
 Scho bad the varlot Bonvaleur alfo
 1830 That he for Sir Clariodus fould go.

Now Romaryn hes donne this Ladie bring,
 And the fex Virgins plesant and bening ;
 The varlot eik hes brocht Clariodus.
 Meliades was then in heart joyous,
 And tham refavit with ane plesant cheir,
 And with ane fweit and womanlie maneir,
 Sayand to [Sir] Clariodus hir Knight,
 Supple me at gour pouer and gour micht,
 This Ladie for to feift, and make gud cheir.

- 1840 He said, Madame, forsuith my commoun wer,
 For scho hes oft me feistit [weill] for this.
 Ane banquit than begane with joy and blife.
 Meliades then tuike hir be the hand
 With womanlie effeir, doing hir command
 For to begine the tabill mirrilie ;
 Bot this gud Ladie full of courtesie
 Excuisit hir to fit so hé at tabill
 With hir that was a princes honorabill ;
 Bot that nicht be no bute scho fat [hir] doune,
- 1850 With Amadour ane Kniicht of grit renoune.
 And eik scho baid, with wordis amiabill,
 Clariodus to stand besyd the tabill
 And be ane carvour. To quhilk he did consent.
 Lower fat uther ladies consequent.
 Dame Romaryn with twa ladies hir by
 Servit the tabill winder reverently.
 Great was the banquit and plesant was the cheir,
 With mirrie wordis rycht joyous for to heir,
 With fair effeir and rycht glaid countenance,
- 1860 With easie fichis grundit on plesance,
 With law demandis of ladies by and by,
 With sweit love songs and cumlie minstrelly,
 With secreit blenkis and inwart beholding,
 With smylling loukis full of cherising,
 With birning breist of thrift and hote desyre
 With quhilk ilk wicht stomakit beine in fyre ;
 With all thair plesant drinkis at the tabill,
 With thrift of love so wode and infatiabill
 Within thir lovers breistis did abound,
- 1870 Whair Cupids darts had maid monie ane wounde.

Thair courfis heir I will not all indyte,
 I man on neid restraine my pen alite
 Or be ouer prolix in my fermoning.

When they had long with joy and conforting,
 So nobillie feiftit that lang it war to tell,
 All up thay raise, ladie and damofell,
 And rycht demurlie ane dance thay begane,
 Ane gudlier faw never leiveand man.
 Efter the dance, begouth they for to fing ;
 1880 Meliades with countenance bening
 The tribill fang, full angill lyke and cleir,
 So that it was ane paradice to heir ;
 Ane nobill tenor held Clariodus,
 The same to heir was hevinlic and joyous.

Whill long upon this wayis thay did disporte,
 The circumfance war long for to reporte.
 When it was lait, than leave tuike everie wicht,
 The Ladie kneillit and said, Madam, Gud nicht.
 Meliades gart bring of rich collour
 1890 Ane goune of claith of gold of grit valour,
 And to the Ladie of Joyous Mafone
 It presentit, faying with bening fermone,
 Ze fall refavein this, gentill Coufingne,
 And for my faik weir it with glaidening.
 This Lady kneillit, thanking hir hartfully.
 Syne gart scho bring the sex Virgins hir by
 Sex fair gounis of velvot cramofie,
 With rich arming reverfit nobillie.
 Clariodus rycht glaid was for to fe,
 1900 Of this Ladie the great nobilitie ;
 Hir passing fredome quhen he did espy,

He was rejosit wounder grittumlly.
 Thay tuike thair leaves, thair is no mair to lay,
 Sir Clariodus convoyit all the way
 This Lady to hir chalmer, and anone
 He tuike his leave and unto bed is gone.
 At morrow raife all the lordis in feir,
 And at the Kingis palice did compeire.
 The feist indurit furth ane monethes space,
 1910 With finging, danfing, and joy with folace ;
 Syne lordis tuike thair leave and hamewart went
 In court quhilk war not daylie resident.
 Sir Pennent tuike his leave with his Ladie,
 Rewairdit be the King rycht honorabillie,
 Whom convoyit Clariodus the Knicht,
 Oft thanking thame with all his wit and nicht
 Of the grit kindnes that he into thame fand ;
 And gart delyver them, but mair demand,
 Aucht hundereth florings : bot Sir Pennent I wife
 1920 Was wounder laith for to refavein this ;
 Bot he most neidis refave it with instance
 Of Sir Clariodus, that nobill Knicht most to advance.
 Than ather uther imbracit tenderlie,
 And tuik thair leave rycht fair and courteslie.
 Kiffit the Ladie hes Clariodus,
 Returning hamwart mirrie and joyous
 Unto the court, quhair he remainit still,
 And thair had daylie plesance at his will
 Of his Ladie, and commoning also.
 1930 Whairfor thair heartis brocht war out of woe.
 The Count of Estur tuike his leave to ryd
 To his cuntrie, ane quhill thair to abyd

With his Ladie, to put in governance
His landis haill be gud rewle and ordinance.

The King I let dwell fill at Windieschore,
Whill I zow tell of new tydingis more,
In hiforie as my Awthor dois affend,
And on this wayis the Secund Buike I end.

THE THRID BUIK
CLARIODUS.

THE King of Cyprus with his court ryding
Endlang the strandis, in ane fair morning,
Beheld ane schipe with wind and waves dryve,
Quhilk on the coast be tempest did aryve,
Whairin war marchandis out of Sarifinis land.
The King descendit to heir of thair tydand.
They schew him that the Caine of Tartarie
With fortie thousand Turkis was redie
To enter in his land incontinent,
10 And him persew with weiris vehement ;
And said, that thay his ordinance had feine,
Quhilk on the sea war cumand all bedeine.
The King abaiffit was [richt] grittumlie,
And for his counsall sent he haiftilie ;
And quhan that with his lordis he beine advyfit,
For his vassellis to fend thay have devifit,
That thay within fyve dayis fould compeir
On thair best wyse, on hors and armour cleir ;

- And to gar provide tounis with victuall,
 20 For to withstand his foes that fould affail.
 This beand donne, the King and eike the Queine
 To Bruland went, ane toun with wallis scheine,
 And thair within providit for ane geir.
 His letters he derectit far and neir
 In his cuntrie, and wairnit all his leigis
 In ilk toun to provide for the feigis.
 Thair com to Bruland be the fyvetine day
 Awcht thousand speiris in full gud aray ;
 Of quhilkis the King held four thousand still,
 30 The uther half they fent the Marches till,
 To keip the cuntrie endlang the coast.
 The Kingis will fulfillit ather hoft.
 Within schort tyme the Turkis did aryve,
 And to Bruland aprochit thay belyve,
 And thair the feige full stronglie thay confirme ;
 The Sowdane with his lordis did determe
 To have the toune or ever they fra it raid,
 And thairon grit avoues have thay maid.
 The King to counfall with his lordis went,
 40 And ordanit folkis in guid abuilgement
 For to affay the Turkis day by day.
 The Cyprianis rycht manfullie did affay
 The Sarafinis full oft with sword and speir,
 And ifchit out on them with awfull feir ;
 On quhais meiting was grit occifioun,
 On baith the fydis was slauchter rycht felloun.
 The wird of quhilk com to the reallem of France,
 Of quhilk the King had [fo] grit displefance,
 Twa thowfand speiris he fent them to fupport,
 50 With his Constabill ; quhilk redie maid at schort,

And passit [strait] to Cyprus the cuntrie,
 To Carados ane walled toune by sea,
 Whilk was ane myle from Bruland and no more,
 Whair thay on Sarafinis affailzit fore.

- From France to Ingland com this ilk tyding.
 When it confavit Philipon the King,
 He was displeasit [eik] in great maneir,
 The King of Cyprus was his coufing neir.
 First with his counfall he did him advyse,
 60 Syne to Clariodus upon this wyse
 He said, Ze ar ane Knicht of nobill fame,
 Throuchout the warld spargit is zour name ;
 My brother of Cyprus and eame I mone support,
 Quhairfoir ze take with zow ane lustie forte
 Of men of armis, aucht hundreth that ar wicht,
 And speid zow to the thrift with all zour nicht ;
 For ze fall capitane be and governour
 Unto that rout as Knicht of great valoure.
 Then said Clariodus, I thank zow grittumlie,
 70 Zour Heines Sir, that me so nobillie
 List to advance into so heich renoune :
 Bot I ungainand am ; be this refoune,
 He fould ane lord be of gritter knowlege
 And wit of weirlie experience and age
 Nor am I : zit to take sic thing on hand,
 Nocht this I fay, zour Heichnes to gainstand ;
 For I no tyme zour command will refuse,
 My unskillience I speke this to excuse.
 Thair is no bute heirin to speik no more,
 80 Clariodus most neidis make thore.
 The King gart founne his Letters furth adres
 For knichtis of grit fame and worthines.

- When that the armie cuming was all cleir,
 Clariodus, he said, on this maneir,
 Thir folkis I beteach in gour keeping,
 More trufing in gour wit and governing
 Nor ony uther Knicht in all my ringne ;
 This companie thairfor I zow refigne,
 Befeikand zow tham wyllie to demane,
 90 Whill ze in Ingland vifie us againe.
 With that he did imbrace Clariodus,
 Taking his leave with wordis pitious ;
 Wha said unto the King, Wald God that I
 All gour command fall doe fo diligently,
 Efter my wit and my knowleging,
 That to gour Heichnes falbe grit pleasing.
 With wordis of pitie and of tendernes
 He tuike his leave this nicht ; and did adres
 Unto the Queine, and tuike his leave humblie ;
 100 And at Meliades, quhilk fecreitlie
 Bad him, that he sould quyetlie at eve,
 Unto hir wairdrope cum and take his leave.
 Meliades unto hir chalmer went,
 And all hir ladies unto thair bedis fent,
 Saying, scho was difpofit hevilie,
 Whairfor scho wald that nicht [all] quyetlie
 Repofe hir in hir wardrop at hir eafe.
 This Ladie, quhom na joyes nicht appeafe
 For the departing of Clariodus,
 110 With ane regrating wondour dolorus
 Adoune scho fet hir at hir bed feit,
 Full forrowfull, and brifing out of greit,
 Bedewing all hir gudlie vifage faire
 With teiris bricht, out letting fitches fair,

As scho that mundane joy [wald ay] denud.
 Romaryn bad hir be in comfort gud,
 And preichit hir with wurdis of plesance ;
 Saying, Madame, in heart take no pennance,
 For ze fould rather glaid and mirrie be,
 120 Confiddering that he passis in suplie
 Of Cristine men, the Sarafinis to resist.
 All this nicht not hir from weiping desift,
 Bathit in teiris wox hir bricht visage ;
 Scho said, Let be, how fould my wo allwage,
 When he that is the flour of chivalrie,
 So luifing me, and I him so tenderlie,
 Sall pairt from me into so far cuntrie,
 Nocht witing efter if I fall him se ;
 Now quhat fall wurd of me fra he be gone?
 130 My heart is deid and cauld lyke ony ston ;
 Ha Romareine, aleace, quhat fall I fay,
 How fould I leive, my heart is all away !
 Thus weipit scho and waillit pitioullie,
 That ony wicht nicht rewth have and mercie
 Hir to behold, or git in chalmer be ;
 Thair is no wicht so crewell but pitie,
 That nicht from teiris hold, or git conteine
 Of weiping, fra this Lady he had seine.
 Softly scho said, Romaryn go espy,
 140 Furth at the garding postrum quyety,
 If that my Knicht be cumit thair or nocht.
 This Romaryn hes hir commandement wrocht,
 And fand him at the get, and him resavit ;
 Syne up to wardrope passit unperfavit,
 [Where that his Ladie lay on couch alone]
 Deadlie of cheir as in her lyfe war none.

Adoune he sat befyd hir on his kne,
 For love of God, he said, Madame, let be
 Your cair and woe, and take to you glaidnes ;
 150 For out of dread, I have more hevines
 For sorrow of you nor dowbill of my smert
 Albeit that daith fould take me be the heart ;
 Ze aucht be glaid, Madame, of this voyage,
 For all my freindis of this ilk passage,
 This wait I weill, thay fould it mirrie maik,
 And forie be if it I fould forsaik ;
 Quhilk if I had for ony dreid refuifit,
 Of couardice men wald me have accufit,
 Than had I beine degradit and unabill
 160 To love ane Kingis dochter amiabill.
 Madam, have mercie on your awin woe ;
 Gif ze no list, aleace, for to do so,
 For love of God then mercie have on me,
 That may for pitie not fusteine to se
 The sorrowful sight of you my Ladie sweit.
 With that the Knicht anone brist out to greit,
 That he no wurdis mo as then might speke
 For inward wo ; it seemit his heart fould breke,
 So did the sword of sorrow throw it glyd.
 170 Thir loveris weiping [fo] on everie fyd,
 Quercum with painis innumerabill,
 With sighis and sobis uncoverabill
 Within thair breifis, that long they spake na thing,
 For nather of them could ane word out bring ;
 With hir was nocht, bot ay, Aleace, my Knicht !
 And he againe, Aleace, my Ladie bricht !
 And thus thay fure quhile it was neir the day,
 Than [wakefull] Romaryn did often say,

- The nicht was fullie gone, [the] day aprochit ;
 180 Quhilk wurd outhrow [baith] thair heartis brochit
 Scharp as ane lance, quhilk neidit not I weine,
 For sorrow aneuch was ellis thame betwine.
 Then said Clariodus, My Lady bricht,
 Thair is no mair, Fairweill, and have gud nicht ;
 I recommend me to gour ladyheid,
 Oft prayand God preserve gour gudlieheid ;
 Think on my faith, think on my trew service,
 Think on gour Knicht. And quhen Meliades
 Saw no refuge, bot he wald pairt hir fro,
 190 In swoune scho fell for inward paine and woe.
 In armis softlie tuike Clariodus,
 And with ane cheir full fad and dollorus,
 On bed hir laid full tenderlie and soft,
 And with his hands he held hir heid on loft,
 Beholding on hir gudlie visage cleir,
 Whairon the rolling teiris did appeare,
 As bricht dew dropis upon the lillie quhyte ;
 Quhairof the deadlie woe can no man indyt,
 Nor half the cair of Sir Clariodus ;
 200 His hard regrat to heir was pitious.
 With cauld rose water com Romaryn fast,
 And on hir face and handis did it cast ;
 Bot lang scho lay with deadlie visage greine,
 That it was rewth and pitie for to feine.
 And quhen that scho ourcom, scho did up braid,
 Whair beine my Knicht Clariodus ? scho said.
 Quoth he, My heartis Ladie I am heir,
 For love of God make now sum better cheir,
 And think that we fall meit git efter this,
 210 Quhen we fall have ineuch of joy and blis ;

My only Ladie traift withoutin dreid,
 That for your faike againe I fall me speid
 Into all haift; and eik ze fal beleive,
 That I fo laith am your [thus] for to greive,
 That lang I fall not byd from your prefence,
 For unto me ane death is your abfence.
 Forfuith fcho faid, Clariodus, I trow
 That of this warld depairts from uther now
 The treweft lovers, and the maift faithfull eike;
 220 And of ane thing my Knight I your befeike,
 Thocht ze be far fra me in ane ftrange ringne,
 That ze be neir to me in fweith thinking;
 And all of fabill falbe myne aray
 Whill ze returne, thairfor make no delay;
 Ze fall have heir of gold ane diamant,
 When ze it fe of me be memorant.
 And he gave hir ane rubbie bricht of hew;
 With that imbracing can thir lovers trow,
 And kifsit utheris with tearis diftelling,
 230 And fo weill long thay flud without fpeiking.
 Depairtit thus the Knight Clariodus,
 And his Ladie, with fighis dollorus.
 It fould me vex and eik my auditouris,
 For to indyte the half of thair dolouris;
 Furth of the chalmer went this wofull wicht,
 With forrowfull teiris blindit was his fight;
 To the poftum Romaryn him convoyit,
 And he, that with melancholie was anoyit,
 Streingit hir hand and nicht na wirts out bring,
 240 And to his chalmer went with fair fighing,
 And upon groufe fell on his bed adoune,
 Making ane forrowfull lamentatioun;

Quhilk war ouer tedious heir for to rehearse,
 Quhairfor I will not put it into verse.
 He tuike na claithis off, he list not to sleip,
 Bot quhile the day he did compleine and weipe.

Romaryn unto hir Ladie went, and said,
 Madam, take comfort and anon be glaid,
 Your Knicht is trew, and will belyve returne
 250 As he hes heicht, and will not long sojorne ;
 And furth scho preichit hir ane fair fermoune :
 Syne in hir bed scho hes hir laid adoune,
 Whair scho maid ane regrat lamentabill,
 Whilk to ane bissie mynd is importabill
 To beir, to aprehend, or to indyte ;
 And eik hir wo me irkis for to wryte,
 For never quhill scho saw hir Knicht againe
 Scho danfit, sang, or wore ane hew bot ane,
 And that was sabill, signe of steidfastnes ;
 260 For so hir heart was cled with hevines,
 That scho no list to cum in companie,
 Bot solitar to walke all quyetlie.

As goldin Phebus the bricht illuminar,
 Ascendit in the orient preclair,
 And his diurnall course had new begune,
 Full lustillie up raise this Mars his sone,
 The flour of armis nixt God armipotent ;
 Clariodus, I meane, full diligent
 Addressit him at morne to his jurnay,
 270 With all the hast and labour that he may.
 When he had servit God and taine disjune,
 The trumpits blew to hors ane mirrie tune ;
 He lape on hors, and all his companie ;
 The Court did him convoy rycht honorabillie,

With all the nobill folkis of the toun :
 Thus raid they furth with trumpit and clarioun
 Whill thay sex myle had him convoyit,
 Thay tuike thair leave, baith burges and barrnet,
 And hame returnit to Windifchore againe.

280 Clariodus anone the flude hes taine,
 He schippit in and all the reall forte,
 And founne they did arive at Bruland porte ;
 So weill to tham did Eolus his part,
 Keiping the wind from everie contrair airt,
 That be the help of him and Neptunus,
 Withouttin storme or raine tempesteous,
 Into the port of Carados thay aryve,
 And from the schipe went unto land belyve ;
 Whom founne perfavit hes the garitouris,
 290 That in the toune and wallis lay and bouris,
 And tauld the King of sic ane companie
 Had in thair port aryvit haifilie.
 Blyth was the King and glaid, for weill he wiff
 That they war freindis, his foes to resiff.

When the grit Constabill of France hard tyding
 Of Sir Clariodus suddant aryveing,
 Rycht glaid he was, for divers to him schew
 Of his valiant deidis and his vertew ;
 Whairfor on hors ascendit he anone,
 300 And diverse lordis maid with him to gone,
 And with grit honour met Clariodus,
 With knichtis valiant and verteous,
 Saying, That he was welcum in that land :
 And ather hes taine uther be the hand,
 And tenderlie maid thair aquentance ;
 Syne to the toune returnit with plesance,

And royallie in at the portis raid.
 The Frensch Constabill hes grit instance maid
 Unto Clariodus, with him to go
 310 To supper, and his tender coufingis two ;
 He grantit him, and baid his companie,
 The fairest lusing and the maist gudlie
 Of all the toun, and thair harberie take ;
 Foure louctennents thairefter gart he make,
 To put his folkis in rewle and governance ;
 To supper syne thay passit with plesance.
 And so among all uther commoning,
 He speirit of the tounis befeiging ;
 And sync of thame within and thair defence,
 320 And of the Cainis hé magnificence,
 Of everilke skirmage and new debait
 Of Cyprianis and of Sarafeinis of lait.
 The Constabill utart everie thing at richt,
 Wha wan the feild, and quha was put to flicht.
 Whilk commoning was plesant and joyous
 Unto the heiring of Sir Clariodus,
 Wha tuike his leave when the supper was done,
 And to his folkis haistit him full soune,
 And bad them all be readie be the day,
 330 Inarmit weill, and into gud aray,
 For he wald let them wit of his cuming.
 Thay grantit glaidlie all to his biding.
 Clariodus reposit him that nicht,
 And on the morne, be the day waxit licht,
 He ischit furth with all his companie,
 Enarmit at all peices nobillie,
 And on the Heathine host full hardilie
 He maid ane haistie onfet, with ane cry,

The mightie God namand upon height ;
 340 With that they rufchit on them with fic micht
 Throuhout the hoft allweith raife the affray,
 For thay war taine all out of [gud] aray.
 Our Cristine men fo fearcelie them affaillit,
 That baith in strenth and hardiment thay faillit.
 Bot throw the bugills and the clariouns foundis,
 Returnit all this false heard of Mahoundis,
 And cruellie fet on Clariodus :
 Bot he, that was both wyfe and chevalrus,
 Loude his anfeinge he did among them cry,
 350 And with his hé renownit companie,
 With fpeiris fcharp fo manlie with them delt,
 Whill monie of thame anone the deid hes felt ;
 Of quhilk up raife the clamour and the found,
 That all the wallis rang of Bruland toun,
 And all the toun of Carrados also ;
 The King himself unto the wallis did go,
 The Constabill of France with monie knight.
 Be this the day upcleirit and wox licht,
 Whair thay micht weill behold the battell,
 360 Wha did defend, and wha did best affaill.
 Ferce was the fight, and awful for to fe,
 On ather fyd thair was bot Do or die.
 Clariodus with michtie fpeir in hand
 Affailzeit fo, no man micht him gainstand,
 Bot ather man or hors geid to the eard,
 Among the Heathen fo manlie he him steird.
 When monie ane fpeir he brokin had afunder,
 He drew his fword, and thocht that it was wonder
 Him to behold, quhilk as ane lyoun wod
 370 Never feicit to fched his foes bluid.

Befor his face, loe, heir ane knicht goes down,
 And thair ane uther lysis into swoune,
 The thrid on arfoun gapis as he war deid,
 Fra sum he carves the arme, and sum the heid,
 That of his deidis grite plesour had the King,
 And so had all the peple auld and zing.
 The French Constabill persavit everilk deill,
 How no helme nicht gainstand his brand of steill,
 And how the Heathin he huntit to and fro,
 380 Howbeit thay war fighteris monie mo,
 Saying, He wenit into threttie knichts
 Had never beine the curage nor the michts,
 That he saw into that Knicht that day.
 His hé honour on all fydis praisit thay.
 Ane Heathin Knicht that was of maist renoune
 On Sarasenis fyd, pryfit ane champioun,
 That to the Caine was verie neir coufigne,
 Quick throw the thikest of the preise did thring,
 And set upon Clariodus the gud ;
 390 He, as [ane] lyoun, asper, feirce and wod,
 Ane speir recoverit [lyand] neir him by,
 And met the Knicht so wonder feircelie,
 And so him raife all through the bodie out,
 That to the eard he dufchit down but doubt.
 With that on height he cryit on his anfinge,
 And he, quhom that no Turkis nicht dereinge,
 Set on them new with all his companie
 With so grit curage and so hardilie,
 And cryit upon the Heathine with ane schout,
 400 And with thair steillit brandis that war stout,
 Thay said thair fydis for till sow full saire,
 And dang thame doune in draves heir and thair,

Whill all the feilds with deid bodies war fped,
And all the Heathinis gave thair bake and fled.

Be that the nicht aprochit was and neir,
That skantlie men as than nicht know thair feir ;
Quhairfor he left the chafe as [for] that nicht,
And enterit in the toune with wallis wicht
Of Carados againe to his luging.

410 The Constabill with folkis auld and ging,
Of all the toune him met triumphantlie,
[Who had that day behavd fo valiantlie,]
Him welcuming with nobill feist and cheir,
Being to the toun convoyit on blyth maneir.
The fair begining maid Clariodus
Upon the Heathene, that was utragius ;
Whome I leave in the weiris on this wayis,
And speike I will of fair Meliades.

Quhen it was manifest to this trator Knight,
420 The Kingis brother, full of fraud and slicht,
How that Clariodus with ane armie
In Cyprus land was [thus] in chevalrie,
The Count of Estur home to his cuntrie
Was went also, his barnage for to fee,
He feingit letteris of his awin indyte,
Throw his [foull] invy, malice and difpyte,
As they had cumit from Clariodus
Unto the Kingis dochter, beiring thus,
That scho the King fould poysoun presentlie,
430 That thay the cuntrie nicht posseid thairby.
Quhilk letteris in a bag they had bein clofit,
And with ane mynd wonder evill difposfit,
Unto the King he went in secreit wayis ;
The Queine intill ane uther chalmer lysis

Richt weill at ease, and wist nocht of this thing.
 This tratour Knicht hes schawin to the King,
 That Sir Clariodus had letters sent
 Unto his dochter Meliades the gent,
 To poyfoune him, that thay nicht be his airis ;
 440 And so the treffoun furth to him declairis,
 And schew him furth thir letteris oppinlie,
 That he himself had dyttit traitourouflie,
 And said, that in ane taverne quhair he lay,
 Ane messinger thair ludgit in the way,
 And in his drukinnes, as did befall,
 Out of his bulgit schuik his letters all ;
 Ane varlot of the taverne thame up tuike,
 And brocht them me upon the morne to luite,
 And of this mater of me he was so red
 450 [When of the letters I him questioned]
 He him absentit and hes fled away ;
 Quhairfor in hast, without ony mair delay,
 I com to warne zow of this falsse treasoun.
 The King him trowit, and without reasoun,
 For hastilie credit he wald gif all tyme,
 An war it anents never so grit ane cryme,
 Quhilk is ane fault full grit into ane King ;
 He braid unto his sword, rycht haistining,
 And wald have went his dochter for to fla.
 460 This tratour wist if he went out sa,
 That redderis fould have maid impediment,
 For all hir lovit that upon hir blent.
 Na, Sir, he said, my counfall ze fall doe,
 Sum burriouris ze fall gar cum zow to,
 And tham command to worke at my bidding,
 And I fall caus but ony persaving,

That scho be taine and flaine without the toun,
 And thus fall endit be hir false treafoun ;
 I taik on me to taik him efterwart,
 470 And of fik justice gif to him his part.

The King neir wode in his melancholie,
 Hes gart be brocht thir murtherers in hy,
 And them commandit under all heist paine,
 That his ane dochter fould with thame be flaine,
 That litill wift, aleace, of this mater,
 For paine inewch was at hir heart full neir
 For the lang absence of Clariodus.

This traitour Knicht hes furth delyverit thus,
 And went to the chalmer of Meliades,
 480 And cryit furth on hir this haftie wayis
 Unto the King. And scho but mair abaid
 Obayit him, and on hir kne abraid,
 Sum deill affrayit, furth scho did hir marke
 In treases with hir kirtill and hir farke,
 For scho was ay obedient, meike and wyfe,
 And beningne alfe, as heart could [eer] devyfe,
 Trusting hir father had beine at sum malice ;
 My deireft on, scho said, quhat may zow pleis ?
 The King, he said, wald speike with zow allone.
 490 He wald not let Romaryn with hir gone.
 And quhen, aleace, thistender innocent,
 Thus with hir Eame throw the hall is went,
 He hir delyverit hes or he wald flint
 To the murderer, quhilk haiftilie hir hint
 On felloun wayis, rycht rudlie with rufching,
 Nocht handillit as the dochter of a King,
 Bot as trespassour with awfull cheir and schore ;
 Hir tender bonis thay stronglit all so fore

Scho wald have cryit ; bot scho nicht not, alleace,
 500 So with hir courtche they wompillit all hir face,
 Stopping hir mouth fo hard and cruellie
 [That] scho nicht uneis draw hir breath gudlie :
 So furth at ane privie postrum hir led
 Suiftlie to ane forrest as the traitour bad,
 To murther hir quhar na man nicht tham fe.

Ah ! be this warldis instabilitie
 Wha fould in riches or hie estate beleive,
 Sen nane the chance of fortoune [can] echeve !
 Hir variance and unstabillitie
 510 Alyke is redie to heich and law degre ;
 For febilnes oft cumis efter nicht,
 And efter dayis cumis the dewlie nicht,
 And oft tymis joy cumis efter sorrow and caire,
 And efter winter cumis the fumer fair ;
 Throw wyldnes of [the] frostis and of hail,
 Murnis full oft the merie nichtingall,
 And blythlie fingis on the ilk branch againe
 Quhair scho befor had weipit hard for paine :
 So men full oft throw walth and grite riches

520 Fallis in povertie and in febilnes,
 Whom efter fortoune glaidlie dois restore
 To mair honour nor ever thay war before ;
 And zit thairefter flydis doune fra hir quheill,
 From weill to woe, and fyne from wo to weill.
 This transitorie joy it nicht not lest,
 Heir is no ease bot trubill and unrest ;
 For alse unfiker is heir gour dwelling,
 All changing is our joy fra abyding.

Schir Thomas is returnit to the King,
 530 And said, Be glaid, Sir, take gud conforting,

Ze ar delyverit weill and haistlie
 Of gone wickit and deidlie enemye,
 I thinke to delyver zow eik also
 Of him that is the worker of this wo ;
 Ze fall the morne gar call to zow the Queine,
 And all zour maist familiaris bedeine,
 And schaw to them the cace how it is went ;
 And gif that thay be not thairwith content,
 Ze fall them punisch as it weill effeiris,
 540 Sen that ze know the danger that appeiris.
 When this was donne he passit to his bed,
 Thinkand that he his purpose weill had sped.
 The King, in his melancolike passioun,
 The nicht all ower turnit up and doune,
 And in his breift ay wirking to and fro
 This suddane vengance and [alse] haistie wo
 Upon his dochter and himself in eike,
 For sake of hir that seamit wyse and meike,
 And fyne so sweit and fair ane creature,
 550 And so weill taucht and lovit abone meafoure,
 And was his only bairne withoutin mo ;
 Unsufferabill was his paine and wo
 For his awin chyld of fatherlie pitie,
 That scho the caus of sic ane treafoune be.
 Romarein trowit, that scho so long abaid,
 The King in tender commoning hir had
 Of plesand materis, so that scho thocht not lang ;
 And this scho thocht, aleace, scho thocht all wrang,
 It was not so, it was the more pitie,
 560 Scho being of so wouderfull bewtie.
 Upon the morne the King sent for the Queine,
 And tauld hir of Meliades the scheine,

And quhat was wrocht ; thair is no mair to tell,
 With pitious cry scho to the eard doun fell
 In swounning cauld, and with ane deidlie face,
 And of hir ladies oft was the Aleace !
 Then nobill knights with wofull heartis ran,
 And held hir up with visage pail and wan.

- When this is knowin in castell and in toun,
 570 The clamour raife with lamentatioun
 Amongis the pepill, with hiddious noyis and beir
 [For sake of her, that was their Princess deir,]
 Them felfs demainand that pitie was to see,
 Wringand thair handis, and cryand for pitie,
 Beitting thair breiftis and face sorowfullie,
 And tormenting them felfs without mercie.
 No wofuller in Troy raille up the soun,
 For Hectoris daith, thair mightie champion ;
 Nor quhen the Greikis enterit in thair ire
 580 In ower thair wallis, and set thair toun on fyre,
 And slew Priam, and brint Paladeon,
 Nor was into the court of Philipon,
 With lamentatioun, and with sorrowfull cry,
 For hir that was the richt lodstar and gy
 Of vertew, bewtie, and of gentilnes,
 Fredome, renounc, honour, and nobilnes.
 Wo worth the King, thay cry, and his counfell,
 Doing this deid so wickit and cruell,
 Quhilk fall this realme turne to distructioun
 590 By the vengeance that fall from hevine stryke doun
 Upon [thir] wretchis for the blood saikles
 Of hir that in all vertew stude maikles
 Into this wyde warld without comparifoun ;
 Fy on the murtherers ! fy on the fallie trasoun !

Fy on the cruell daith for ever more !
 The fkaith is done that no man may reftore.
 Bot had it beine kend to the pepill thair,
 How that Sir Thomas kindlit had thair cair,
 He hade beine rent thair with ane thowfsand handis,
 600 That git the mater na thing underftandis.
 Romaryn rave hir hair out with hir neives,
 And with hir cairfull voice the court fcho deives,
 Smyting hir face that forow was to fe.
 Now of this lamentatioun let I be,
 And fpeik I will of fair Meliades,
 How that fcho was demainit, and quhat wayis.
 When that thir four murthereris anone
 War with the Ladie to the forreft gone,
 And had hir brocht unto the famine fteide,
 610 Whair [that] they thought to put hir to [the] deid,
 Thay faid, Ladie, richt heir mone ge die ;
 Hir countinance than pitie was to fe ;
 Trembling for dreid, abaifit of hir cheir,
 With quaiking voice fcho faid, My frindis deir,
 Why fould I die ? Have ge that in command ?
 What have I donne ? Thay faid, without demand
 We wait no caus, but we commandit ar
 To flay gow heir, dreidles we want no mair.
 Then fell fcho on growfe richt pitioullie
 620 Befor thir murthereris, afking ay mercie
 Full rewthfullie, with lamentabill voice,
 For love of Jefus that diet on the crofe,
 With gour waponis have pitie me to ding,
 Thinke that I am the dochter of a King,
 Let manlie pitie enter in gour hearts,
 To doe to me, ane fillie woman, fmarfts,

And thinke that of ane woman ze war borne ;
 Mercie, for him that wore the croune of thorne,
 Of me, alleace, that may zow not gainstand,
 630 That now zour scharpe fwordis hes in [zour] hand.
 Thay said, No buite is for to carpin so,
 We mone our selfs be flaine or ellis zow flo.
 Then towart hir they went with awfull fair.
 Now grant me this, scho said, I aske no mair,
 Let me heir to God do my oratioun,
 Syne this mone be my last devotioun.
 Go speid zow soun, quoth thay, and tarie nocht.
 Alleace, hir spirit than was all on flaucht.
 Doune on hir kneis scho sat full humbillie,
 640 Quaiking as aspe, and schaiking pitioullie,
 For dreid of daith afrayit out of measure
 Fra that scho saw [that] thair was no favour.
 Scho said, O Lord, that sittis in hevinis hé,
 Of mercie King, thow mercie have on me ;
 As thow diddait for me thy creature
 To licht into the glorious virgine pure,
 And sufferit for me deidlie woundis fyve,
 And raife upon the third day [fyne] to lyve,
 And fyne affcendit to the hevinis with glore,
 650 Thow grant me this that meikle I implore ;
 As I am innocent of this mateir,
 Have mercie on me, Lord, I thé require,
 And save me from thir tormentouris fell,
 Quhilk in this wood with waponis wald me quell.
 When scho had prayit lang upon this wyfe,
 To God scho hir betaught, and fyne did ryfe ;
 Syn to hir tormentouris scho did returne :
 And thay that hard hir praying thus and murne,

- And hard hir pitious lamentatioun,
 660 Hir bening wordis and hir orifoun,
 Weill knew of gylt that scho was all faikles ;
 Whairfor they rewit on hir hevines ;
 They went altogether, and was advyfit
 To banifch hir, quhilk founne they have devifit,
 And thocht thay wald hir nocht faikleflie flo ;
 And, thus according, [unto] hir they goe :
 And scho, that weinit to have bein deid anone,
 Fell into fwound alfe cauld as ony ftone ;
 And quhen scho overcome, scho cryit Mercie :
 670 Thay said, Lady, for rewth we will apply
 To save gour lyfe, bot ge fall banifchit be ;
 For verilie we think it grit pitie,
 To flay ane Ladie of fo grit bewtie.
 Scho thankit them on kneis heartfullie,
 And with hir armis small thair legs imbract,
 And height to take the sea in all heaft,
 Saying, Fair firis, I may gow never aquite,
 That me to leive hes grantit fik respite ;
 Rewardis I have none to give gow heir,
 680 Sic as I have fik fall ge have but weir ;
 Scho hir denudit of hir veltur thair,
 And left no thing upon hir bodie faire
 Except hir fark bot scho to them it gave ;
 Thay neidit nothing at hir [for] to crave,
 For scho them frelie offerit but difdaine
 All that scho turfit, but hir litill chaine.
 When this was donne thay to toun tham adrest ;
 And scho in middes of the wyld forrest
 Full waine of wemen was left hir alone ;
 690 Hir visage was all [weit and] wobegone,

In farke allone, withoutin cloathes moe,
At midnicht mirke, and wift not quhair to go.

To Shir Thomas thay turnit hame againe,
And tauld him that the Ladie thay had flaine.
With wordis fair so flatterit he the King,
He was content quhen he hard this tyding ;
The auld servandis hail he gart remove,
That to the King [leill] favour had or love ;
Whom he fufpectit gart banifch furth totell,
700 And quhom he lovit thay still in Court did dwell :
So be his wickit wayis of trafoune,
He brocht this realme neir to confufioun.
He dreid the Count of Efturis ham cuming ;
Quhairfor he fent to him but tarying
Counterfute letters upon the Kingis name,
That he fould dwell in his cuntrie at hame
Ay quhill he fend to him ane wryting [cleir,]
Or ellis that he fould cum on no maneir.

This Lady naikit in the wood allone
710 Full pitioufflie did weipe and make hir mone,
Befeikand God to fend hir help and grace
To fchape out of that dreidfull wildernes.
Scho paffit furth and wift not quhair to go,
Into the wood ay turnand to and fro
Forward and bakward amongs the thornis keine
Whill all to rent on breeris hir farke beine ;
And quhen fcho hard ocht fteiring hir befylde
Into ane bufch full darne fcho wald hir hyde,
Quaiking for dreid that folk fould hir efpie
720 And murther hir, alleace, fcho wift not quhy ;
Whyllis fcho wald ly ftill and tak [gude] keip,
And uther quhyllis out throw the hedgis creipe,

Whill that hir hyd as lustie lillie quhyt,
 Whairon to luik was sumtyme grite delyte,
 Was all to rent and carvin heir and thair
 With thornie pikis wounding hir full fair ;
 Hir tender hyd and [lustie] snow quhyt skine,
 As Mayis bloffome, smoth, [and] quhyt and thine,
 Was all depaint, allace, of reid cullour,

730 As mixteoun of rose and lillie flour,
 Throw blood that was [from] hir bodie bereft,
 As scho with scurgis had beine all to best.

That nicht scho passit with so grit pennence,
 Praying to God with bening sufference.
 And be the morrow cleirit up alyte,
 Out of the forrest scho was passit quite ;
 Then went scho furth in warld scho wist no quhair,
 Whill that for fault of meit scho hungerit fair.
 Syne of ane litill hous scho gat ane fight,

740 To quhilk scho did hir speid with all hir might,
 Whair scho ane woman fand, to quhome scho said,
 Fair dame, for love of that ilk blissit maid,
 That bure the birth that sufferit for us deid,
 Refresh me with ane litill peice of breid,
 And gif me of gour almous for to eit,
 That am in poynt to fwone for want of meit.

This woman was bot rud of conditioun,
 And hir beheld so maiglit up and doune,
 Scho said, Evill woman fra my dore ge go,
 750 And ask them meit that thé demainit so.
 Then weipit scho that was full will of reid,
 And furth scho past, asking of God remeid.
 Richt far scho went and saw na kynd of toune,
 For fault of foude scho was in poynt to fwone ;

Febill scho wox, and full of hevines,
 That had beine in rest with all tendernes ;
 Be fursfute of travell and hir grit rebute,
 Quhilk was not wonit to gang upon hir fute,
 Hir tyrrit lymis no farther micht hir beir ;
 760 Whairfor in heart scho had full mikle feare.
 Bot, as God wald, ane uther hous scho saw,
 And as scho micht scho towardis it could draw,
 And fand the gudwyfe standing in the dore ;
 Scho said, Have mercie on me ane woman pure,
 That far hes gaine without cloathis or fude ;
 For love of him that stervit on the rude,
 Ze me refresch with sum pairt of gour meit,
 As I that hungrie am and faine wald eit.

This woman was in heart merciabill ;
 770 When scho had hard hir wordis lamentabill,
 Scho hir beheld that fair was for to se,
 Replenischit with wonderfull bewtie,
 Hir plesant port, hir sweit and louefum face,
 Hir bricht hairis wyde wavelling out of lace,
 Hir snow quhyt face with bloud all reid depaint,
 Hir self so made, so weirie and so faint,
 Hir lustie visage all with teiris weite,
 As bricht dew dropis on the lillie sweit ;
 So fore with mercie hir heart was owercum
 780 Hir to behold weiping so allone,
 Scho grat for rewth, and tuike hir in hir hous,
 Saying, My doghter how hes it happinit thus ?
 I trow sum folk that hes beine evill advisit,
 For gour grit bewtie hes gow thus supprysit.
 Nay, said this Ladie, traist gow verilie,
 That I am undeflorit of my bodie

Of all filthines or sic corruptioun ;
 Fair dame, have mercie on my infortoun,
 And schaw me how my leving I fall wine,
 790 And quhat labour first I fall [to] begyne ;
 I wald doe service faine for my living,
 And fall be leill, doubt ge na uther thing.
 Ane peice of gray breid the wyfe hes to hir brocht,
 The quhilke to eate [scho] wounder gud it thocht,
 That breid of maine to hir was never so sweit,
 Quhilk plesantlie scho tuike and [foon did] eate :
 Ane drinke of water than to hir scho gave,
 Saying, My dochter, so mote God me save,
 I wald wisch zow unto sum gud maistres,
 800 Bot ane poure woman is myself doubtles,
 I may zow not susteine [long] heir with me ;
 I have ane cummer dwelling by the sea,
 That deallis with marchandice and hes riches,
 And mifer hes of servantes as I ges,
 I traift scho fall refave zow in service ;
 Scho is alse full of vertew and gentrice :
 Bot ge ar naikit, and thairfor, Alleace !
 And I have no gud claithes in this place
 Zow for to geive ; bot for my faullis heill,
 810 For love of God sumthing fall I [zow] deill.
 Ane old sakcloath [belyve] scho brocht hir thair,
 And hes it put upon the Lady faire,
 And with ane corde it fessonit hir about.
 On humbill wayis scho thankit hir but doubt,
 Saying, Fair dame, God zow forwaird and quyte,
 And gif to zow the kinrike of delyte,
 For it that ge have gevine me richt heir,
 Of meit, and cloathes, and meritabill cheir.

- This Gudwyfe raise, and said, My dochter fair,
 820 Now goe with me. Togidder then thay fair
 Unto the sea strandis whill thay [be] come ;
 Scho fand hir cummer at hir hous at home,
 Scho helfit hir, and on this wayis scho said,
 Commer, I have brocht [heir] to zow ane maid
 That wald have fervice, and ze have mikill to do,
 I dare be bought that vertewoufe is scho ;
 Scho is weill taught, and full of gude maneir,
 Scho gainis weill to be zour chalmerer.
 Ha, gude cummer, that is weill said of zow !
 830 Ane chalmerer ! and waits not quhair nor how
 That scho is cumit, or gif that scho be leill,
 I have no will with strangeris to dealle.
 This Lady said, Fair lady, have ze no dreid,
 I fall keipe lawtie baith in word and deid.
 The Gudwyfe, both for rewth and for pitie,
 And for the prayer of hir commer, sche
 Hes hir refavit into hir fervice,
 And hir assignit to ane [mein] office.
 The woman passit to hir hous againe.
 840 Meliades in fervice did remaine
 With hir maistres ; the quhilk unto hir said,
 Now, at this tyme ze mane be bissie, maid,
 For unto Estur cuntrie mone we faill ;
 If it lykis zow with me for to travell,
 Go beare ane fardill of zow wole anone
 Unto the schipe, quhilk readie is to gone.
 And quhen the Lady hard of this tiding,
 Scho was full glad, and said, At zour lyking,
 To faill or go ather be land or sea.
 850 Speid hand, the gudwyfe said, for cheritie.

The wole to beir scho helpit hir maistres,
 Whill it unto the schipe all caried was.
 The marineris be then all redie wer
 Out of the hevin to pas ; the day was cleir,
 The winde was gud, and up the failis thay drew,
 Full fast thay glyd, out throw the floodis they flew,
 Whill thay com to the cuntrie of Esture.
 When thay aryvit into ane port full sure,
 Swyth landit this Gudwyfe with hir new maid,
 860 Whair thay fand cairtis, and theron hes laid
 Thair merchandeice, and unto Estur toun
 Thir twa ar past or that thay maid sojorne,
 Whilk was the fairest toun in that cuntrie,
 Thair dwellis the Earle and eike the Ladie frie.
 Meliades full nait and bissie was
 To beir at the command of hir maistres
 The woll unto hir coufigne [faif] ; and fyne
 Hir maistres gave hir quyete discipline,
 Saying, My dochter, be bissie in service,
 770 My awnt the better [then] will gow chereice,
 For I perchance will leave gow with hir heir,
 Quhair ge may vertew and gude maners leir ;
 What is gour name anone ge to me schaw ?
 Scho said, My name is Ladar, ge fall knaw.
 Ladar, scho said, gour cloathes doe away,
 And I fall sumthing better gow aray.
 Scho gave hir fark, kirtill, [and] hose and schoun.
 The Lady kneillit quhen that this was doune,
 And thankit hir with sober humbill cheir,
 880 And was also weill content withouttin weir
 As scho was quhyllume of cloath of gold pretious ;
 Of haill cloathing hir heart was full joyous.

This Gudwyfe passit to hir coufingis,
 And ather uther grate with tendernes.
 Quhen thay had spokin togidder at laser,
 They gart belyve make redie the supper,
 And to it went with mirrie cheir and glaid.
 This Ladie stude, and to thame service maid,
 And that scho did so weill and perfytlie,
 890 With fair effeir and countinace gudlie,
 That mervellit was the Maistres of this hous,
 Quhilk in her heart was mirrie and joyous,
 And speirit at hir awnt quhat [maid] scho was :
 And scho hir told the maneir mair and les,
 And how scho was so trew and diligent
 In hir service, and humbill of intent ;
 And counfallit hir to taikie hir in service,
 For scho was vertewus ay at all devyfe.
 Scho hir refavit with ane glaidfum cheir,
 900 And syne did efter ryse from the suppeir.
 Hir cummer departit, and hir leave taine hes,
 And went to bed ; and Ladar bissie was,
 And then to bed scho went hirself to rest,
 As scho that was with labour fore oprest ;
 Bot mikill of the nicht scho did bewaill,
 That fortoun did so scharplie hir affaill ;
 Zit ay scho thankit God and gave him gloire,
 Of all hir trubillis and hir chansis soire :
 Bot never scho micht forget Clariodus,
 910 Of quhais love scho brint so mervellus,
 And langit so, that winder was to tell
 Hir sad thochtis, hir tormentis all haill.
 Unto hirselfe with mone full pitious,
 Alleace, scho said, wist ze, Clariodus,

What travell I have endureit for gour faike,
 Full wofull wald ge be, I undertake;
 And how that I arayit am and clede,
 And how so purelie that I ly in bed,
 Ze wald not at the leift all be content:
 920 Bot all is welcum to me that God hes sent,
 Whom I beseik of his magnificence,
 Clariodus, to fend zow patience,
 That for my faike ze do not sic vengence,
 That efter may turne to zour displifance.
 When scho was so weirrie, formurnit, and forweipit,
 With trubillit spreit and frayitlie, scho sleipit;
 And gat up airlie be the nicht was gone,
 And maid the fyre, fyne fet the pote thairon;
 The houfe scho fwoupit and did all that effeirit.
 930 Hir Maistres raife richt as the day upcleirit,
 And to the marcat [early] wald scho went
 With Ladar as ane fervant diligent.
 Then [up] scho tuike ane fardell on hir heid,
 And with hir went withoutin ony pleid.
 The woll thay fauld for pryce that mycht suffice,
 And hame for it tuike uther merchandyce;
 Syne to the denner went and maid gud cheir.
 The Gudwyfe raife up efter the denneir,
 And at hir aunt scho tuik hir leave to wend
 940 Hame to hir cuntrie, doing hir commend
 To freindis all, and to this Ladar eike;
 And scho, with countinace bening and meike,
 Hir thankit of hir gentrice, inclynand,
 And wald hir have convoyit to sea strand:
 Bot scho wald not, bot gart hir hame returne;
 The uther into Ingland, but sojorne,

Is went to schipe, and founne arivit thair ;
Full oft this Ladar bad hir weill to faire.

- Thus scho remainit with hir new maistres,
950 And did hir serve with so grit biffines
That scho hir lovit as hir dochter deire.
Upon ane day, scho said on this maneir
Unto hir maistres, Had I filk and gold,
I fould make workis fair for to behold ;
Purfis, beltis, with collourit quaife and kell,
Whilkis wald full weill into the mercat fell,
And quite the cost that I unto zow make.
Ze fall it have, scho said, I undertake.
Scho bought hir pirnis baith of gold and filke.
960 And scho hes maid hir fair workis of that ilke.
Hir maistres hes them presentit in the faire,
And mikill mony scho tuike for thame thair.
So at the last amongs hir workis all,
Full curious workis scho maid, and most royall
War ower the lave in curiositie,
The quhilk hir maistres grit ferlie had to see ;
Whairfoir scho gart hir fold them in ane cloath,
And follow hir, thocht scho sumthing was loath,
Unto the Earleis palice of Eftur.
970 This Ladar, that was ane ladie of nurtur,
Obeyit hir maistres, and on with hir is went.
Unto the Countes both thay war present,
Whilk callit on this Ladar for to se
Hir marchandice ; and with benignitie
Scho com and kneillit to this Ladie doun,
And schew hir workis craftie of fashoun.
The Countes them commendit grittumlie,
And said, they war the fairrest works alluterlie,

That scho had feine into hir lyves space :
 980 So com the Earle in at the dore in cace,
 Thay raise to him and maid him reverence.
 Meliades of angellyk clemence
 Be then recoverit had hir bewtie,
 And was againe alle lustie for to fe
 As of before, and haillit haill and found,
 Whair breer and thorne had maid hir mony wound ;
 Thairfoir grit mervell was amongs them all
 Of hir bewtie that stude imperiall
 About all uther ladies that was thair,
 990 Over uther flouris as dois the lillie faire.
 For as ane thing celestiall to fe
 The Earle did behold hir pleisand bewtie,
 He thocht scho femit, and eike he thocht hir lyke
 To the Princes of all Brittain kinrike,
 The Kingis dochter, Meliades the bricht,
 Baith of hir visage and of hir havingis richt ;
 Bot weill he trouit that Meliades
 Sould never beine arayit on like wyse.
 Hir steidfastlie luik to [full] oft he wald.
 1000 [And when scho saw that he did hir behald,]
 Abaisit scho was, and sumthing hir declynit
 Hir bricht visage that so of bewtie schynit,
 As scho that never furthie was nor peart,
 Nather in presence nor git into desert ;
 Bot as ane innocent ever under dreid,
 Full of assurit [modest] womanheid ;
 Far from Dormigill in crueltie,
 Or Panthassilla in magnanimitie,
 Bot neirer Griffhald with hir tender breist
 1010 Of soverane vertew, quhilk is God aneist.

When that thay had thair marchandice all fynit,
 And mirrilie collationat and dynit,
 The nobill Countes tuike at thaim hir leave,
 Gart twentie goldin bassants to tham give.
 Grit talking was amongs them all that nicht,
 Of Ladar and of hir brave bewtie bricht.

When thay come hame hir maistres said hir to,
 We are rewairdit nichtilie, quoth scho,
 All for your verie craft; Have silver heir,
 1020 Be ge butlar and make us mirrie cheir.
 This Ladar hes refavit the mony,
 And maid hir maistres weill to fair perdie,
 Of mychtie wyncs and plesant meitis deir;
 Syne servit hirwith womanlie effeir.
 Scho bought hir stufe of gold and silkis than,
 And with hir warkis mikill thing scho wan.
 Now of this Ladar leave I will ane throw,
 And of Clariodus sumthing to you schow.

Clariodus in armes day by day,
 1030 So mikell he wrocht at everie hard affay,
 That wonder was to tell or git to heir,
 The knightlie deidis of him that hes no peir;
 His nobill bodie was never out of stoure,
 His bloodie sword restit never ane houre
 Fra day being whill that the nicht apeir,
 He so rememberis on his Ladie cleir,
 To bring the Turkis to destructioun,
 That he may hame more glaidlie mak him boun.
 Thair fell on him so hard remembrance
 1040 Of his Ladie, with sic continuance,
 That nather might he sleip nor git take rest,
 Langourus absence so fairlie him opprest;

Ather he thocht the weiris to make fchort,
Or ellis to die among the Heathin forte.

He had ane quarter of the toune to gyde,
And ane port readie for to cast up wyde,
When that him list, to ische upon his fone.
On of his constabillis gart he call anone,
And bad make redie be the day was licht
1050 His companie, and in thair geir themdicht,
That be the morrow all his lustie forte
Sould redie be abyding at the port.

Thay foupit with the Constabill that nicht,
Disporting thame with heartis glaid and licht ;
Syne tuike thair leave, and to thair bed ar gone.
He on the morne could glaidlie him dispone
Out at the porte to isch with all his meinge,
And at all peices enarmit weill was he,
And ischit furth with all his companie
1060 Upon the awfull Turkis quhair thay ly.
The trumpit blew ane weirlyk found on heicht ;
He gave his courfour with his spurris bricht,
And fchot upon the Heathin with ane fchout,
And with his speir he enterit in the route
Amongis his foes ; bot or his big lance brake
Full monie ane Sarafine lay deid on his bake.
He pullit out his sword delyverlie,
And dang the Heathin doun dispitfullie ;
He maid alfe monie peices of thair theis,
1070 As dois the wricht small spaillis of the treis,
All rougently he ruschit throw [the] rout
Of woundit men ; befor him gois the fchout.
The Caine himself hes hard the fuddan cry
Among his folk rising fo hidioufly,

On hors he lape and forward com in haift;
 The michtie Sowdane him followed fast.
 Clariodus was war, and weill he knew
 That the grit Caine com him to perfew;
 He rufchit upon him with ane felloun feir,
 1080 And with his fword him tothe fadill fcheire;
 His corps devidit into pairtis two;
 And fyne unto the King he did rycht fo.
 The Heathin wounderit upon that felloun deid,
 And him the way thay roumit than gud fpeid.
 The Cristein men feing his deidis mervellous,
 Thay cryit, VIVE, VIVE, CLARIODUS!
 Long lyfe, renoune, heich glorie and honoure
 Be unto thé that is of warldis flour.
 He namit Jefus, that bliffit Saviour cleir,
 1090 And forwart preiffit with ane knichtlie feir;
 His folks did manfullie thair foes affaill,
 Thair fwordis went alfe thik as fchour of hail.
 When the Conftabill hard tyding of this thing,
 To feild he cam withoutin tarying,
 With knichtis that war valiand in feild,
 On hors enarmit cleir under fcheild;
 At quhais cuming monie ane Turke can die.
 The King of Cyprus, on the turret hé,
 Beheld the battell furious and woode,
 1100 The crewell fcheding of the Heathine bloode
 Be Cristine knichtis bauld and chevalrus,
 And fpeciallie be gud Clariodus,
 Wha refit never, bot ever dang all doune,
 He was in fight furious as ane lyoun.
 The King did him commend, and ferliet of his deidis,
 He gart his men affend upon thair feidis,

- And isch out of the toun to thair support ;
 Full manie thowland thrang out at the port,
 As swift lyouns delyrous of thair pray ;
 1110 The Cristine men preisit to the hard affay.
 Fast heir and thair the Heathine ar dung down
 With mortall fraikis of occisioun ;
 Bot maist of all the gud Clariodus,
 Alse fearce in fight as lyoun furious,
 His brand ay bathand in the Heathine bloode,
 So fairis he as ane tyger woode ;
 Before his forcie arme of great renoune,
 Unto the ground both hors and man gois down ;
 His countinace baith wyld and terribill,
 1120 His michtie corpis baith wicht and invincibill,
 Strong as ane toure againis the speiris poynt,
 Micht naine againe abake him put a joynt.
 When he thus throw the feild so forcilie
 With sword in hand did ryd, richt ernufflie
 The Heathine fort for him war so adreid,
 That richt as scheip befor him [fast] they fled.
 Of cruell slaughter seisis never the stryfe,
 Whill not ane Heathin man was left on lyfe,
 For thay war vinqvist all and dungin doune,
 1130 And finallie put to confusioun ;
 And of the Cristine diet few or none,
 So gratioufflie did God for thame dispone.
 Efter the feildis great difcomfitour,
 Clariodus, that mikill was of valoure,
 Is to the michtie Caineis pailgeoun went,
 Whair infinit of thesaure importent
 Was keipit in full great quantitie,
 The number of it could no man estimie ;

- Thair was of gold, and pretious stainis deir,
 1140 And rich juellis to by ane reallem weill neir,
 Quhilk he gart be turfit to the sea
 Unto his schip; and suith it is that he
 Amongis men gave mekill of this riches,
 For he all tyme was full of nobilnes.
 Among all uther thesaure fand he thair
 Ane tabiller of chafe richt wounder fair,
 Of gold all wrocht with pretiouse stonis bricht,
 Diamants, sapheiris and roobies casting licht;
 Whilk stonis war so grit and ferlie deir,
 1150 As raiodous lampe schyning alio cleir,
 The knightis did it pryse that war thair
 To be worth ane kingis ranfoune and maire.
 He gart ane squyer tak it and with him go
 Unto the Constabillis tent withoutin ho,
 Difarmit of his helme; and quhen that he
 Come in the tent he said, Sir, God 3ow se.
 The Constabill answeirit and said, Ha, gentill Knight,
 In 3our arming thair is no fault of fight;
 How ar 3e now unarmit now sa foune,
 1160 I traist, quoth he, the danger is all donne.
 Then lewgh thay both with joy and mirrines.
 Clariodus said, Will 3e play at the ches.
 3ea, said the Lord, have 3e ane tabilleir?
 That fall 3e se, I have it with me heir.
 He schew it furth in presence of thame all.
 And quhen the Constabill saw the ches royall,
 Whair of the men war all of massie gold
 And stonis bricht, gudlie to behold;
 So faire of forme, and great of quantitie,
 1170 He said it was ane royall fight to se,

- And said, he never saw so rich a thing,
 The make of it possess no Christian king.
 Clariodus said, Of your nobility,
 Sir, will you do me a pleasure unto me,
 As for to give this tabler of ches
 Unto the Queene of France her nobility,
 Me humbly commending unto the King,
 And to the Queene most lovely and bening,
 As I that am their servitor at all
 1180 Whill that I live; but you forgive me fall,
 That I now charge you message for to do,
 The which pertaineth not your honour to,
 I mean you shall travel to undertake for me,
 War it not to the Queene's Majesty;
 I would this have presented myself truly,
 War not that I in England suddantly
 Man pass, you shall for as now you me excuse.
 The Constable said, I will no way refuse,
 So much service do to you as this;
 1190 And when you list to France to come, I will
 You shall be welcome, dreidles, to the King,
 For he has heard of you good coming;
 Diverse reports has come to his ear
 Of your great highness both in peace and war;
 And so he [he] shall favour the tabler.
 To-day as they spoke on this manner,
 The Saracens tents spoiled their meins,
 Whair they found the treasure [in] great quantity,
 Whilk maid them rich for term of all their life.
 1200 Their Lord has them ready maid believe.
 The French Constable and Sir Clariodus
 Upon their horse affendit full joyous;

- Unto the King of Cyprus thay raid ifeir,
 The quhilk did meit them in his best maneir
 Without the ports, with royall companie,
 The joyous trumpits founding mirrilie.
 The King hes donne the Constabill imbrace,
 And him refavit with ane mirrie face,
 Oft thanking him of his nobill support.
- 1210 To quhom the Constabill thir wordis did report,
 The laud heirof perteinis not to me,
 Bot only to this Knicht that ze heir fe,
 Clariodus, the rose and flour of armis,
 From his sword edge nicht helpe no harnis;
 He was the hail caus of the discomfitoure,
 Nixt God our forcie campiouin in the stoure,
 Give him the laud, give him the thanks always,
 Of victorie and Turkis hail suppryse;
 His nobill deidis giving great commend,
- 1220 Saying, But dreid, unto the warldis end,
 Thair is no Knicht onlie with his hand
 That hes donne half the deidis valiand
 In all his tyme that ze have donne this day,
 Thairfor ane honour ze have conquest for ay;
 I wonder nocht thocht ze be valzeand,
 For ze ar cum, as I [do] understand,
 On baith the sydis of rycht nobill bluid,
 And thairfor, Sir, on neid ze mon be gud.
 Clariodus said, Sir, withouttin dreid,
- 1230 Ze gif to me more name than thair is deid;
 Bot onlie half alse far as ze report,
 Richt weill beset I wald think [me] at schorte.
 The King put him betwixt thir Knichtis two,
 And altogidder to Bruland can thay go,

- And enterit in the Kingis palice fair,
 Full great triumph and feasting [alfe] was thar.
 The Queine and eike hir dochter com to hall,
 With monie lustie ladie gent and small.
 It war ane want thair coursis for to tell.
- 1240 Clariodus, that is of knightheid well,
 Was cherifit fo and feastit on lik wyse,
 Long war to schaw the maner and the gyle.
 When thay had dynit, thay all to chalmer wente.
 The King, the Queine, with lustie ladies jent,
 Thair all the day did dance and make gud sport,
 The seasoun war ower prolix to report.
 When even aproachit, to supper then they go,
 Thair royall fair as now I will pas fro.
 Efter the supper, on the famine wyse,
- 1250 I can gow nocht the maner all devise
 As thay disport, carrell, dance and sing,
 Lordis, ladies, and lustie knichtis ging.
 Clariodus requyerit was to dance ;
 He him excusit with fair countinace,
 Bot all for nocht, excuse avall nicht none ;
 With uther lordis he to the dance is gone,
 So verie weill and manerlie withall,
 Pryfit he was with ladies grit and small,
 And with the companie everilk wicht.
- 1260 Thay thus disport quhile mides of the nicht ;
 Syne everilk lord and ladie leave hes taine
 Full courteslie, and to thair Innis are gaine.
 The King had fonnes that war richt fair and ging,
 That loved Clariodus abone all uther thing ;
 With him they ar to Innis gane infeir,
 And all to make him companie and cheir ;

The Constabill eik him chereft tenderlie,
As he that was baith vailgeand and worthie.

- Thus, day by day, thair is no more to tell,
1270 In nobill joy and mirrines thay dwell
Whill that awcht dayis war all gone outrycht ;
Syne tuike thair leave to pas everilk wicht,
First at the King, fyne at his Lordis eike,
Syne at the Queine and at hir Ladies meike.
At thair departing wofull was the King,
For he thocht that his lustie dochter ging
Sould have beine waddit with Clariodus,
Thocht fortoun wald not tholl it to be thus.
The King maid to the Constabill instance
1280 For to commend him to the King of France,
And thanke him of his help and gude supplie ;
Syne thesawre gart in full grit quantitiè
Deliver unto him before he went,
Imbracing [him] rycht hartlie in intent.
Ather from uther tuike thair leave anone.
Syne the King tuike Clariodus allone,
And said, Fair Sir, commend me to the King,
And thanke him of his nobill supporting
Againis my foes strong in battell ;
1290 And eik I thank zow of zour grit travell
That ze have maid, cuming in this cuntrie ;
Syne of zour nobill helpe and gud supplie,
Bot quhais vailgeand deidis and chevalrie
We hade not lichtlie gottin victorie.
Grite giftis profferit to him the King,
Bot he thairof as thane wald [tak] no thing.
And quhen the King hes feine [that] it is fo,
He gart ane squyer for ane palfray go,

- Quhilk as the snow in collour was all quhyt,
 1300 And of fallioun wounder donne perfyte,
 Both meane and taill did of [the] bricht gold schyne,
 In warld men deimit thair was none so fyne.
 Then said he to Clariodus, Sen ge
 Naine uther giftis will relave of me,
 This horse I give zow of a gentill kynd,
 That ge may [ever] have me in zour mynd.
 Full courtesie then thankit he the King,
 And said, Sir, I am zouris in all thing
 Whill that I leive, so wyselie God me speid,
 1310 As I that trew falbe in word and deid
 To zow and zouris for now and ever more;
 Zour Henes keip the michtie King of gloure.
 So thay depairtit with tender imbracing,
 For verie pitie weipit than the King,
 And rycht so [forelie] did Clariodus,
 For to depart thay war so dolorus.
 At all the Court thair leave hais taine thir two,
 With thair meinge and to thair hors they go;
 And then ascendit all with ane purpose,
 1320 Thay raid unto the port of Carrados,
 Whair that thay fand [thair] schippis all redie,
 The marineris thay wrocht full bissilie.
 The Constabill now at Clariodus
 Hes taine his leave with wordis gracious,
 To cum in France requyring him sa fast,
 So that this Lord hes grantit at the last,
 His aquentance to make with the [gude] King,
 To him anone promifit he this thing.
 When the Constabill his leave hes taine thus,
 1330 He bad adew to Sir Clariodus,

And enterit into his barke, and that anone,
 And all his folkis ar to thair schipis gone.
 The air was cleir, the wind was verie gud,
 They drew up faillis, and sped them ouer the flude.

Clariodus gart furth ane barke hir drefe
 All full of nobill trefour and riches
 That he had won into the Caines tent ;
 Unto his Father in Estur he it sent,
 And bad commend him to his Father thair,
 1340 Schawing to them at lenth of his weilfair ;
 Syne enterit into his schip richt haistilie,
 And to thair schipis went all his companie ;
 Thay drew up faillis sweith, and furth thay glyd
 Atowre the floodis that ar baith roume and wyd.
 Now ceise I of Clariodus ane throw,
 And of the Constabill sumthing will schew.

The Constabill of France aryvit sweith
 Unto the port of Rowan, glaid and blyth,
 And went to Parice with all his folks in feir,
 1350 And to the King is gone with mirrie cheir.
 The King richt glaid was of his hame cuming,
 And maid to him richt heartlie welcuming,
 And speirit of his tydingis and his fair.
 Be richt report he told him les and maire
 Of all the weiris schortlie for to saine,
 And how the Caine of Tartarie was flaine,
 And of his host the haill distructioun ;
 And of the valiantnes and grite renoune
 Of the maist worthie and wicht Clariodus,
 1360 And of his deidis worthie and chevellrus,
 And how his only manheid and his micht
 Monie ane tyme pat the Turkis to sicht,

- And how he flew the Caine and put him doun,
 And pat his folkis to thair diftruētioun,
 Whairthrow the mortall weiris tuike ane end,
 And how he bad him to his Grace commend ;
 And how the King of Cyprus worthines
 Bad him commend him to his Nobilnes,
 Him thankit of his folkis and fupplie,
 1370 And how that he promifit for to be
 His in all thing, and ftand in his quarrell,
 Richt as he did to him in ftrong batell.
 Blyth was the King quhen he hard this tyding ;
 Bot of this Knicht he ferliet ouer all thing,
 Throw quhais deidis the Turkis war diftroyit,
 Of him to hear his heart was fo joyit,
 That he never irkit of him to fpeir,
 His face, his faffoun, his ftatur and maneir.
 He tuike him in ane chalmer him allone,
 1380 And fpeirit at him uthir tydings anone.
 And he tauld furth as he requyrit ay ;
 Zit, Sir, he faid, I have fum thing to fay,
 This nobill Knicht of quhilk I [do] gow tell,
 The verie flour of chevelrie and well,
 Hes fent ane gudlie prefent to the Queine,
 I wald anone that it war with hir feine.
 Firft I will fe it, faid the King ; and thane
 To fech this tabeller he fent ane man.
 Sone it was brocht, prefentit to the King,
 1390 Quha it beheld, confidering in all thing
 Of it the valour and the [wondrous] micht ;
 He faid, Forfuith it is the faireft fight,
 And the maift pretious of the quantitie,
 That in my lyfe I ever faw with ey.

- He fent anone to chalmer for the Queine,
 Wha com with all hir ladies fair and fcheine,
 Whom the Constabill faluft hes, and fyne
 Hes tauld hir all the cace or he wald fyne ;
 Scho luikit on the royall ches of gold,
 1400 That pretious was and luffie to behold,
 And it commendit wonder grittumlie,
 And fo did all the ladyes that stude by.
 Then said the Queine, I thanke the gentill Knicht,
 That hes me send this thesaure of sic nicht,
 Forfuith he was no wratch I dar [it] tell,
 That hes pairtit with so rich ane jewell.
 And fyne confidering, said the nobill King,
 That he [gow] never saw in his leving,
 And git to me his name [it] is unknawin.
 1410 The Constabill said, With honour it falbe schawin,
 He is to name callit Clariodus,
 Knicht of this warld maist worthie and famous,
 Sone to the nobill Earle of Esturland.
 Then said the King, He man be vailgeand,
 For he is cumit of nobill parentell,
 His Father the Count know I verie well ;
 I have him seine into this Court repaire,
 Under the sone I know non gudlier.
 In all maner and wyfer nor is he,
 1420 The better always his Sone neidis most be ;
 And eik of Sir Clariodus himfell
 Out of England full oft have I hard tell,
 And of his manlie bewtie and vertew,
 Now find I weill that thay said of him trew,
 Whairfor, certes, attoure all [uther] thing,
 I long to have him in my Court dwelling.

- The Constabill said, He hes promifit me,
 Within schort tyme in this land for to be.
 That wald I, quoth the King, fa God me save,
 1430 Then his aquentance dreidles I fall have.
 When they had long tyme commonit in that place,
 The Queine gart put the chaker in that cace,
 And gart ane ladie take it up anone,
 And fyne unto hir chalmer is scho gone.
 Thame now in France in joy we let remaine,
 And speike we of Clariodus againe.
 Clariodus did all his biffines
 To gar the mariners them speid and dres
 To land alfweith with all thair faillis bent,
 1440 Of his Ladie fic thochts can him torment ;
 The more that he aproachit to the land,
 In heat defyre he was ay [more] birnand
 His Ladie for to fe: and then belyve
 On England coast he did faiffie aryve,
 Neir by the toun that reallie is wallit,
 Belvilladoun quhilk to name was callit ;
 Thair landit he and all his chevalrie,
 And to the toun thay raid richt royallie.
 Clariodus, as he raid throw the freit,
 1450 None of his auld aquantance could he meit ;
 In all the toun no kynd of man he saw
 That he was aquantit with or did knaw ;
 He saw so monie faces that war strange,
 He dread full fair that thair had beine fum change
 Into the Court ; quhairfor he mervell hade ;
 Thay fled him ay and war for him adred,
 For thay war of Sir Thomas inputing,
 The toun to rewle and put in governing.

- At his Innis this Lord [then] lichtit doun,
 1460 And hes gart herberie his folkis in the toun,
 All bot his fellowis quhilkis ever abaid
 With him still quhidder he geid or raid.
 His host him helfit fum deill hevilie.
 Perfeving hes Clariodus thairby,
 Tuik in his mynd ane suddant trew confait
 That fum tratour had wrocht a fore debait
 Againis him, bot most was in his thocht
 Meliades, if hir had aillit ocht.
 Full suddantlie to changing can his hew,
 1470 The bluide alfweith intill his face it schew ;
 Of misbeleife the stound struike to his heart,
 That in his breift it trublit him fore inuart ;
 Unto his chalmer sadlie he is gone.
 And to his host then cumin is anone
 Ane merchand of the toun, speiring thus,
 If he had spokin with Clariodus.
 Na, said the host, I dar not with him speike,
 For wo my heart was abill for to breke
 When I him saw ; bot he hes perfaving,
 1480 Throw my fad cheir he tuik evill conforting.
 The merchand said, Methinke that gud it war,
 That to my Lord we passit both in feir.
 The host consentit, that Bartane heicht to name.
 This Allane was ane man mikill of fame,
 And monie ane day was mair of the toun ;
 Bot from his heicht Sir Thomas pat him doun.
 When unto chalmer cuming war thir two,
 This Allane was in heart full hevie and wo,
 Who helfit him with teiris distelling.
 1490 Clariodus perfavit this in all thing,

Allane, ge ar full welcum unto me ;
 What new tydingis, my frind, [fra Court] bring ge ?
 Now tell how fairis the Kingis nobilnes,
 The Queine and hir zoung dochter the Princes ?
 I cam not in Court, faid Allane, thir monie day,
 Whairfor the maner I can not tell perfoy ;
 All that zour Father pat in the Kingis cervice,
 Sir Thomas hes put out on felloun wayis,
 And me he hes exonerit among the leave
 1500 Of the office that I had wount to have ;
 The King he rewellis and gydis as he list,
 Whairthrow the realme is hereit and opreft ;
 No man may cum into the Kings prefence,
 Bot throw his gyding and his gud plefance ;
 And ane thing, Sir, and worft of all the leave
 That he hes donne, thairfor the Feind him have,
 Be falfe report and divillifch treafoun eike
 He hes gart take Meliades the meike,
 The Kingis dochter and his heare alfo,
 1510 Withoutin caus and cruellie hir flo,
 And, fy ! alleace ! murderit hir foullie,
 Into ane nicht without onie mercie,
 With cruell churllis murdreift cruellie,
 The trewth I may not tell [zow] for pitie.
 When that Clariodus hard this tyding,
 The crampe of death did [faft] to his heart thring ;
 He gave ane figh, and faid, but wordis mo,
 Ha, Ladie myne, and ar ge endit fo !
 The fword of forrow gave him fic a wound
 1520 Unto the heart with fik ane deidlie ftound
 He nicht not fuffer it, bot doune he fell
 So pitioufflie that forrow war to tell ;

Unto the pavement as deid dufchit he,
 Hispaill vifage was gaitlie for to fe.
 Pallexis up flart foune, [and] cryit Ha!
 For ower grit wo he wift not quhat to fa.
 The Knechtis foure and burgis twa [than] ran,
 And liftit up the pail and deidlie man,
 And on ane bed him laid or thay wald ho,
 1530 And with thair handis febuike him to and fro,
 And foune his teith oppinit with ane knyfe ;
 Bot fill he lay [thair] deid as out of lyfe,
 And nothing lyke from daith [for] to revert ;
 Whairof his fellowis fic forrow tuik in heart,
 Thay maid fik duill that never hard was maire,
 Never ficht thay faw grevit them [fa] fair.
 Sik forrow maid Pallexis and his brother,
 That naine of them micht counfall gif to other.
 In this eftait lang lay this jentill Knecht ;
 1540 Bot the grit King of glorie and of micht,
 That ever is wicht quhaever be waike or feik,
 He wald not fuffer of his mercie meike
 Him that was gentill ay and merciabill
 In fik ane wyfe to end fo miferabill.
 So at the laft he out of found abraid
 Alfe wode of cheir, and luikit rycht affrayd ;
 He faw ane window and wald have lappin out ;
 His fellowis them affemblit him about,
 Withholding him among them tenderlie,
 1550 Him comforting with wordis moft heartlie.
 He paifit then the chalmer up and down,
 Melancolike, alfe furious as ane lyoun ;
 His eine thay brint and flमित as ane gleid,
 Defyryng to revenge the traitorheid

Of the maist faikles murder and felloune,
 Done to this innocent Ladie be trefoun.
 Alleace! he said, quhat fall I do or fay,
 My warldis joy is [from me] rest for ay ;
 O now quhair fall I go or quhair fall I ryd,
 1560 Quhair fall I walke at evin or morrow tyd !
 Whairto for sleip fould I to bedis go,
 Or quhairto ryse, I waits of nocht bot wo,
 Or quhairto leive I, [now] thus myne allone,
 When all my cumpanie is fra me gone ;
 O Death, cum slay me captive in distres,
 That never fall have ane day of mirrines !
 Why lests my bodie, feing my heart is slaine,
 Fairweill for ever all eardlie joy againe !
 And this he said with sik ane pitious cheir,
 1570 It was ane paine him for to se or heir ;
 And forrow him tormentit so fellounlie,
 Monie ane tyme he cryit God mercie,
 Have mercie, Lord, that [wifelie] hes me wrocht,
 Syne with thy daith so deir thow hes me bocht,
 That I fall not in desperatioun ;
 Thy woundis fyve be my salvatioun
 That I do nocht that may my soul [eer] tyne ;
 I ask thé mercie, sweit Redemer myne,
 Now of my greif and my impatience,
 1580 Who am bereft of all intelligence,
 And can no refoun have nor sufferance
 Whill daith upon me do his uterance ;
 And eike have mercie on gon fair Ladie,
 Sen I hir lovit for no villanie,
 As for the cryme scho stervit ane innocent,
 And pitioullie with churlis all to rent,

And murtherit as ane theif without a judge,
 Be thou hir reffait, succour and refuge ;
 And let thy woundis be for hir remeid,
 1590 That for hir finnis oppinit war fo reid ;
 Among thy angellis refave hir in thy joy,
 As thou that ar of mercie Prince and Roy.

With that the teiris geid out of his eine,
 With fichis deip, and fobbis ay betweine,
 That none on lyfe micht fe him nor behold,
 Bot he anone fould weipe thoch he not wold,
 Suppofe his heart war harder nor the ftone.
 His fellowis foure maid ane pitioufe mone
 For him in fecreit [wyfe] ; bot not the les,
 1600 With fuggerit wordis of great humbilnes,
 Thay comfortit him, and oft bad him eit :
 Bot he fo fillit was with dolour grite,
 No meit he wald ifay ; bot bad that thay
 Sould to thair fupper go without delay.

When they had foupit all, thame gart he call,
 And faid, Go fend furth to our frindis all
 In this kinrick, both Prince, Earle, Lord and Knight
 That lovis me, or in my quarrell richt
 Will make defence, and pray thame tenderlie,
 1610 Into all haft that thay will make redie
 To cum with all their nobill chevalrie
 In my fupplie ; for now [that] verilie,
 I never thinke fiefch to eit nor wyne to drinke,
 Whill that I make gon Tratour to forthinke
 That ever he trefoun wrocht on fike wayis,
 And quhill the daith of fair Meliades
 Revengit be, that all the warld fall heir.

Then Allan faid to him on this maneir,

My Lord, your charge I fall fulfill alway ;
 1620 Bot if ge wairne those Prinfis, as ge fay,
 Sir Thomas will get wit, and will evaid :
 Bot will ge [now] my counfall doe, he said,
 Ge fall cum to him [richt] without wairning,
 In that fame place quhair he is with the King.
 In the toun of Clarans quhairin he remains,
 Ouklie we carie hay in carts and wains,
 And I my felf fall hay have to the toun ;
 Whairfor I wald [that] threttie men war boun,
 In cairtis clofit [all] weill privilee,
 1630 All ower with hay coverit quyetlie,
 And [so] no man will stope [thame] quhill that thay
 Be went within the gettis, quhair ge may
 Ane buschment have a litill gow befyde,
 That haiftilie may efter them in ryd.

When he hes hard him on this wayis conclude,
 He thankit him, and said the way was gud ;
 And bad all fould be donne as he [had] said
 Againe the morne, and all thus reddie maid.

He callit on his luiftennantis than,
 1640 And bad thay fould be redie everie man
 Neir by the toun of Clarans by the day
 In the wode fyd, and hold them quyetlie
 Whill that thay hard thame cry within the carts,
 And then to speid them [out] with mirrie hearts.

When this was said, they went all to [their] bed,
 Clariodus him leinit doune all cled,
 All nicht bewailling hir death pitioufflie,
 That was so fair, so gud and womanlie :
 Bot up he raife full long before the day
 1650 With his foure fellowis, doing thame aray

In weirlyk weidis ; and fyne went haifilie
 To Allanis Innis, quhair all war maid redie.
 Clariodus and his fellowis anone,
 But longer tarie ar to ane cart all gone,
 With utheris whom thay lykit best to have,
 Ane cartar come and furth [the gait] thame drave ;
 The uther cairt [then] fillit was also
 With men of armis, and thus furth thay go
 To the toun of Clarains be the licht of day,
 1660 Whair the draw brig founne drawin have thay ;
 The port was oppin, they enterit suddently,
 With ane grit noyis raifit up the cry ;
 With that the buschment brake with [richt] gud fpeid ;
 Clariodus affendit on his steid,
 And to the palice raid or he wald ho ;
 Pairt of his folkis commandit he to go
 The toun to seurch, and ay quhair thay finde
 Sir Thomas' men, in priffoun them to binde.
 Clariodus then [maist] unfrayitlie
 1670 In palice enterit with all his chevalrie,
 And in that chalmer quhair that was the King,
 With him Sir Thomas, not witting of this thing ;
 For had he wittin that Sir Clariodus
 Had landit beine and com so neir as thus,
 He wald have fled away if that he micht.
 Amongs them enterit hes this nobill Knicht
 And lawlie on his knie falust the King
 With honour dew, and with gud blissing ;
 Syne went and hynt Sir Thomas be the hand,
 1680 Saying, O trator false and diffaveand,
 Thankis to God that now is cumit the day
 That with thy traoun thow no [way] chape may,

- That thow hes said, ather fall thow preive,
 Or it fall turne thé to thy grit mischeive.
 Syne to his fellowis four gave him in cure,
 Commanding them that thay sould keip him fure.
 Syne to the King he said on this maneir,
 Sir, for this caus I [now] am cumit heir,
 This curfit tratour with his fellounie,
 1690 Of verie malice movet and invie,
 Hes wrocht of his awin imaginatioun,
 Be false and feindlie conspiratioun,
 [Sic] wayis zow and zour bloode to distroy,
 That he micht of this regioun ring as Roy ;
 Zour Dochter innocent he hes put to deid
 Full saikleflie but mercie or remeid ;
 Wha falslie leit on me, as prove I fall
 On onie He this day that is mortall
 That will or dar abyde at his opinioun ;
 1700 Thair is not thrie into this regioun
 That will mantine his quarrell or defend
 Bot I fall give him battell to the end
 Againis them all at onis myne allone,
 Or with them syndrie feight [fall] on be on ;
 Whairfor gar call him heir befor zow now,
 And speir if he the treasoun will avow.
 The King him callit ; and then Clariodus,
 In prefence of them all, said to him thus,
 Sir Thomas, take zow choise of thingis two,
 1710 Ather zoursel in battell with me to go
 And twa with zow the best [that] ze can wail,
 [And curft be he that in the fight shall fail,]
 Or prove that ze have said befor the King,
 Than, if ze doe, I merite punisching.

Then this Tratur trimblit [baith] fute and hand,
 And said, I will not into batell stand,
 I me confes of all this false treafoune,
 I have defervit daith at fchort fermoun ;
 My Lady I gart faiklellie be fchent,
 1720 For trewth to daith fcho is gone innocent ;
 Thir letteris with my handis all I wraite.

Then all the Court at onis maid regrate
 For the zoung Princes, fair Meliades,
 All caufles put to daith on this wayis ;
 Thay gart the letteris thair all [be] present,
 Cauffing Sir Thomas wryte incontinent,
 To fe if that the writtis lyke war : thane
 This ilk Sir Thomas [for] to wryte begane ;
 Quhilk wryting fo lyke was to the uthir,
 1730 That nane of theme micht be knowen quhidder :
 Then with ane voice thay cryit all at onis,
 Ha, birne the cruell Tratur, fell and bonis !

Clariodus upon his kne fat doune,
 And askit justice of the deid felloun.
 The King maid mone, that sorrow was to fie,
 For hir that was fo full of grite bewtie,
 So full of vertew and of gentilnes,
 He wold have flaine himself in his madnes
 War nocht the Lordis was him befyde ;
 1740 He raif his hair and pitioullie he cryed.
 To wryte zow all his sorrow and his cair,
 It fould me occupy ane long day and mair ;
 He fell on kneis before Clariodus,
 Saying to him thir wordis pitious,
 Let not zow Tratur firft to his deid go,
 Bot begine at me and with zour fword me flo,

- That most have deservit for to die ;
 All princes may exampill take of me,
 Thus unadvysit to distroy thair blood,
 1750 Or than advysit, counfall thairto conclude ;
 Why let ge me in wo thus liveing heir,
 On me doe furth gour deid, schrinke for no feir.
 With that he raif his awin hair pitioullie,
 And strake him self wounder fellounlie.
 Clariodus alweith tuike up the King
 Into his armis, thus to him saying,
 Sir, ge fould nocht fit on kneis to me,
 Bot unto God, to him sailgeit [have] ge
 And to the leigis of gour regioun,
 1760 For ge distroyit gour succellioun,
 Thair onelie Princes, and gour richteous aire,
 That quhyllum was countit [fa] wyse and fair.
 The King commandit that his feigis royall
 Sould be renewit, wher the pepill all
 Micht se the mortall castigioun
 Of this Sir Thomas, for his falsse treafoun ;
 At his command quhilk sounne removit was
 And in the grit court sat of his palice :
 And syne commandit he the burgis two,
 1770 Clariodus' host and Allan also,
 To make ane oppin proclamatioun
 Of all things [to be done] with trumpit sound,
 That all the peipill micht of Clarains toun
 Cum and se justice donne of his treafoun ;
 And bad them bring the burriours also.
 Thir two, as than commandit, furth thay go,
 As he bad doe, anone the famine ways,
 And maid ane scaffald upon heicht to ryse.

Sir Thomas callit was in judgement,
 1780 And with ane fife fyllit incontinent ;
 Syne damnit to be drawin ilke lith from uther,
 In prefence of King Philipon his brother ;
 Of quhilk was maid ane executioun
 Upon the scaffold, the peipill environ :
 The peipill nicht not lichtlie numberit be,
 Whilk thrang so thike the maner for to fie.
 The King in judgment sat [exaltit] thair
 Whill justifit Sir Thomas' folkis war
 And all that gave him counfall or supplie
 1790 To doe that felloun deid of crueltie.

[This done,] unto Belvelladoun thay raid,
 Into the Court grit hevines was maid.
 Clariodus raid speiking with the Queine,
 Betwix quhom [ay] grit forrow nicht be feine ;
 When they spake of Meliades the bricht
 With weiping all to blindit was thair fight.
 The King alaweith is enterit in the toun,
 Whair he reposit, and quhyllum maid sojorne
 For to take ordour with everilk officer
 1800 That Sir Thomas had put from office thair.
 Then all was wrocht and endit on this wyfe,
 And enterit all agane to thair service.

Clariodus his leive tuike at the King,
 As he had long thocht of his tarying ;
 The cuntrie that sum tyme [fyne] he thocht fair,
 And had in it sic plesour to repair,
 Than thocht he all was bair and barren wildernes,
 So far his heart was bund in hevines
 That in that land he nicht not eit nor sleip,
 1810 Bot weipand ay with sadest fichis deip.

The King said, Sir Clariodus, I fe
 That ge na longer list to byd with me ;
 Zit pitie this realme, gentill Knicht,
 That in fike perrell standis day and nicht,
 For fault of ane the peipill to convoy ;
 And ge depart, fairweill fra me all joy ;
 Your Father eik, efter your [hame] cuming,
 I wait will enter no more in this rigne,
 Then it is put cleine to distructioun :
 1820 Thairfor I make your supplicatioun,
 That ge disdaine not for to byde with me,
 Whill that your Father cum into this cuntrie.
 Clariodus wald not him grant, for quhy,
 He trouit never to cum againe fuitly,
 And for to heicht ane thing and keip it nocht
 Was never in his mynd, deid nor thocht ;
 Whairfor he wald not grant for to abyde.
 The peipill cryit all on everie fyd,
 Ha, gentill Knicht, and flour of nobilnes,
 1830 Leave never the King into his heich distres ;
 Bot rew on him, for his saike hes your bocht,
 For he to leive langer fall he nocht,
 For sorrow and langour efter ge be gone.
 When that this Knicht hard thair pitious mone,
 Confort your, Sir, he said, for Godis saike,
 And I fall doe so, heir I undertake,
 That pleisit ge falbe, [as] I weill wait ;
 Now heir my brother that Palexis heicht,
 And eik my couing Amandur his brother,
 1840 I fall them two leave with your and no uther,
 Albeit I war full laith them to forgo ;
 Bot zit with your thay fall byd baith the two,

As thay that manheid and discretioun
Hes for to rewle the cuntrie up and doun.

This being finit, schortlie for to tell,
Clariodus, that is of knichtheid well,
His leave hes takine baith at King and Queine,
With wofull teares birfing out of his eine ;
He tuike his leave at the merchand also,
1850 And at his gud host, thanking oft thay two
Of thair gud service and thair bislines ;
And syne at all his freindis more and les :
Bot quhen anone the peipill saw him ryde
Out throw the toun, full pitifullie thay cryed,
Fair weill, our confort now and all our joy !
Fair weill, our cheif protector out of noy !
Fair weill, the gentillest Knicht and maist worthie
In all the warld that beine aluterlie !

Out of the toun he haiftilie did ryd,
1860 For clamour of the pepill him besyd ;
And quhen he was ane myle out of the toun,
He and his fellous thair lichtit [tham] doun ;
To tham he said, My frindis traift and deir,
I zow reverence, and oft thankis zow heir
Of zour service and nobill cumpanie,
I me commend to zow maist hartfullie,
Now mon I pase from zow, and nothing wote
If I to zow will cum againe or not :
Bot ze fall not be dispurvayit at all,

1870 My Father in this cuntrie soune cum he fall,
And traift richt weill [that] not forget fall I
To gar my Father compleit finaly
Zour mariagis, be ze not adred ;
My frind Palexis, ze fall Cadar wed,

- Whom ge have handfast; and Amandur fall get
 The King of Spainges sifter Mandonet;
 And ge that ar my uther fellowis two
 Sall have Barronis dochteris also
 Into our land, quhilk neir ar of our blude;
 1880 And feing that kyndnes ever amongis us stude,
 Now let us keip it till our latter day,
 And se that ge luife uther rycht weill ay:
 And ge, my cufings two, over all thing,
 Exerce gour office and please weill gour King;
 Amongs the peipill conqueis ge sik name,
 That gour frindis have no reproch nor blame.
 With this, into his armis he did tham fange,
 And then begouth sik weiping them amang,
 That pitie it had beine for to behold.
 1890 Ane efter uther he in his armes fold,
 And kissit them, bot nicht no wirdis say;
 Syne lap upon his hors and raid his way.
 Still thay remainit efter he was gone,
 Sore weiping and bewailling thame allone;
 Thay wift he wald go walke in wildernes,
 And never thairefter ane joyous day posses;
 Whairfor thair painfull forrow and thair cheir
 War all to long for to byd on to heir.
 Thir four full sadlie to the toun thay went,
 1900 And he as woode man spurrit ower the bent,
 As he that wift not quhair to ryd or go,
 His breift was so oprest with inwart greif and wo.
 Clariodus raid furth on this maneir,
 Ane grit forrest quhill he aproachit neir;
 Then sped he him with all the haift he may,
 For doubt they fould have stoppit him the way.

- So in the forrest happinit him to meit
 Ane Palmer cumand, quhilk did on him greit,
 And of his almes asked him, and said,
 1910 That felloun briggandis him dispuilzeit had.
 Clariodus said, Father, for certaine,
 The halie gaitis that ze wount to gang
 Will not alway let zow dispurvayit be ;
 Ze fall have all my cloathes, and gif me
 Your clothes againe, and tak myne betwine.
 Glaid was the Pilgrime this ilk change to feine.
 Clariodus put on the Palmers weid,
 And he gave him his cloathes and his steid.
 The Palmer said, My Lord, I weill persave,
 1920 That seiknes or melancholie ze have ;
 Have patience in distres for ony thing,
 For naturallie the warld is ay changing,
 And glad joy cumis nixt adverfitie
 Be cours of fortounis mutabilitie.
 Clariodus than thankis to him maid,
 Saying, God grant it be as ze have said.
 Thus went he furth in palmer weid allone,
 Out throw the forrest quhill the day was gone ;
 The nicht aproachit and he abydis thair,
 1930 Baith wind and raine [then] dang on him richt fair,
 That he in hafart was to losè his lyfe.
 As day begouth and nicht away did drive,
 He paicet furth, and fand ane finall passage,
 Quhilk had him throw the wood to ane village ;
 He enterit, asking almous for Godis saike ;
 Sum gave him pairt, and sum did him forsaïke,
 And bad him go and wirke, for he was wicht,
 And fair of persoune thocht he war ane Knicht ;

- Weill tailzeit of his bodie up and doun,
 1940 They bade him go [and] thryfche in everie toun.
 Clariodus then sped him biffilie
 Whill he come to the sea, and tuik harbrie
 Into ane hevining place where fchipes were,
 And redie for to faill in cuntries feir.
 Ane was to go in Eftur land; whairfore
 He haiftilie hes paffit to the fchore,
 And fpeirit at the marineris in hy,
 Gif thay wald tak him in thair cumpanie.
 Thay faid, If that he could make gud service,
 1950 They wald refave him into gudlie wayis.
 Then hes he faid, no worke he wald refuse,
 That onie uther fervitor did ufe.
 The Skipper faid, Go let him in anone,
 For he is manfull big of brane and bone;
 He feames to be na balleift in the how,
 He fall weill hald ane anker or ane tow,
 To mak our windis [for] to go on force,
 And he will draw about lyke ony hors;
 To dicht our meit, full weill gainis gon feir,
 1960 To lift ane mekill caldroun on the fyre.
 Up gois the faillis, the fchip gois to the flude,
 And cuike thay maid Clariodus the gud;
 He dicht thair meit, and maid tham gud service
 In humbill maner, and in gudlie wyfe.
 The wind was fair, the fchip was gud be faill,
 The marineris wicht and biffie in travell;
 To Eftur land aprocht thay belyve,
 And in ane port faiftie did aryve.
 The merchands unto land paff everie one,

- 1970 Clariodus to land is with thame gone,
 And at the mariners his leave he tuike,
 Quhilk wald have feit him to have beine thair cuike.
 He said, Frindis, I mon to Andromage,
 Quhilk till compleit it is a fair voyage ;
 Whairfor have me excufit for to gone.
 Thay bad him cloathes, bot he refavit none.
 He tuike his leave ; and thay bad God him gyde.
 Unto the toun of Estur neir befyd
 He drestit him to go with bissines,
- 1980 Whair that his Father and his Mother was.
 Clariodus furth holdeth but fojorne,
 Whill he com neir the fuburbs of the toun ;
 Beholding [all] the toun and the castell,
 He laid him doun agroufe befyde ane well,
 And thair he maid the fairest regrating,
 That might be hard of ony creatour leving,
 Saying, Alleace, O toun ! O castell and citie !
 Baith may ge ban that ilk nativitie
 Of that divellifch Sir Thomas the tratour,
- 1990 Throw quhom to zow fall cum fic [fad] dollour.
 O Count of Estur, ge and zour Ladie,
 What wofull painis and melancholie
 Sall to zow cum, quhen that ge know all cleir
 [How that for greif your Son is dying heir !]
 How it is falline, and the curfit chance !
 Thairwith he tuike sik ane [grit] displifance,
 He brift all out of teiris pitioullie,
 Of his unfortoun pleinand wofullie,
 And maid the hardest lamentatioun
- 2000 That ever was hard in ony regioun.

Bot loe, as fortoun turnis so quyetly,
 Unto this well thair come [all] suddenly
 Meliades, hame water for to bring,
 And saw this wofull man on grouffe lying,
 Bewailling in distrese so pitiouslie,
 That to behold this Ladie thocht ferlie ;
 So him to heir with monie sob and grone,
 It wald have thirllit ony heart of stone ;
 And quhill scho him can [thus] behald and se,
 2010 Scho for him tuike in heart so great pitie,
 For verie rewth scho weipit and was wo,
 Saying, My frind, why do ge gour self flo?
 Or quhat ar ge, that thus so pitiouslie
 Gour self demainis thus with melancolie ?
 For Godis faike take gow sum patience,
 And to gour self do never fike offence.
 Full faine scho wald have comfortit him sum wayis,
 For scho was haly, cheritabill and wyse.
 His heid then hes he raifit upon loft,
 2020 To se quha gave to him thir wordis soft,
 That confort him upon so meike maneir ;
 Bot all to blindit was his eine so cleir,
 That he not redilie nicht espie hir face,
 Saying, I thank gow Sister, bot alleace !
 How that it standis with me if that ge knew,
 I traift ge wald upon my painis rew,
 Or ony in warld that is now on lyve ;
 Or if thay wift how that with daith I fryve,
 Or knew the caus quhairfor I thus compleine,
 2030 For to have mercie rewth wald thame constraine
 On me that is the forrowfullest wicht

In warld that leives under Phebus bricht.
 This Ladie said, My freind, trest ze [me] weill,
 To ony wicht if that ze list reveale
 Zour infortoun, and zour misaventur,
 It fould zow swage sumthing of zour dollour.
 He said, My sweit Sister, [the] suith ze say,
 If that remeid might be in onie way
 Then gud it war for to reveill my paine ;
 2040 Bot ay, alleace ! thir words ar all in vaine,
 Remeid is none, the ender of my wo
 Is death, alleace ! thairfor fra me ze go,
 And me to confort zow no mair dispone,
 And let me sterve for uther bute is none.
 With that he gave ane sigh full cairfullie,
 And teiris did out rine so wofullie,
 That wounder was that he fould leive ane hour.
 Sweit Sir, scho said, the cause of zour dolour
 Please ze reveale ; fould it zow not displease
 2050 I fould zow schaw how that ane woman was
 In alse grit trubill and adverfitie
 As ony creatour in earth might be,
 And git throw grace of God scho did evaid
 The great missaventur befor hir laide,
 And houpe hes git confortit for to be
 Alway restorit to hir awin degrie :
 Thairefter may ze pryfe if ze or sche,
 More panis sufferit or adverfitie.
 When that he hard hir [thus] so beninglie
 2060 Him answeir make, and [eke] so foberlie,
 To confort him so gritlie desyring,
 And that scho was so wo for his weiping,

Then hebegane with ane pitious cheire
 The cace to tell, faying on this maneir,
 Nocht long gone syne, I lovit paramour,
 Ane Ladie quhilk was of all this warld flour,
 Ane Kingis onlie dochter and his air,
 Under bricht Phebus was thair naine fa fair,
 So humbill, gentill, sober and bening,
 2070 In quhom at schorht did everie vertew ring,
 That was perteing unto womanheid.
 This eike day star and rose of gudlieheid
 Was be hir fatheris charge full haiftlie
 Taine to ane wood and murtherit cruellie
 By the reporting of ane tratour knicht,
 Alleace, that ever that wofull day was licht !
 Scho was my eardlie joy and conforting,
 Whom that I lovit atoure all eardlie thing,
 My only plesour of all this warld so wyde.
 2080 He told hir furth, and did no wordis hyde.
 Scho him beheld with looke full studious ;
 And quhen scho wist it was Clariodus,
 But mair abaid anone scho to him past,
 And him beclipit in hir armis fast ;
 For ower grit bliffe no wurd scho nicht outbring,
 The suddant joy and haiftie conforting
 Unto hir heart it straike so haiftlie,
 Scho nicht not suffer it so abundantlie,
 Bot reveift of hir spreit scho fell in swoun.
 2090 And than Clariodus of grit renoune,
 Beholding on hir in [maift] grathlie wayis,
 And saw it was his fair Meliades,
 He nicht for joy na words bring furth or fay,

- Nor wist weill long quhair he was perfay.
 And quhen that he of himselfe ocht wist,
 This Madine into his armis then he thrust,
 And held hir up quhilk was to him full deir,
 And tuike cold water of the fontaine cleir
 And sprincklit on hir lustie snow quhyt face.
- 2100 So scho recoverit hes within a space,
 Saying thir wordis, Ha, my Clariodus,
 I trowit never againe to feine gow thus.
 And with ane figh, fra that [was] faid, anone
 Ane rusch of blude furth at hir nose is gone,
 Or ellis I traist scho fould have deid beine,
 For scho nicht not for ower grit joy fusteine
 Withoutin death or passioun corporall :
 For joy of nature beine celestially,
 And with angellis inparticipat ;
- 2110 Quhairfor the spirit mon be separat
 From the bodie, or it grit joy possheid,
 Or forrow eik if it gritlie exceid.
 The blude effusit sa abundantlie,
 That he could not it stanch nor remidie.
 Then of the ringe alfeweith rememberit he,
 That was him gevin efter the mellie
 Be him that was transformit in the lyoun,
 Whais vertew beine for bludis effusioun ;
 He tuichit hir with it, and scho anone
- 2120 Ceisit of bleiding ; and quhan this was gone,
 Thay uthir in armis did tenderlie imbrace,
 And oft hes kissit uther in that place.
 Bot git all this nicht not him fatiffie,
 He dred that it had beine ane fantasie

- Fallin on him, throw hevie thochtis fade,
 Quhairthrow that he had witles beine and mad ;
 Whairfor to hir he said, My Ladie deir,
 And is it trewth that ge beine with me heir ?
 Treft weill, quod scho, Clariodus my Knicht,
 2130 That I am heir full glad to fe this fight,
 Whilk long gone fyne to fe I trowit never,
 Sumtyme I weinit we partit beine for ever ;
 And that was quhen the burriouris me led
 Unto the forrest, and thair me uncled
 At mid nicht hour, quhen ge war far me fro.
 And with that word thay fighit both [the] two.
 Your wofull daith, quod he, and gan to weipe,
 Into my heart enterit is so deipe,
 That git your lyfe nocht [all] so perfytlie
 2140 May in my breift git sink so suddantlie.
 What wald I longer of thair joyis wryte ?
 I can not half report nor put in dyte
 Thair bliffull cheir and joyous continance,
 Conforting uther with wordis of plesance.
 Adoun thay fat and fell in comoning,
 And them pleasit of monie diverse thing,
 Doing to uther all the cace reveill,
 As to thame hapinit, schawing everie deill
 Thair grit infortoun and adverstie.
 2150 Ather of uther then had grit pitie.
 And quhen Meliades on humbill wayis,
 Had told him all the maner and the gyse,
 How scho demainit was so pitiousslie,
 Then he for rewth did weipe full tenderlie.
 To speik in this, sik plesour tuike thir two,

- That Ladar had forgettin hame to go ;
 Whairfor hir maistres speirit for hir so fast,
 Whill scho went furth to feik hir at the last,
 And fand her sitting onlie with ane man,
 2160 [Scho thocht hir mad, and thus in wrath began,]
 Saying, Evill woman, quly hes thow me betraifit,
 Your vertew ay I commendit and praisit,
 And now I fe full weill how that it standis,
 Ze fall have fair punitioun of my handis :
 And ze evill man, quha hes maid zow sa pert,
 To tryft my servand furth in this desert ;
 Wald ze hir steill fra me in this maneir ?
 Trest weill that fall not ly in zour power.
 With awfull luik to Ladar than scho said,
 2170 Ze fall forthinke that ever this tryft was maid ;
 In ane strange hour was zour [fad] begining
 To cum to me, that neid hes of keiping.
 When Ladar saw hir maistres was [fo] movit,
 Scho was not all content, for scho hir lovit,
 And eik scho confidderit discretlie,
 That for hir gud scho spake it veralie ;
 Whairfor scho said, with sweit and humbill cheir,
 With bening luike and womanlie effer,
 My fair Maistres, displeas zow not I pray,
 2180 For heir am I that is and falbe ay
 Jouris at all, and redie zow to pleis :
 Bot now zour heart in sumthing to appease,
 The trewth of this mater ze fall know of us,
 Heir is zour Lordis sone Clariodus
 But ony dreid, and I am with zow heir,
 The King of Inglandis only dochter deir.

- This woman was abaisit than sumthing,
 And speirit how it micht be so falling.
 And scho hir tauld the cace then oppinlie.
 2190 Than sat scho doun on kneis fudantlie,
 Saying, My Lord, I ask zow forgiveness,
 And ze my Lady full of gentilnes,
 Forgif me of my fault and negligens,
 That have sa far misgone in zour presens,
 And have me nothing in disdaine nor heat,
 That now [am] heir ane puire woman, God wait ;
 Ze may me weill distroy at zour awin will,
 That hes so far by reafoun said zow till.
 Clariodus [hir] up in armis tuike ;
 2200 Then said Meliades with freindlie luike,
 Maistres, be glaid, and do [zow] merrie make,
 Ze are forgivine, and that I undertake ;
 Have ze no dreid, bot traift richt verilie
 We fall zow bring to honour suddantlie.
 Then said scho to Clariodus, My love,
 Sen God hes fet our heartis thus above,
 That war so deip drounit in hevines,
 I reid with humbill continence we dres
 Us to the kirk, and thank God heartfullie ;
 2210 Nane fall zow ken in all the toune trewlie,
 Into this royall habite that ze weir.
 With that scho smylit with womanlie effer ;
 He smylit eike, and said, I me consent.
 And swa all thrie unto the kirk they went.
 And leift that folkis fould unto them take heid,
 Meliades gart hir maistres first proceid.
 Swa in the kirke thay enterit devotlie,

And offerit thair, with heartis meiklie,
 Loving to God, with thanks a thowfsand fyfe,
 2220 Whilk gave tham grace to meit on fik ane wyfe.

When this was donne, than faid Clariodus,
 Madame, I think that beft it war for us,
 Unto my fatheris palice for to go.
 Richt as ge will, fcho faid, I will do fo.
 Then to the palice paffit thay anone,
 And this gudewyfe they maid with them to gone.
 And to the getts quhen they cumin war,
 Clariodus then faid to the portar,
 My freind, we thre hes erand with the Lord,

2230 Of quhilk he wald be glaid to heir record ;
 Whairfor I wald gow pray gif us entrie
 Within your get, to remaine quhile ge
 Our erand did, praying him speciallie,
 To cum and fpeik with us all privilie.

The portar let them enter in anone,
 Richt as thay bad he to the Earle is gone,
 And faid as they him ordanit in all thing ;
 And he alfweith withouttin tarying,
 Tuike with him bot ane varlot and no mo,
 2240 Syne to the porteris ludge culd to them go.
 And quhen Clariodus [thair] can him fe,
 Adoun he fat alfweith upon his kne.
 Meliades and hir maiftres alfo
 Sat ftill and held them quyet gond them fro.
 He helfit hes his Father reverentlie.
 This Lord beheld his Sone, and haiftilie
 Him knew, and was amervellit for to fe
 Him diffigurat in fo low degrie.

- He said to him, My sone, Clariodus,
 2250 How and quhat fassioun ar ge rewlit thus ?
 Whair beine zour valiant actis and renoune,
 Zour fame proclamit in ilk regioun,
 That standis now in sik ane puire estait,
 But companie thus walking diffolat ?
 He said, My Lord, the litill valiant deid
 That in me was, withoutin ony dreid
 As git I have not tint it in no wayis.
 And then anone his Father gart him ryse,
 And fet him down to rest thair him besyde,
 2260 Efter his ganging, quhilk was wount to ryde.
 Then told he him, with ever ilk circumstance,
 All haill the maner to the uterance,
 Of all Meliades adverstie and wo.
 And rycht as he was telling how that scho
 Was led into the forrest to be slaine,
 This Lord nicht not conteine for wo and paine ;
 Bot as ane wode man raif his hair for teine,
 With sorrowfull teiris rining from his eine,
 For than he traistit that scho had beine dead,
 2270 And murtherit in the forrest but remeid.
 Then said Clariodus, My Lord, finally,
 My taill not to end [fullie] brocht have I,
 Heir quhat I fall git of hir farther say ;
 This Ladie that so verteous beine ay,
 God wald not suffer of his grit mercie,
 Hir to be slaine that tyme so cruellie :
 The burriouris of hir had sik pitie,
 That thay nicht not do sik ane crueltie,
 As with thair handis sik ane virgine flo ;

- 2280 Bot aff the land thay gart promit to go,
 That scho sould never be feine in that cuntrie.
 And so furth all the maner told hes he,
 Of all the eventours that hir befell,
 And how so long in Estur scho did dwell,
 And quhat of travell hir betyde also,
 And how that he in exyle thocht to go.
 And quhair is my Ladie, quoth Earle Estur,
 That hes betyde sa mony aventure ?
 If that ge list with hir to speik, quoth he,
- 2290 Befyd zow sitting heir ge may hir se.
 And quhen this Lord hes hard of this tyding,
 To hir he passit, lowlie inelyning,
 And in his armis imbracit hir tenderlie,
 And kissit hir rycht oft and freindfullie,
 Having more joy and glaidnes hir to se,
 Nor ony sight that ever he saw with ey.
 He said, Madam, I thanke the Trinitie,
 That ge have chapit this infirmitie ;
 That it was ge, quhy told ge not, alleace !
- 2300 This uther day quhen ge war in my place,
 That I said ge resemlit in bewtie
 To sik ane Ladie, if ge rememberit be ?
 He did hir welcum with grit reverence,
 As he that was full glaid of hir presence,
 And of the cuming of his Sone also ;
 Then all to chalmer togidder thay did go.
 The Earle himself is for the Countes went,
 And told hir all the maner and event.
 Scho is unto them cumit haistilie,
- 2310 And thair scho salust this Ladie courtellie,

And thocht scho was in full simpill aray,
 Scho did hir honour grit, the fuith to say,
 And welcumit hir fair on lawlie wayis,
 And scho againe hes thankit [hir] oft sayis.
 Clariodus scho tuike in armis fyne.

I can not all the maner to zow defyne,
 Nor tell zow half the joy was thame amang.
 Knichtis and Ladies thair about thame thrang,
 Them welcuming with freindlie countinace.

2320 This was ane day of feisting and plesance,
 The nicht owerpast with joy and mirrines ;
 And on the morrow with full grite biffines,
 The Earle gart ordane claites rich and fair
 Of gold and silke, [maist] plesant and preclair,
 With rich furringis coastlie and pretious,
 Both for this Ladie and for Clariodus,
 In all the haift and speid that [weill] thay may.

Meliades, that wyfe and honorabill was ay,
 Requyrit hes the Earle richt humbillie,

2330 That his Ladie in bed nicht with hir ly,
 Into ane chalmer onlie be them fellis,
 Whair none war bot Ladies and damofellis.
 The Earle hir grantit hes with cheir bening,
 And thairof hir commendit in mekill thing.

Syne on the morne quhen tyme was [for] to ryle,
 Rich cloathes of gold most richlie to devyfe,
 Thay brocht unto Meliades the bricht ;
 And to hir Maistres eik as it was rycht,
 Thay brocht ane gounne of skarlot gud and fyne,

2340 That was weill furrit with potent rich armyne.
 Then blyth was this gudwyfe of hir livaray,

The quhilk unto Meliades can fay,
 Madam, I thanke your Ladyship heartlie,
 That me hes gart reuaird [thus] fo richlie ;
 So askit leave to pas hame to hir house,
 Quhilk scho hir grantit with countenance joyous,
 Saying, Ze mone cum oft and vissie me ;
 Or we depairt ze fall rewairdit be
 Far better be sik fevin ; and then heartlie
 2350 Scho hir imbracit, and kissit tenderlie.

Clariodus upon the same maneir,
 With cloathes that was pretious and deir,
 Servit was in his chalmer royallie ;
 To quhom ane barbour com [full] bissilie,
 And off he shouife his lang hairis [all] cleine,
 That weill long space upon his beard had beine.
 Syne lustillie he did his geir on dres,
 As flour of Knichtheid and of gentilnes.

The Earle unto Meliades is went,
 2360 And said, Madame, it war convenient
 Unto the kirk to go all in effeir,
 And to gif thankis in all devot maneir
 To God, that did fo mekill for zow provide.
 This Ladie said, we awcht baith tyme and tyde
 To praise the Lord, that ws fo happie maid.
 This being said, no longer thay abaid.
 Then be the arme he tuike Meliades,
 The Court all followit upon gudlie wayis.
 The pepill gatherit in grit plentie,
 2370 This strange Ladie and Princes for to se ;
 Thay hir [bricht] bewtie gritlie did commend,
 And said, And feike unto the worldis end,

Thair nicht no man se fik ane [gudeli]e ficht,
 As for ane lustie Ladie and ane Knicht,
 Nor for to luik upon that fair Princes,
 And on this Knicht, quhilk wicht and worthie was.
 Scho enteris in the kirk, and [eke] anone
 The Countes meiklie efter hir is gone,
 With hir ane Lady fair and weil beseine.
 2380 This Princes was honourit as ane Queine,
 The quhilk hir held so [wife and] demurli
 At hir devotioun, and so womanlie,
 With so grit constancie and devote cheir,
 Bening of luik, and womanlie of maneir,
 That to the pepill weill it nicht be seine,
 That scho ane michtie Kingis dochter beine,
 And was discendit of ane nobill hous.

When they had endit thair devotioun thus,
 The nobill Earle hir be the armis tuike,
 2390 And with ane humbill countinace and luik
 To Palice ar returnit demurli,
 And hame them followit all the companie.
 Be than was all the denner redie dicht,
 And to the hall affendit everie Knicht,
 And went to meit and fuire rycht nobillie.
 Thair was ane mirrie found of menstrellie,
 With interludis and songis of Ladies bricht.
 Syne efter denner passit everie wicht
 To chalmer quhair thay plifantlie disport ;
 2400 Full glaid and joyous was this lustie fort.

The Earle unto Meliades is went,
 And said, Madame, it war expedient
 That I furth send to gour Father the King

- Ane pursevant, to tell him this tything.
 The Ladie said, It war my will doutles,
 The founer the better as I [do] ges.
 Ane Pursevant belyve gart he [there] call,
 And his intent to him declairit all ;
 And at Meliades fyne speirit he,
 2410 What scho wald bide him say to that cuntrie.
 Than said scho, Freind, [I bid,] with bening face,
 Ze me commend unto my Fatheris Grace,
 And to my Ladie eike my Mother the Queine,
 And unto everie Lord and Ladie scheine
 That hes me kend ; and me commend also
 To Romaryn and Bonvaleir they two ;
 And ze fall say unto my Father the King,
 And to my Mother eike, that, God willing,
 I fall returne to them with more blythnes
 2420 Nor I did from them pairt. Quhen this said was,
 The Pursevant delyverlie furth went,
 And left the Court in joyis permanent.
 The Earle was joyous, and his Ladie eike,
 Of the recovering of this Princes meike,
 And of the cuming of thair Sone also :
 Clariodus was bliffull out of wo,
 That so had fundin fair Meliades :
 [And no les bliffull this young Ladie wes,]
 That scho had gottine Clariodus hir Knicht ;
 2430 Hir wofull heart was raifit upon height,
 That stude before so deipe into distres ;
 Bot git for all hir joy and grit glaidnes
 In constant leving so weill scho did conteine,
 That be hir cheir it micht not knowin beine,

As fcho that was discendit of royall bluid ;
For both of vertew and of pulcritude
In warld fcho stuid without comparifoune,
Of all Princes, Bewtie from the starris doune,
Whom with grit joy in Estur I let dwell,
2440 And now of uther thingis speik I will,
Of Philipponne, and of his Court also,
And thus out of the Third Buik [will] I go.

THE FOURT BUIK
CLARIODUS.

ERLE ESTURIS Purfevant felt no raige
Into the sea, bot had ane fair voyage,
And at Belvilladoun [he] did aryve,
And enterit in the offlarie belyve,
Whair that Clariodus was wount to be ;
And alse sounne as the offlar can him fie,
He speirit in quhat cuntrie he did dwell,
And of his tydingis prayit him to tell.
I am cumit, quoth he, from Estur land,
10 And if ge list for to heir [my] tydand,
My Lord I left in gude prosperitie,
My Ladie eike, and all thair fair meinge ;
Whair that I left my Lord Clariodus,
Wha never was glaider nor [mair] joyous ;
Whair I left eike Meliades the scheinne,
Wha Air and Princes of this regioun beine ;
Thair scho is treittit nobillie at all,
As ony Queine in hir estait royall,

- Wha heartlie greting unto zow me fendis ;
 20 And eik Clariodus him recommendis
 To zow and to [his freind] Allan also.
 And quhen the [worthie] host hard him say fo,
 That fair Meliades was zit on lyve,
 He than was in joy sa exultive,
 That of him self almaist he wist no thing ;
 The Lord, he said, the Celestiall King
 Mote zow conserve [for] ever more I pray,
 For zour gud tydings in this house this day ;
 If it [may] please zow go unto the King,
 30 Ze fall convoyit be but taryng.
 He maid him for to dyne, and than anone
 To the Palice togidder ar thay gone.
 Whan that the King in chalmer thair thay fand,
 The Host said, Sir, heir is an Pursephand,
 That unto zow can sehaw the best tyding,
 That ever I hard of in my leving.
 He said, that he was welcum ; and than allsweith
 Commandit him his credence for to kyth.
 The Pursephant fat doun upon his knie,
 40 And said, Sir, the eternall God zow se,
 From Estur cuntrie I am cumit heir,
 Sent from Meliades zour onlie dochter deir,
 Whilk heartlie gretis zow in humbill wayis,
 And recommendis hir ane thousand sayis
 Unto zour Grace and to my Lady the Queine,
 And alse to everilk Lord and Lady scheine
 Of all zour Court, both unto more and les,
 With all hir mynde and heartis humblenes ;
 And that scho fairis weill I zow assure,
 50 And lovit is of everie creatoure.

- When that the King had hard this blyth tyding,
 For ouer grit joy and heastie conforting,
 His spreit was [all to] rest ane quhyle him fro;
 Syne to the hevin he held his handis two,
 Louing to God giveing ane weill lang space;
 In armis syne he did with joy imbrace
 The Pursevant, and said, My freind so deire,
 Rycht happie tydings have ge brocht us heir.
 The foure fellowis of Sir Clariodus
 60 Full glaid was of this tyding and joyous.
 In chalmer evill disposit was the Queine,
 For forrow and cair ay feike [scho] had beine
 Sen efter the murther of Meliades,
 Whilk was hir told in so cruell wayis.
 When scho thir tydings hard, scho rose anone,
 And to the Kingis chalmer is scho gone,
 Led be two Knichts, for scho was wonder waike;
 The Pursevant in armis scho did take;
 And scho, that nicht not speike ane weill lang space,
 70 Full oft scho thankit God of his gude grace.
 Romaryn was full blyth of this to heir,
 And eik so was hir varlot Bonvaleir.
 The word of this same thing [did] spred so fast,
 Whill fillit was the Palice at the last,
 Of pepill thringing [tydings] for to heir,
 With heartis blyth in bliffull found and cheir.
 Both King and Queine, with lord and ladie faire,
 And all the pepill that beine gatherit thair,
 Unto the Kirk thay geid with ane consent,
 80 Devote of mynd and humbil of intent,
 And God thay thankit wonder heartfullie,
 That of his grace and of his grit mercie

From daith preservit had Meliades.

The word is gone upon [full] haiftie wayis

Out throw the toun, that scho was git on lyve ;

Then all the bellis ringin war belyve

Of everie kirke that beine within the toun,

With monie ane Prelat in proceffioun.

This being donne, the King to Paleice went,

90. With monie ane lord and ladie reverent ;

The Purfevant thay feiftit royallie,

And cherist him richt fair and tenderlie.

This day thay did bot play, [and] feift, and dance,

With joyous hearts fulfillit of plesance.

Thir tydings spred full soun throw the cuntrie,

And everie wight of hie and low degre

Was blyth thairof, and said, No ferlie beine,

That scho that was of everilk vertew Queine,

Devoid of vice and everilk villanie,

100 Was so escaipit from the tyrannie

Of crewell folkis, and evill devyfit mynd ;

God wald not suffer hir of sik ane kynd

Distroyit be, quhilke beine of bewtie rose,

And of all womanheid the only chofe.

The King had git ane litill jelouffie,

This taill could nocht his mynd all fatiffie ;

He gart be callit the foure murthereris,

And all the cace at lenth he at thame speiris,

How with his onlie bairne that thay hade wrocht,

110 Commanding that thay fould diffimull nocht.

Thay sat all foure upon thair kneis doune,

And anone begane to schaw the fassoun,

Saying, Our gratious Prince and foverane Lord,

To gour Hienes the trewth we fall record.

We went with hir as [that] Sir Thomas bade,
 Him to displeis forfuith we war full rade ;
 And quhen within the forrest we hir led,
 Scho of hir lyfe full mekill was adred,
 And on hir kneis beninglie askit grace,
 120 With pitious teiris rolling on hir face.
 We said that scho behuifit to be deid,
 Or than our felfs to die without remeid.
 Scho askit licence than for Godis faike,
 To suffer hir ane quhile hir prayeris make ;
 Ane litill space scho passit from us than,
 And unto God hir orifoun begane.
 We drew behind hir privily to heir
 What scho wald say, and hard the hail maneir ;
 And fyne we knew be hir confessioun,
 130 That innocent scho was of all trafoun,
 To God scho did so pitiouflic compleine.
 Then verie rewth our heartis did constraine
 For to doe mercie to that Ladie fweit,
 That asking mercie wofullie did greit :
 We gart hir sweir out of this realme to go,
 As we that not for pitie nicht hir flo ;
 As naine on lyve in all this world, I wait,
 That had hir feine as we in like estait,
 Albeit he fould have tint his awin lyfe,
 140 Than nicht have drawin hir bluid with ane knyfe.
 And quhen scho saw we did sik grace hir till,
 Scho hir dispuilzeit of hir awin fre will,
 And to us gave hir kirtell of velvot blake,
 And eik hir chaine, and bade in patience take ;
 To hold hir farke on hir scho askit leave,
 As scho that had no thing mair us to geive.

Rycht fa to go fra us scho was content,
 We dreid that scho with thorne and breer be schent.

The King this heirand weipit pitiouflie,
 150 For everie word that he hard specifie
 Out throw his heart did as ane arow gleid.
 He callit on ane servant him besyd,
 And gart ane thowsand merkis [to] them give,
 Becaus thay sufferit his only doghter leive.
 He thankit them, and [eike] tuik from them thair
 The vyle unhoneft office that thay baire ;
 Syne gave them offices of maire honoure,
 And maid them men of substance and valour.

When this was donne, he was content at all ;
 160 His foure maisteris of houshald gart he call,
 And bad thay fould gar ordane haistilie
 Two chariots, arayit [full] richlie
 With gold, and filke, and pretious workis feir,
 With nobill palfrays thairto, as did effeire,
 For to bring hame his dochter from Estur ;
 And bad thay fould gar wryt with bissie cure
 Unto his vassoullis ouer all the regioun,
 And to his Knichtis grittest of renowne,
 That war of most nobilitie and fame,
 170 For to compeir at Bellvilladoun be name.
 The letteris being directit, richt anone
 The forsaidis Earls can them all dispone
 To cum upon thair most gudlie wyse
 Unto this toune, as ge have hard devyse.
 Within ten dayis thay war all redie dight,
 Be sea and land they sped them at thair might.
 At Bellvilladoun they did anone aryve ;
 Nobiller Knichtis was thair none on lyve

Nor was into that nobill companie ;
 180 Sir Panse de Lapre, [ane knight] full worthie,
 Sir Ronar de Galt, ane knight of nobill fame,
 Sir Lion de la Mont [as] height his name,
 Sir Brufe de la Woy thair was also,
 Sir Broune de la Moris, and monie mo,
 Sir Pennent de la Carare thair was eike,
 With his Ladie and hir sex virgins meik,
 With monie uther ladie fair of face,
 That day aryvit [all] in that ilke place,
 Quhilk cumin war in thair most gudlie wyfe,
 190 To ryde in court for fair Meliades.
 The Knightis namis heir now all to tell
 At this [ilk] tyme it war rycht lang to dwell.
 Unto the Kingis Palice ar thay went,
 And fyne unto his Hienes are present,
 Whom thay have helfit with grit reverence ;
 And fyne unto the Queinis excellence
 Inclynit thay with bening face and cheire.
 The King them welcumit on fair maneire,
 And with them hes advyfit to and fro,
 200 And at the last he faid, It standis so,
 Meliades my doghter, as ge knaw,
 Full fore beine trublit for ane traitors saw ;
 I wint aluterlie scho had beine dead,
 Bot God for hir has schappin fik remeid,
 That scho in Estur cuntrie is on lyve :
 Thairfor I have sent for zow [all] belyve,
 To pase for hir, and bring hir to this land.
 Full glaidlie this the Knichtis tuike on hand,
 For thay hir lovit ouer all uther thing,
 210 For hir meiknes and womanlie having.

This being donne, to supper went the King,
 With monie lustie lords and ladies ging;
 They feistit long, and maid full mirrie cheir.
 And efter that thay raise from [the] suppeir,
 The King ordanit thir lustie Knightis two,
 [Sir] Palexis and Amandour also,
 And two eik of his maisteris of houehold,
 This companie in governance to hold,
 And bad that thay fould rewle and gyd the leave,
 220 That in all way thay fould his honour save:
 He then delyverit with full meike fermoune,
 And gawe to them of gold ane millioun;
 Sir Pennents Ladie lustilie befeine,
 And eik hir sex virginis bricht and scheine:
 Then Bonvaleir tuike leave with them to go;
 So did this lustie ladie Romaryn also,
 And to Meliades scho past, for fuith;
 Scho was the Ladie hir nureist had of youth,
 With monie uther ladie fresch of hew:
 230 Bonvaleir eik, that ay was [leil and] trew,
 Did with them go, with everie kynd fervand;
 That of befor hir fervit in Ingland:
 When everie Lord and Ladie leave hes taine,
 Anone unto thair ludging are thay gaine;
 And on the morne as the day up cleirit,
 Then everie wicht him drestit as effeirit,
 And on thair horse ascendit but abaid,
 And royallie out throw the toun thair raid,
 With found of trumpit and of clarioun:
 240 Blyth was the pepill that baid in the toun,
 For weill thay knew thair erand: ane and all
 Then prayit God that fair thay fould befall,

And gif them grace to speid on fik ane wyfe,
 That thay hame bring the fair Meliades,
 Whais palfray with the goldin tail and mene
 Was with them led, quhite as the snow and schene.
 In Turkie land I heir it was the gyfe,
 Thair palfrayis to depaint on fik ane wyfe,
 That from them thay will cut [baith] tail and maine,
 250 And goldin traces hing on thair againe.
 I wald the Reidar tuike not fik confait,
 That nature had wrocht them so diligate,
 Least that he leuch thairat, and maid ane jape,
 Lath ware myne Awthore to be maid thair Aip.

Thus rydis furth this royall cumpanie,
 Thay dressit to thair shippis haistilie.
 Thay hade the winde so richt and eike so faire,
 They go alse swift as aigill in the aire,
 That thay within twelf dayis did aryve
 260 To Estur cuntre ; and then to land belyve
 They went in feir, and on thair horses ascendit,
 And to the toun of Belladoun intendit ;
 And on the Tuifday be the hour of nounce
 They com to it, quhair thay discendit founne,
 And everilke wicht gois from his horse doune,
 And in the fairest Innis in the toun
 They tuike thair ludging. Bot so befell anone,
 Ane squyer of the Palice their was one
 Into the toun, and saw this lustie fort,
 270 Whilke home is went, and of it maid reporte
 Unto Clariodus, and he alse weill
 Unto Meliades this thing did reveill,
 Saying, Madame, is it gour will to go,
 And take gour leave this land of Estur fro ?

Scho said, My lustie Knight Clariodus,
 What garis gow speir this thing at me thus?
 Rather I wald, if that my fortoun were,
 Of Estur cuntrie for to be Ladie heire,
 Nor to be Queine of the grittest regioun
 280 That now is under the hevins dominioune.
 I will gow tell, quoth he, gour Father the King
 Hes sent for gow ane companie tending
 Of Lordis, Knightis and of Ladies faire;
 Remaine ge heir quhill I againe repaire;
 Now will I to my Lord my Father go,
 And tell him this. Then pairtit he her fro:
 Bot first unto his awin chalmer past he,
 Whair lay his riches in grit quantitie,
 That he had wone from Saraseins in fyght;
 290 And ane bulget he tuike of ane hudge weight,
 And oppinit it, and tuike of it anone
 Ane rich pectrell as onie star that schone;
 And fyne unto Meliades it brocht,
 And to relave it fairlie hir befought,
 And at the entrie of the Lords it weir.
 And then sinylling with womanlie effeire,
 Scho said, Clariodus my Knight full deir,
 May it not weill suffice the nobill giftis feire,
 All that gour Father my Cousing gave me,
 300 And eik gour Mother in that fame degrie;
 Bot ge in all gait [ay] will them exceid?
 Now of like thing ge know thair is no neid.
 He causit eik his Mother the Countes,
 To treat this Lady with all bislines
 To take this pectrell rich for to behold.
 And scho in baith hir handis did it fold,

And said, My Ladie, do me this plesance
 This peçtrel to refave at my instance ;
 With that about hir schoulders [scho] it laid ;
 310 As onie lamp with bliffull beams [it] glaid.
 Then scho, the wall of womanlic maneir,
 Hes thankit them [full] oft with bening cheir.

[Then] Clariodus is to the Earle went,
 And schew to him the maner incontinent
 Of all thir folkis, as ge have hard me tell.
 The Countes did still in the chalmer dwell
 Meliades to dres into hir geir
 Of thingis sik as gainit for hir to weir.
 Scho cled hir in ane royall cloath of gold,
 320 That was richt fair and plesant to behold,
 And did hir heid attyre full richlie ;
 And fyne the peçtrel wonder plesantlic,
 Scho pat about hir halfe as lillie quhyte,
 As scho that beine the patroune of delyte
 Of all the world, withoutin comparifoune,
 Of everilk vertew and [of hie] renoune.

The Countes to hir in sporting did say,
 [I will me attyre all in fresch array]
 Againe gone strangeris cum me for to se ;
 330 Whairfor I wald be praisit in bewtie ;
 And alsé I wald [that] thay [weill] understude,
 That Esture Ladyis ar both faire and gude.
 Meliades leuch at hir that raillit so,
 For scho ane plesant Ladie was also.
 Scho did hir bodie cloath full richlie,
 In ane fair gown of velvete cramosie,
 Furrit with armeine that was nobill and fyne,
 And lustillie hir heid atyrrit fyne.

- When thay had put them in ane fresch aray,
 340 Into ane plesant chalmer passit thay,
 And thair abaid with all the lustie forte,
 Making full merrie gamis and disporte,
 Whill tyme beine to fetch them to the hall ;
 Of the ambassate was thair speiches all.
 Clariodus at his Fatheris commande
 Two maisteris of his houfhald hes ordand
 To go and fetch the lustie companie.
 And thay anone are passit full glaidlie,
 With squyeris and with knightis fresch and ging ;
 350 And he to thame command gave and biding.
 The Count of Esture that was gentill and wyfe
 Then be the arme hes taine Meliades,
 And led hir to the hall rycht honorable,
 And scho [unto] him told all quyetlie
 Of the riche gift Clariodus hir gave.
 Then said the Count, Madam, so God me save,
 My sone I lovit tenderlie before ;
 Bot for that now I love him far the more,
 To doe service to Ladies honorabill,
 360 Sen that I understand he is [richt] abill.
 They had not talkit long on this wayis,
 When the ambassat, gullie to devyfe,
 In fair mancir assendit in the hall.
 And than in presence thair com first of all
 Sir Amandur and [eik] Sir Palexis ;
 And fyne two Lordis of grite worthines,
 That maisteris of houfhald war unto the Kinge.
 Helfit thay have the young Princes condinge ;
 And scho refavit them with plesant cheire,
 370 With faire effeir and womanlie maneir,

Soberlie faying, Ze all welcum beine.
 Scho kissit them, with teiris from hir eine.
 The Knichtis two then weipit tenderlie
 For joy and pitie of the fair Ladie,
 That faiklellie had sufferit sik distres.
 Syne halfit they the Count and the Countes.
 The Kings two maisteris of houfhold fyne
 Full lowlie to the Ladie did inclyne.
 Scho tham relavit with joy and grit plifance,
 380 And kissit them with gudlie countinace.
 Syne halfit they the Earle, and he thame eike ;
 And fyne with everie Lord and Ladie meike
 They spake at lenth, and maid thair aquentance,
 With heartis full of joy and all plifance.
 Meliades fyne they tuike to ane pairt,
 And told how that the King with all his heart.
 And eike the Queine did heartlie them commend
 To hir quhom speciallie they war [to] fend
 For to convoy hir hame in hir cuntrie.
 390 Than how thay fair scho speirit full glaidlie ;
 And how fure all the Court [anon] scho speirit.
 Then they have tauld hir all scho them requyrit.
 And quhen Meliades, of grit bewtie,
 Receavit had ilke Knight in his degrie,
 Then com the Ladyes full of lawlieheid,
 And law inclynit to hir gudlieheid ;
 And scho relavit them with imbracing,
 And kissit them with countinace bening,
 Gyding hirsself so wyse and discreitlie,
 400 With having and effeir so womanlie,
 That everilk wicht did boldlie hir commend.
 And pairt thair was with quhom scho was unkend,

Long tyme before defyryng hir to fee,
 Wha than affirmit that all was veritie
 That was reportit of hir womanheid,
 Of hir great bewtie and hir lustieheid.
 Romaryn was with joy reveft in spreit,
 Hir breift with bliffe was fo full and compleit,
 [With] whom dreidles Meliades the cleir
 410 Wald speik allone full faine at thaire lafeire.
 The two maifteris of houfhold of England
 Stude with the Earle of Eftur, comonand
 On materis langand to Meliades.
 Clariodus that worthie beine and wyfe,
 Cauft zougng Lordis [for] to go and dance
 With zougng Ladies of bewtie and plesance.
 So they put of the day with mirrines,
 With glaidfum sportis and with grit blythnes.
 The Earle ftude with thir Lordis advyfyng ;
 420 And fo, among all uther commoning,
 Of this Princes began thay to devyfe
 How fcho fould be at poynt anone, quhat wayis,
 And how that all thingis fould be ordainit
 Of hir abuilgement for hir eftait.
 And then the Count of Eftur faid them till,
 Ze fall fe, Lordings, if it war zour will,
 What ordinit is for hir we fall go luike ;
 And he them both into ane wairdrope tuike,
 And gart difcover the littar that was bricht,
 430 And chariot eike that [plefantlie] caft licht,
 Of gold and ftonis that war pretious ;
 Unto thair fights that it was mervellous ;
 And of hir horfe the cofllie harnifching
 They have commendit into mikill thing :

For all that hir pertinit for to weir,
 Both for hir self and for hir palfray-geir,
 Was wrocht with stane and pearle rycht potent,
 Bricht twinkling as the starrie firmament.
 Syne with the Earle agane returnit thay,
 440 Beholding on the danfing and the play
 Whill tyme [it] beine to supper for to gone :
 And then the hall devoydit was anone
 Whill buird beine all coverit and arayit ;
 And then thay went to supper and not delayit.
 I will not tell of [all] thair courffis heir.
 When they had foupit and maid mirrie cheir,
 Thay danfit, fang, and playit, and disporte,
 That long it war the maner to reporte.
 When tyme [it] was to bedis for to gone,
 450 Lordis and Ladies tuike thair leave anone,
 And to thair chalmeris went to take them rest.
 Meliades to bed hes hir adrest,
 The Ladies of hir chalmer with hir went.
 Full glaid scho was and blyth in hir intent
 With Romaryn to commoune at lafeire ;
 Full long they spake of diverse matters feire ;
 Whylome they spake of leth, quhylome of loth,
 Whylome they lewch and quhylome weippit both.
 [And] when they had long tyme commonit so,
 460 Bonvaleur scho commandit for to go
 At morrow to the suburbs of the toun
 To the Gudwyfe with quhom scho did sojorne,
 Commanding hir to be at hir ryfing ;
 And that scho fould the wyfis with hir bring,
 That enterit war with hir in housc to dwell.
 He tuike his leave and ran [full] sounc to tell.

He with sik diligence thir wyfes focht,
 That he hes them all thre unto hir brocht
 Be houris ten ; and then, without taryng,
 470 Hir Fathers maisters of houfhald gart scho bring,
 And said, My frindis, lo ! it standis thus,
 When I was in my maist distres noyous,
 Thir wyfes me refavit and weill relevit,
 Or ellis I had in povertie beine mischevit ;
 They war nixt God my comfort and refuge,
 Fra hunger and cauld thay maid me weill to luge :
 Whairfor I will ge geive unto thir thrie
 Pairt of the fynance [that] is sent to me.
 Blyth war thir Lordis to doe as scho them bade,
 480 They said they fould obey with heartis glaid,
 To gif or to dispone at hir bidding.
 The wyfes was abaisit then fumthing,
 When they saw hir arayit on sike wayis.
 Then meiklie to them went Meliades,
 And tuike them in hir armis all about,
 Saying, My fweir freindis, have ge no doubt
 Bot I fall be to gow ane doghter trew,
 And cum quhen that ge list me to persew,
 Ge falbe suppartit [all thrie] richlie.
 490 All kneilling, they hir thankit courteslie.
 Scho gart delyverit be unto thir thrie,
 Of gold, and silver, and [of] gud monie.
 Alse mikill as wald by of heritage
 Thrie hundereth merkis worth to thair waige ;
 And gart be gevine unto them also
 Ane thowfsand pund or scho wald pairt them fro,
 To by thair misteris. And thir wyfis thrie
 Oft thankit hir with voices upon hie,

Saying, Scho was to them ane thankfull gait,
 500 That them unto sik riches had posselt ;
 Praying to God and to his Sone so sweit,
 Ever to keipe hir in bodie and in spreit.
 Thay tuike thair leave and hamwart [than] could go.
 Rycht fyne scho hes commandit thir maisteris two,
 That of that Palice everie servitoure
 Sould be rewairdit with gold and grit trasoure.
 And so was donne with fike [ane] abundance,
 That thay thairefter had ay in remembrance :
 Whairfor the Count and the Countes also 510 Full humbillie hir thankit baith thir two.
 Scho said, Ze sould no thankis gif to me ;
 Bot ze of me sould mekill thankit be,
 That am to zow beholdin in fike wayis.
 With this the gudlie fresche Meliades,
 Out of ane coffer tuike, riche to behold,
 Two gudlie collors of the finest gold,
 Saying, Ze two in my remembrance
 Sall weir thir colloris, if it be zour plesance.
 Thay thankit hir, and said thay sould glaidlie
 520 Refave them for hir saike, that was worthie,
 And all thair lyfe keip them in [hie] daintie,
 In the remembrance of hir blyth bewtie.
 And fyne scho gart draw furth ane coursfour faire,
 In all the warld was not ane gudlier,
 And gart Bonvaleir hir servant him refave,
 And to Clariodus anone him gave ;
 Whairof he thankit [hir] rycht courteslie,
 And hir varlot rewairdit nichtilie.
 When this was donne, thay passit for to dyne ;
 530 And maid them reddie for thair jornay fyne.

- Meliades is passit af the toun,
 With all hir companie of grite renoune ;
 Full monie ane Lord and Lady hir convoyit,
 In cloth of gold full richlie arayit.
 Scho wore ane hate full riche upon hir heade,
 Whilk shynit of sapheiris and of roobies reide,
 Ane rich pectrell about hir schoulderis hang,
 Hir cofflie brydell all of gold it rang ;
 And heich upon the litter was scho set,
 540 Whilk was with stonis and pearles all owerfret,
 With cussiounis wrocht with cloath of gold full fyne ;
 Scho schynit as dois the fairest star matutyne.
 All voyde befor hir com ane chariot bricht
 Of nichtie stonis, casting plesant licht,
 Hir palfray with the goldin maine and tail,
 Hir varlot cled in royall apparrell.
 Syne ten Ladies on ten palfrayis quhyte
 Com efter hir, quhom to sie was delyte.
 The Ladie Estur, and Ladie de la Grance,
 550 And Ladie de la Cariar of plesance,
 Upon ane chariot sat in gudlie wayis,
 The quhilk the King sent to Meliades.
 The leave com efter fyne weill ordinat,
 In chariots frechlie efter thair estaite.
 The silver trumpits blew with merie found,
 In joy and blisse this companie furth bound.
 The peiple bad God be in thair companie,
 [And weipit for the love of this Ladie.]
 Clariodus ane quhile behind thame baid,
 560 Garring be turfit the thesawre that he hade
 Intill Syprus win from the Turkis strong ;
 Bot he overtuikie them or it was ocht long,

And to the Count his father thus he said,
 My Lord, I think it speidfull that we raid
 Throw France, for it is the most plesant way ;
 And heirupon accordit all beine they.

Thus towardis France they raid all in feir,
 And so they have them sped in sik maneire
 That in schort tyme thay com to Sant Dynice.
 570 Thay lichtit thair and tuike ane gudlie Innis,
 Whair thay ane day and eike ane nicht reposit,
 Whom for to se the peipill all rejosit ;
 Whair thair was of the Kingis Court ane Knight,
 Quhilke them espyit evin as they did licht,
 And speirit them ; and quhen he understude
 The Ladies name of plesant pulchritude,
 And quhat the lordis and ladies with hir beine,
 Ane fairer fight he thocht he had never feine.
 Unto the King he raid or he wald bline,
 580 And told him all the maner and the meine,
 What that thay war, and how thay war arayit.
 The nobill King no longer than delayit ;
 Bot haiftilie sent for the Constabill,
 And with Court of Knichtis honorabill,
 He sent them for to meit, and he anone
 Towardis Sant Denis with his Court is gone.

Be this the Court of fair Meliades
 On horse ascendit was on gudlie wayis,
 On gatwart cuming unto Parice toun,
 590 Of joyous trumpits with ane mirrie soun.
 The Constabill hes met and helfit them all.
 Syne to Meliades in speciall
 He passit, and hes maid his aquentance,
 Saying, Madame, but onie variance,

- Thay said the trewth that praisit your bewtie ;
 For verilie, as it apeiris to me,
 That none your bewtie did so fare compryse,
 Bot ge deservit more ane thousand fyfe
 To beine commendit, and that I dar weill fay.
- 600 With that scho changit hew, as scho that ay
 Abandonit beine with [all] schame and dreid,
 As bloffome [fueit] of bening womanheid ;
 For scho was never manlie nor git pert
 [In ocht,] nather in plaine nor in desert.
- So raid thay furth with mirrie collatioun.
 And as thay war ane myle from Parice toun,
 Sex armit Knightis met they in the way,
 And to Clariodus founne dressit thay ;
 Syne helfit him, and then they said him till,
- 610 Sir Knight, ge tell us, if it be your will,
 If like ane Knight ge know as we do feike.
 He answeirit them with wordis wyfe and meike,
 What Knight is he? unto me tell his name.
 Clariodus, thay said, of mikill fame,
 The Count of Esturs sone, and eik his heare ;
 If he be in this companie declair ?
 We have him fought in monie feire cuntrie,
 For out through all the world praisit is he,
 Both flour of knighthaid and of nobilness ;
- 620 And for he is of sik ane worthines,
 Rycht faine we wald in armis him affaill,
 If ony of us micht gif to him batell ;
 And if that on micht not, [why,] then fould two ;
 And if that two micht not, [why,] then fould mo ;
 And if he war so abill under scheild,
 As to us all sex fight to gif in feild,

On efter on, or with us all at onis :
 And thús we are him feikand for the nonis,
 For to affay our strength and chevalrie
 630 On him that of this warld is most worthie ;
 And if he happin for to stryke us doune,
 We are content he have us to prefoune ;
 And if we fuilge, or dois him suppryse,
 To take him with us in the famine wyse.
 To them full meiklie he anfwairit thus,
 I am the Knight ge call Clariodus,
 Bot not as ge me call the warldis floure ;
 For monie ane Knight thair is of mair valour :
 Zit nevertheles, if that it be your will,
 640 Anone I fall gif battell heir gow till.
 And quhen they harde, he spake fa courteslie,
 The mair thay him commendit verilie.
 When that Meliades hard this tyding,
 Scho was affrayit into mikill thing,
 And prayit God devotlie him to save,
 And give him grace the victorie to have.
 Clariodus pat on his helme anone,
 And with his speire is to the formost gone,
 And to the eard him straike withoutin ho ;
 650 Syne to ane uther drestit him to go,
 And so him hit quhill on the ground he lysis ;
 Syne fyve he servit on the famen wayis.
 The sext against him drestit fellounlie ;
 Thir Knightis ran togidder forcilie,
 And brake thair speiris, and maid ane course faire.
 And so thir two so oft hes counterit thair,
 Whill [that] awght speiris [all] in funder brake ;
 To gif them roume the Court raid all abake,

- Them to behold thay had [full] grite plesance.
 660 At the sevint course, with knightlie countenance,
 Clariodus him hit with sik [ane] force,
 Whill to the eard geid both man and horfe.
 Then all the Court, that was beholding by,
 Heigh praifit hes his nobill chevalrie.
 Then com the [said] sex Knightis all in feire
 Unto him, faying, that all the Court might heire,
 Sir, unto zow we us presoneiris geild,
 As to the nobillest Knight that ever buire scheild,
 To priffoun right, evin as ze will, [leid us].
 670 Then noblie spake to them Clariodus,
 Saying, Ze fall go to gone faire prisoune,
 Unto zon Ladies, and pay zour ranfoun.
 He tuike them be the hands on courtesse wyfe,
 And hes them led to fair Meliades.
 He said, Madame, refave thir presoneris,
 Demaine thame as to zour estait effeiris.
 Then said scho meiklie to the Constabill,
 Call ze it not best that I be merciabill?
 I wald tham freith unto thair libertie,
 680 If that it war zour counfall, quhat fay ze?
 Madame, he said, I sweir zow be my trewth,
 It war zour honour upon them to have rewth,
 And for to freith them [out] of zour priffoun,
 Now at zour entrie into Parice toun.
 Then said scho thus, Fair Siris, for his saik
 That unto me zow presoners did make,
 I gif zow fredome heir of my presoun.
 They thankit hir with [richt] bening fermoune.
 And syne unto Clariodus they went,
 690 And ane of them thus spake with meike intent;

O floure of knightheid and of chevalrie,
 We have ȝow fought full long and bissily,
 And now we have fund ȝow of grit valouris,
 All to ȝour worschip and nothing unto ouris ;
 Heir we us offer to ȝour service and thrall,
 Full hie we fall exalt ȝour name ower all ;
 We wer borne in the cuntrie of Polyne,
 Cadnox de Halt my name is for certaine.
 He namit all his fellowis namis fyne,
 700 And wald have taine thair leave and could inclyne.
 Then he requyrit them with all his heart
 For to abyde ; and tuike them in ane pairt,
 And of his purse furth hes [he] taine anone
 Sex diamonts as onie lampe that schone ;
 And said, My freindis, heartlie I requyre
 This litill mater to have of me heire ;
 Thir diamonds than fall ȝe of me taikie,
 And have them to ȝour Ladies for my faikie :
 Quhilk thay refavit, thanking him oft fyfe,
 710 Saying, The honouris and the grit impryfe
 That him was gevin, it was not all for nought.
 Thay tuike thair leave and hamwart ar they fought.
 The French Knightis, quhen this thing thay had feine,
 His maners with them gritlie prailit beine.
 Then royallie to the toun furth thay raide,
 And to the Kingis Palice but abaid
 They have them sped, [and] then down all thay licht.
 The Constabill hes taine this Ladie bright,
 And hes with hir ascendit to the hall,
 720 Whair the King was with monie lord royall,
 And eike the Queine with monie ladie fair,
 All still abyding on thair cuming thair :

For the King was never into houſhold,
 Within four hundereth [of] Knightis bold ;
 The Queine alſo, as ſayis myne Authore eike,
 Was never within ane hundereth Ladies meike.
 Scho ſaluſt hes the King full courtelie,
 And he did hir reſave richt gentillie,
 And kiſſit hir, ſaying, Madame, but dreid
 730 Full welcum beine to us gour nobilheid ;
 For we have longit all in this cuntrie,
 Your bright imperiall bewtie for to ſe,
 Whom we of ſikane vertew hard reporte ;
 Ze beine full welcum heir and all gour forte :
 Whairof ſcho thankit him full reverentlie.
 And ſyne the Queine hir halfit womanlie,
 The quhilk full honorabillie did hir reſave.
 The King hartilie reſavit all the leave,
 And did them welcome with countenance joyous,
 740 And ſpecialie the gud Clariodus ;
 He maid to him grit cheir and welcuming,
 Whom he deſyrit to ſe abone all thing.
 The King hes taine the Count of Eſtur land,
 And weill long ſpace ſtude with him commonand.
 The Queine hir ſelf and Dame Meliades,
 Held commoning on [the] moſt gudlie wayis ;
 In whom the Queine ſik wit and nurture fand,
 Sik prudence and ſik vertew aboundand,
 Scho trowit, in warld nether be north nor ſouth,
 750 Might not be fund in ſik ane tender gouth
 Sik wit, not git ſik womanlie maneir ;
 Scho held hir thairfor abone all woman deire.
 Amongs all uther thingis, Earle Eſtur
 Schew to the King the pitious aventur,

And eike distressis of this Ladie frie ;
 Whairat the King [foir] weipit for pitie.
 Thairefter said he to Clariodus,
 Fair Sir, ge beine full welcum unto us ;
 For grit report I have hard of zow maid,
 760 How in this world, that is baith long and braid,
 Leifis no Knight nobiller of renoune
 As ge that beine without comparifoun.
 Right fa I have hard now of new reports,
 How that ge, at the entrie of our ports,
 Aprovit hes fo weill and nobillie,
 And donne so fair ane deid of chevalrie,
 That it war mervell sik ane to be feine,
 We thinke be zow our court all honorit beine.
 When that the King had of his talke all fynit,
 770 Clariodus him thankit and low inclynit,
 Saying, War I of sik [hie] praife and fame,
 Lyke as zour Henes gives to my name,
 I war all zouris without ony dreid
 Alse long as I might ryde or fit on steid.
 The King imbracit him with tendernes,
 Saying, Also I thank zow of zour ches,
 That out of Cyprus to the Queine ge send ;
 Zour fredome beine full gritlie to commend,
 For it ane royall present was and gift,
 780 To geive to ony Queine under the lift.
 Thus cherifit he Clariodus full fair,
 With wordis that war sweit and debonair.
 The King hes him aquentit haiftilie
 With all the knightis of thair companie ;
 And thay have with the Kingis court also
 Aquentit them, and semblit two and two.

They can difport and fpeike of diverfe things,
 So that the mekill hall with joy all rings
 Of minftrallie and uther mirthes eike;
 790 Na folace beine amongis them for to feike.
 To chalmer [fyne thay] went, and thair ane fpace
 Abaid thay quhile the fupper redie was,
 The grit triumphis and burdes coverit beine.
 Then to the hall is went baith King and Queine,
 And eike this princes digne and honorabill.
 The nobill King anone begane the tabill,
 Befor him fet Meliades the fcheine;
 Into ane chyre abone him fat the Queine;
 At the buird heid they fet the Earle Efture;
 800 Syne everilk lord and ladie in ordour,
 Efter thair awin degreis war thay fet.
 Ay at the dyfe ane knight and ladie met.
 The Conftabill hes taine Clariodus,
 And his foure fellowis that war chevelrus,
 And all the knightis of his companie,
 And led them to ane chalmer full glaidlie,
 And feiftit them on mervellous maneir,
 All hail with diligats and courfis feire.
 Then maid thay joy and fuire ryght mirrilie,
 810 And menftrellis fang and playit curioufflie.
 Alfe of the letter courfe they fervit ware,
 All be fex pefant ladyis of bewtie cleire,
 And with aucht knightis convoyit royallie
 And awght fquyeris [that were] zeing and luftie,
 Come to the King, and thair ane Pounne prefent,
 Saying to him thir words in verament,
 Sir, to this Pounne ze do as it effeiris.
 This nobill King quhen he thir wordis heiris,

Upon this wayis, quoth he, heir I avow,
 820 Unto the Pouné and Ladyis unto gow,
 The fairest justing the morné I fall devyfe
 In honour of Madame Meliades
 That ever was into my tyme in France,
 Thairin fall be no let nor variance.
 When this was said, the Ladyis reverent,
 Unto the Queine the Pouné thay did present.
 And I avow, unto the Pouné, quoth sche,
 When Sir Clariodus fall mareit be,
 That I and all my Court ane feist fall make,
 830 For him and for his foverane Ladies saike.
 The Pouné was set befor Meliades,
 The quhilke demurelie spak on this wayis ;
 Heir I avow unto the Pouné but dreid,
 When everilk Knight is armit upon steid,
 Efter my cuming I fall them espy,
 And quha with lance [than] provis most worthy,
 I fall gif him this hat upon my heid.
 And with that word scho wox a litill reid.
 The Pouné was borne before the Earle Estur.
 840 I fall avow, quoth he, [and that] most suire,
 For to behold and se on bissie wayis
 Of everilk justing and hail interpryse,
 And quhafa passis other in bountie,
 I fall declair if it be speirit at me.
 And fyne unto the Countes of Estur
 The Pouné was borne ; and scho with speach demure
 Said to the Pouné, I vow and heightis thus,
 At mariage of my sonne Clariodus,
 In my best cloathing I fall me aray,
 850 And never mair againe efter that day ;

I falbe furrit then with grice allone,
 For now the bé of my gouthheid is gone.
 Syne efter this the Pouné went throw the hall,
 And thay richt honorabillie avowit all.
 Syne to the Constabillis chalmer [they] it baire,
 And said to him, My Lord, aquyte gow thair.
 I [fall] avow, quoth he, quhen everie Knight
 On the justing day falbe arayit richt,
 That sax Knightis I fall put from thair steidis,
 860 Or them unhelme, thocht thay be cleir in weidis.
 The Powne they buire befor Clariodus,
 And he with gudlie maner speikis thus ;
 Heir I avow, upon the justing day
 That I fall just, if weild ane speire I may.
 Then hes the Ladyis to Sir Amandour
 The Powne presentit, and set it him befor.
 And I avow, quoth he, upon the greine
 When everie Knight on horse inarmit beine,
 From aucht Knightis I fall stryke [down] awcht scheilds,
 870 And skatter them full wyde into the feilds.
 And to Palexis they the Pouné [did] bring.
 I avow, quoth he, to Cupide lovis king,
 When everilk Knight enarmit beine in weids,
 That nyne Knightis I fall stryke from thair steidis.
 Unto ane French Knight [then] the Powne brocht thay,
 That was full fearce and hardie at affay,
 The quhilk Sir Charles height De les Carere.
 And I avow, quoth he, on this maner,
 When all fellowis beiris plait and mail,
 880 Than [ten] Knightis in preise I fall affail,
 And ten speiris eik I fall breke affunder,
 Or sum of us fall ly our steidis under.

Then to Sir Broune [hecht] de la Amouris
 The Pouné they brought, for he was amourus ;
 The quhilk avowit ane gantellit to weir
 Upon the hand quhairwith he ran his speir.
 Sir Pennent de Carare, [ay] bold and wicht,
 Nixt him avowit as ane lustie Knight,
 That he fould be enarmit all in greine,
 890 For the love only of his Ladie scheine.
 All thair avows war long for to declaire,
 How everilk Knight avowit that was thaire.
 When that the Knightis had avowit all,
 The Ladyis buire the Pouné unto the hall,
 Whair that they lewch with heartis glaid and licht,
 Rehearfing the avows of everilk Knight.

When all was riffine and gone from supper,
 Unto Clariodus on this maneir
 The Conftabill faid, Be 3our avow it feimis
 900 3e fall not juft the morne, for fo men deimis.
 Then faid Clariodus, Not juft I may,
 For I am hurt upon the hand perfey
 With [the] fex Knightis at our laft jufting.
 And quhen it was rehearfit to the King,
 He was forfuith thairof nothing joyous ;
 For he had rather feine Clariodus
 Ane speir have run all right and under fcheild,
 Nor all the Knightis that wald cum to feild.

With this thay all unto thair chalmer went,
 910 Up gois the found of hevinlie instrument.
 Lordis and Ladies anon gois to the dance ;
 The nobill King with gudlie countinace
 Meliades hes taikine by the hande ;
 Clariodus the Quein at his command ;

And fyne the nobill Lord [the] Conftabill
 Led the Countes of Eftur honorabill ;
 And uther Lordis goung and rycht luffie
 Gois to the dance with Ladies by and by.
 In joy and pleafour was the luffie forte.
 920 Thus quhill bed tyme full glaidlie thay difporte.
 The Lordis then caufit fetcht spyce and wyne.
 Meliades tuik leave, to bed dreflit fyne ;
 The Lordis eike at the King and [the] Queine,
 And went to chalmer with thir Ladyis fcheine ;
 Whom to the Queine did fay, I pray that ge
 Be airlie up, the jufting for to fe.
 Madame, qwoth fcho, I falbe, and bad gud night.
 And then anone to bed went everie Knight.
 At morrow as the larke begowth to fing,
 930 Awalks the luffie Lords and Knichtis geing,
 That hes avowis maid on this maneir,
 And all anone thay beine enarmit cleir :
 Alfweith thay fervit God and tuike difjune,
 And maid them redie for the counter foune.
 The King alfo was redie thame to fe.
 The Queine with great triumph and royaltie
 Arayit hir the jufting for to feine,
 With all hir luffie Ladies [faire and] fcheine.
 Hir gown was of the cloath of gold potent,
 940 And circulat with ftonis redolent.
 Full nictilie arayit was hir heid,
 Hir collour fchew as rofis quhyt and reid.
 Scho wore ane croune of gold mekill of pryce,
 In quhilke thair fchynit monie flour de lyce.
 Hir Ladyis war abulzeit richlie,
 And put to poynt richt weill and royallie.

They fervit God and difjunit fyne.
 Meliades, the luftie young Rofyne,
 As Mayis bloffome newlie brokin quhyte,
 950 Adreffit hir as goddes of delyte,
 Arrayit hir as of England the gyfe,
 Becuming hir upon moft gudlie wayis.
 Alfe quhyt as fnow of fatine was hir goune,
 Raifit with gold richt curious of faffioune,
 With giltine traifis hang down leming licht ;
 Hir hat was of the gold all birneift bricht ;
 Hir belt was all of michtie ftionnis plantit.
 No poynt of bewtie nature on hir fcantit ;
 For fcho hir paintit as Goddes devine,
 960 Alfe bright as Diane, or as Apollaine.
 In cloath of gold hir Ladies war befeine,
 Hir damofellis in quhyt fatine fcheine
 Arrayit war, in fuit all fair to fe.
 This flour of growth and Princes of bewtie,
 Unto the Queine fcho went debonarlie,
 Hir followit all hir Ladyis by and by.
 The Queine commendit the gyfe of thair clothing,
 And fo did all the Court of Ladies ging.
 Syne furth they went all into ane greine meid,
 970 Whair hovit monie nobill Knight on fteid,
 With fpeir in hand, [and] cumming for to range
 To the affay, that feimit nothing ftrange ;
 Whair that the King him felf [alfe] thair abaid,
 With cloath of gold all ftintit and overlaid.
 The Queinis fcafold neir befyd it ftude,
 Whilk fchynit all of pleafant pulcritude,
 With goldin torris and goldin chainis cleir,
 Whilk leimit licht as Phabus in his fpeire ;

- Thairin affendit hes the lustie Queine,
 980 Meliades and all hir Ladies scheine.
 The King gart in ane scaffold by him neir
 Earle Estur fit, and auncient Lordis feir,
 For to be judge quha provit knightliest,
 And tell quha thair avowis keipit best.
 Unto the preife the pepill them adrest,
 Thair heartis all in curage than increst ;
 Thair bright enarming, cleir as [the] cristall,
 Against Phebus bright birned as bereall ;
 As glorious angellis thay gleimit on thair steidis,
 990 Whill all the land leimit of thair weidis.
 Among them was Clariodus the Knight
 Inarmit on steid, unwitting of ony wight ;
 The cause thairof befor ge hard me say,
 For thay all trowit he sould not just that day.
 Of all the rout was no man thair him knew.
 For, the more strange, of quhyt was all his hew,
 His scheild, his speir, himself, and eike his steid,
 His servitouris was in the famin weid.
 This Knight he held him quyet at ane fyde,
 1000 Beholding them quhilk still did ay abyde.
 The Constabill com first to the assay,
 Full weill at poynt and in knightlie aray.
 He was all ower inarmit into blew ;
 His servitouris war in the famine hew.
 He had into his thimber, fair be fight,
 Ane lustie madine with giltine traces bright,
 Hir gellow hairis keaming as the wyre.
 As pecoke fetherum was hir buske allie faire ;
 Pouderit with stonis as the hevynis stellat
 1010 About his helme ane cirkill deaureat.

His mightie speir he gripis in his hand,
 And as ane boare abraiding out of band,
 He spurrit forward his avow to hold.
 Sir Dovans de Lapri that was [full] bold,
 Sir Ronar, [and] Sir Lyon de Lamount,
 Sir Bruce de la Voy, thir foure in frunt,
 To hold thair avowis forward ar thay gone.
 Sir Amandur and Sir Palexis anone,
 Sir Broun de Lamours, and Sir Pennent also,
 1020 Richt wounder knightlie to the preife they go.
 Sir Charles de Lesterer lustie under scheild,
 Com with his fellowis lustie in the feild.
 Ower long it war thair namis for to note,
 Thay war ane royall companie God wote.
 All that [did] com of justeris to the meid,
 Full weill at poynt inarmit [wer] on feid.
 Knightlie and fair the justing they begane ;
 Full monie fair and royall course thay ran.
 They met so fearcelie that it was wonder ;
 1030 Both heir and thair the speiris gois in funder ;
 Up gois the trenschers in the air on height,
 Doune gois the horse and the inarmit knight ;
 Out gois the fyre from scheilds as reid as gleid,
 Off gois the helmis falling in the meid ;
 Syne gois the scheildis to brift in two ;
 The found of trumpits never could to ho,
 With weirlyk foundis could thay blow on height ;
 The knightis met with monie ane hit unlicht,
 Whairof the rearde raise with fike ane found,
 1040 Whill all at onis dynit Parice toun.
 Monie knightis was thair of full grit strenth ;
 I can not schaw zow on ane daxis lenth

Thair nobill deidis richt nobill to praise,
 Nor as I aucht thair nobill fame up raise.
 Clariodus that saw the manlie faire,
 Within his breist his courage waxit maire ;
 Then he him put with them that war thairin,
 For he them waiker thought and waxand thin ;
 Doune gois the speir [that was] both grit and wicht,
 1050 In gois the spuris that of gold was bright
 In the sydis of his steid, quhilk swiftlie rane,
 Thair he to just full royallie begane.
 Before his speir the knightis gois to grund,
 Whill from the meid the helmes did redound ;
 Or he wald rest he ruffellit thair atyre,
 Out of the steill befor him start the fyre ;
 The knightis lay befor him on the greine ;
 Might no man fit on fadell and fusteine
 His mightie straike, bot him behuifit fall,
 1060 And he in fadell sat as ony wall.
 Thay thocht he sat on steid invifibill,
 As campion in armis invinifibill.
 Full corpolent he was with breist urfyne,
 With masculine heart and sperit leonine ;
 Fullfillit of vigoure and of fortitude,
 And he in formeheid full of pulchritude.
 Of his knightheid quhat beine thair maire to faine,
 His potent lanse might no man fit againe,
 Sa fra thair steidis he maid them to declyne ;
 1070 As beiftis small befor the wolfe rampine,
 Alse faine they war his stroaks for to evaid ;
 Full roume wayis thay maid him quhair he raid.
 He all to fruschet steidis on the greine,
 He tumit fadills to the number of fyftine

Right at his entrie within ane litill thraw,
That thay about had ferlie that him saw.

- When that the King had feine his gudlie fair,
And how so wonder knightlie he him baire,
He ferliet grittumlie quha it fould be ;
1080 For never in all his lyfytyme feine had he
Ane knight in armis prove so worthilie.
Rycht so thocht all that plesand companie.
Full royall justing amongs them might be feine ;
For monie ane knight enarmit fair and fcheine
Myght men behold [then] into the greine meid,
That duchtie war and valiant of thair deid.
The Lord Constabill he provit weill that day,
For monie ane faire course he maid perfay.
His vow he keipit as ane nobill knight ;
1090 For he devoidit of thair helmis bright,
Sax armit knightis [all] of grit valoure.
Sir Amandur full weill did his devoir ;
Sevin scheildis from fevin knights he sfrake.
And Sir Palexis strong as ony aike,
To grund he put nyne knightis from thair steidis ;
For he full worthie was in all his deidis.
And schortlie for to tell gow [all] the trewth,
Than everie knight aquyt [him] weill of slewth,
And his avow weill keipit that he maid ;
1100 And all that war about the famen said,
And that befor that day thay never saw
Sa monie luffie knights rining on raw.
And most of all the Quhyt Knyght is praisit,
Thay have his name to the staris raifit ;
For on that day, his knightlie governance
Will never with them forgottine be in France :

For he, that was without comparifoun
 Than leveing under Mars his regioun,
 So wonder knightlie all the day continuit,
 1110 And eik fo mekill travell he fufteinit,
 Unfatigat, unweirie, and unfaint,
 That I can not zow wryte nor zit depaint
 His worthie deidis and nobilnes at all,
 That beine of knightheid floure imperiall :
 For as the awfull lyoun beirs the croune,
 I meane of beifts, as terrestriall campioun ;
 So is he alfe ftronge of all etheriall myndis,
 Beine lord and king, thair pryde fo he declynis,
 As prince of knightheid and floure of chevalrie
 1120 Of all this wyde warld alluterlie.
 Grite ferlie had the King quhat he fould be,
 That was of fike ane wonderfull bewtie.
 He confidderit that the ftrong Clariodus,
 Whilk holdin was of knightheid chevalrus,
 That day hade he not juftit nor borne fcheild ;
 For gif that he that day hade beine in feild,
 He wald but dreid have faid it had beine he ;
 The King hade full grit plesance him to fe.
 The Queine alfo full gritlie did him praife,
 1130 And unto faire Meliades fcho fays,
 What thinke ze of the Quhyt Knight of renowne,
 That now he is of zon ftrong faffioun ?
 I traift firmlie that he fall have zour hat.
 Thus raillit hes the Queine, and lewch thairat.
 Meliades then faid, fmyling alyte,
 If he it wyn, he fall it have alfe tyte.
 Rycht full glaid fcho was and rycht joyous,
 For weill fcho wift it was Clariodus,

- Scho knew him be hir varlot Bonvaleir.
 1140 Scho was displeasit eike in sum maneire,
 That he nothing before unto hir schew,
 That he unto the justing wald persew.
 His Father eik him knew be his fasslioun,
 And had grit plesance of his hie renoune
 That he hard gevin him in everie fyde.
 What fould I longer in this thing abyde ;
 The justing still induret quhill the nicht,
 That to his Innis bounit everie wight.
 The King discendit thair incontinent ;
 1150 Grite number of torches hes before him went
 Fast to the Palice, for gone was dayis light.
 The Quene, and alse Meliades the bright,
 Discendit sounne with all thair ladyis faire,
 And to the palice did with joy repaire.
 Clariodus is to his chalmer gone,
 And thair he hes unarmit him full sounne ;
 And thair he did on him full lustillie
 Ane plesant gounne of velvete cramosie,
 And on ane hearpe begouth he for to play,
 1160 As at the justing he hade not beine that day.
 And then the King, quhilk no tyme forget myght
 The nobill deidis of the ilke Quhyt Knight,
 He gart foure privie squyeris to him call,
 And bade them doe thair bissines at all
 Full knowledge for to get of his ludging,
 And great him heartilie with all cherising,
 Him praying to cum unto the Palace,
 And him disport with joy and solace
 With knightis and with ladies of bewtie,
 1170 Saying, That welcum in the courte is he.

The four squyeris passit at command
 To the offlaris but farder demand,
 As he them bade this Knight to feike ower all.

- The King is enterit in the mekill hall,
 With monie ane lord full mekill of renoune,
 And richt glaidlie to supper [they] can boune.
 The Queine in chalmer vestit hir all new
 Into ane lustie gounne of velvete blew,
 And coverit all with orpharie faire ;
 1180 Eike all hir ladies changit gounis thair.
 Meliades hir vestit in ane gounne
 Of greine velvete, full gudlie of fassoune,
 Circumferat with stonis casting licht ;
 About hir neke ane chaine of gold [full] bright.
 Hir hairis bright that nature span so cleire,
 In aureat trefis hang doun circuleir,
 Full angell lyke, that schynit scho with gleimis
 In orient bright with Phebus goldin beamis,
 Doun schading from hir face, that was alse quhyte
 1190 As the illustar lillie of delyte.
 Ane rich cornall about hir hair was fet,
 With radious stonnis mightilie overfret.
 What sould I tell of her feminitie ;
 Scho frave with Venus in hir bright bewtie.
 Away thou Lucre with thy plesant eine,
 And with thy bright hairis thou Palexine,
 And thou faire Heline with thy hairis quhyte,
 And Candas with thy culloure of delyte,
 And with thy rewth thou [chaift] Penelope ;
 1200 For all this, [still] scho might gour princes be,
 In vertew, bewtie, and of womanheid,
 Gour cleir lodstar in everie lustieheid.

- Hir ladies changit weidis thair alfo,
 And to the Queinis chalmer two and two
 Hir followit all hir damofellis be pairis,
 In greine fatine and gold traced hearis,
 With pearle fcheaplet thair hearis fet above.
 Meliades with hir [fair] court of love
 Com to the Queine, quha did hir weill behold,
 1210 Commending thair hir bewtie monifold.
 And thus thay past the tyme as was the gyfe.
 With that the justeris upon gudlie wayis
 Enterit within the Palice of renowne,
 With weirlyke noyis and victorious founde
 Of clariouns, trumpits, and loud minstrelly.
 The heraldis with ane loude voyce thay cry
 The namis of thir lords with grit clamouris,
 Under thair grit and mightie coat armouris.
 The King was fet to supper at his tabill,
 1220 With plefand lordis and ladies amiabill.
 The justeris in thair chalmeris foupit all,
 Ilk ane with other maid difporte royall,
 Of minstrallie and uther grit plefance.
 And eike the Lord Constabill of France
 Into his chalmer foupit hes alfo;
 And of his companie was none him fro
 That with him foupit had the night before,
 Bot Sir Clariodus; and he thairfore
 Difleasit was fumthing in his intent.
 1230 And as the Prince most [hie and] reverent
 With all his lordis in hall had foupit neire,
 In com the foure squyeris all in feire,
 Quhom that the King unto the Quhyte Knight fend,
 Sir, said thay, We mak it to be kende,

- That of the Quhyte Knight ge fall have tyding ;
 Of him we have sum knowlege and witing ;
 And if ge will that schawin be his name,
 Clariodus he height of mikill fame.
 And quhen the King this harde he was full blyth ;
- 1240 Syne to the Count of Estur turnit fweith,
 And said, Fair Coufing, have ge knowleging,
 Quha was the Knight in quhyte at [the] justing.
 No Sir, he said. Then I fall tell, said he,
 It was Clariodus gour sonne perdie.
 Glaid was the King, and he commandit than,
 That the foure squyeris in all the heast thay can
 Sould go anone and fetch the Quhyte Knight.
 They but more, with torches birnand bricht,
 Soune in the chalmer of Clariodus
- 1250 They enterit ar, and said unto him thus,
 My Lord, gour secreits no longer may be coverit,
 Gour counfall is [all] to the King discoverit ;
 Heir ar we cumit at his Hienes command
 For gour Lordschipe. Quoth he, Without demand
 I fall obey him quhill I am on lyve.
 Togidder are thay passit on belyve.
 Clariodus nocht enterit in the hall
 Whill soupit had this [gude] Prince royall ;
 Bot in the chalmer of the Lord Constabill
- 1260 He enterit with thir Lordis honorabill.
 The Constabill, quhen he did him espy,
 Up lap he from the table demurely,
 And met him, saying, Quhyte Knight ! Quhyt Knight !
 Of all the world the mirrour schyning bright,
 In fame of knightheid and of chevalrie
 The rest exceiding fo excellentlie ;

It feimit nocht gour hand was hurt to-day,
 Whilk gour companiouns testifies perfay ;
 It had beine gud for all the companie,
 1270 That gour hand had not hellit so suddanlie.
 He fet him at the begyning of the tabill,
 And feastit him with cheir [richt] amiabill.

The King caufit awcht awntient Knightis go,
 And taike with them cuning heraldis two,
 And bad them be advyfit on the Knights deidis,
 Quha war maist valiant [that day] on thair steidis,
 And quha maist worthie war of [hie] renoune.
 Thir auntient Knightis of discretioun,
 Ar passit furth at command of the King,
 1280 With the heraulds to advyse on this thing.
 The King was servit with meitis amiabill,
 Almaist his courfis was innumerabill.
 The hall owerfchynit [all] with torches bright,
 That thame among it feamit dayis licht.
 The intermeifes long war for to tell,
 On quhilks as now I mynde not for to dwell.

The King, quhen he hade souppit, went anone
 To his chalmer, quhilk [all] of torches schone.
 The antient Knights and the heraldis eike
 1290 Com to the King, and said with wordis meike,
 We wald have gour advice. Then said the King,
 Sirs, We have beine advyfit of this thing ;
 Sen gour defyre is my advyse to have,
 Ze sall it heir anone, sa God me save :
 Of them without, me thocht the Constabill
 The louing hail me thocht was most abill ;
 Of them within, it is ane mater plaine,
 Clariodus, of knightheid soverane,

Hes all the laude, quhilk knowis everie wicht,
 1300 As flour of armis and chevalrie full richt.
 They anfwairit, Sir, as ge have said, fuithlie
 So it is jugit amongs us veralie.

The King gart schaw this [judgement] to the Queine,
 Wha did gif ane hinger of gold most scheine
 To them, and bade them as thay list dispone,
 And gart twa Ladies of hiris with them gone.
 Unto Meliades have thay passit fyne,
 And hir presentit ane hat of leves greine,
 Lustie, and said, Madame, ge know
 1310 Your awin avow. This Ladie, without aw,
 Hir hat of gold [scho gave,] and bade that thay
 Sould it full richtlie it dispone perfey.
 This lustie hat [all] of greine levis plet,
 Insteid of it upon hir heid scho fet ;
 And with thir Knightis scho sent ladies two.
 And first unto the Constabill thay go,
 Saying, The Queine weill gretis gow, Sir Knight,
 And dois present this gudlie hinger bright
 To gow, my Lord, with greatings monie fold ;
 1320 For to hir Grace fuithlie it is told,
 That of the Knightis all that war without,
 Youris beine the praise and louing hail but dout.
 Then the Lord Constabill full reverentlie
 Thankit the Queine, and said full humbillie,
 Thair was full monie Knightis of renowne,
 To quhom I may be na comparisoun :
 Bot sen the Queine [out] of hir nobilnes
 Rewards me so, I with all humbilnes
 Will it refave, for saike of hir Henes,
 1330 Whom God preserve in joy and lustines.

Two diamonts he gave the Ladies two,
 And kissit them or he wald pairt them fro.
 The Heralds he rewairdit with monie,
 And gave them gold that was [rycht] fair to se.

- Syne ar thay passit to Clariodus,
 Him greating [eik] with countinace joyous.
 Thay him presentit [then] the hat full cleire,
 And said, Meliades with glaidfum cheire
 Sent it to him, saying, The Ladies all
- 1340 Him jugit to be most victoriall
 Of them within, and most of hie renoune
 Of all the justeris but comparifoune ;
 And told that so him jugit King and Queine,
 Lordis, Ladies and Knightis all bedeine.
 Clariodus with wordis richt bening,
 Joy everlasting; he said, he to the King,
 And to the Queine, and faire Meliades,
 And all the Lordis that on fike wayis
 That gave me name fike as I did not serve ;
- 1350 God give me grace thair thankes for to deserve.
 I dar not tak on me this to refave,
 Nor for fike cause fike ane rewaird to have ;
 For thair war monie and better knights nor I,
 Quhilk to refave this gift beine more worthy.
 Schortlie to tell, no thing might him excuse,
 Bot to refave thair present he behuife.
 He gave them thankis oft and courtelly;
 Syne kissit he the Ladies by and by,
 And gave ilk ane of them ane chaine of gold ;
- 1360 Syne to the awcht ancient Knightis bold
 He gave awcht courfouris lustie for to se ;
 And to the Heralds in grit quantitie

He gave of gold and silver full largelie,
 And two gounis of cloath of gold mightie.
 Thay cryit Larges ! [Larges !] hé on height
 Of Sir Clariodus the gentill Knight.

Then begouth minstrellis lustilie to play,
 And lustie wichts the dance begouth to say.
 The King commandit Clariodus to take 1370 Meliades, ane bease dance to make,
 And bad the Constabill go leade the Queine,
 And he him self did lead ane madine scheine.
 And quhen Clariodus had be the hand
 Meliades, he sounne did understande
 That scho at him displeasit was alyte ;
 Whairfor his heart beine full of wo and fyte,
 And wox so sadlie that mynd he hade of nocht,
 Bot how into hir favour cum he mocht.
 When thay had danfit so ane litill space,
 1380 They sufferit utheris to go into the beace
 Whill thay reposit beine. And fuith to tell,
 Clariodus abake went be him fell
 Behinde the danfers, and in ane windo fate ;
 Grite was the dollour that his heart was at,
 He durst not speir at hir quhairfor or quhy
 That scho was wroth, love so victoriousslie
 Him vinqvist in his breist ; and at the last,
 Quhan that ane stound or twa had him overpast,
 He tuike him hardiment, and thus said he,
 1390 Madame, I thanke zow, so mot God me se,
 Of the gudlie present ge to me send,
 The quhilke I fall unto my lyves end
 Remember with my service at my might.
 With soft speech then answeirit scho hir Knight,

- Clariodus, no thankis gif me to,
 Sen that I was avowit so to doe.
 Be hir wordis hir grivance weill he knew,
 Whilk did his woe quadruple [now] of new.
 Madame, said he, to me dissimull nocht,
 1400 If that at me displeasit ze be ocht ;
 Weill knew I be zour wordis in this place,
 That sum pairt now I stand out of zour grace.
 Quoth scho, Bot at myself I am displeit.
 Clariodus in heart the worfe was easit,
 And said, Madame, if that it war zour will,
 Zour displeasour I wald ze schew me till ;
 And if that ze not please for to do so,
 Into sum strange cuntrie [then] will I go ;
 I will not heire remaine and zow displeise,
 1410 To do zow grevance and myself uneise ;
 [And] best it war me think, for to doe so,
 Nor zow displeise and [alse] my selfin flo ;
 One skaith is les nor two ze may beleive,
 My paine I reput not unto zour greive.
 Bot quhen scho hard tell of his depairting,
 Hir heart wox cold, and furth ane figh did bring.
 Full red scho was that he fould pas hir fro,
 For weill scho trowit that it fould have beine so
 Bot gif he gat hir peace ; quhairfore, quoth scho,
 1420 Clariodus, sen that it man be so,
 That ze will wit now quhat I have in mynde,
 No thing I meane bot that ze ar unkynde.
 Fair Sir, or now [oft] I have seine the day,
 [That, having come, thocht ze war far away,]
 Ze wald me bid zour cullour chose and wail,
 Seing in tornament it might prevail,

- And comforte zow my livary for to weire;
 And now I fe like ufes ze forbeire.
 At this juſting ze liſt not to diſdaine,
 1430 Unto my fight and preſence to atteine,
 Nor let me wit if ze wald juſt or nocht;
 The quhy I have confiſſiderit in my thoct;
 Heir beine Ladies [that ar] fairer nor I,
 Zow to direct in way of chevalrie,
 Whom with ever ze [now] advyfit be,
 Sumtyme ze war advyfit bot with me.
 And quhan ſcho had ſaid all, Clariodus
 Upon his kneis fate doun all dolorus,
 To ſchaw hir his intent in humbill wayis;
 1440 And ſcho anone hes maid him for to ryſe,
 And ſtand beſyde hir as he did before.
 Quoth he, My Lady, to quhom I ever more
 Have beine ane trewthfull ſervitor and man,
 Sen firſt to love or ſerve zow I begane,
 Treſt weill in me thair is no variance;
 Never could I deale with diſſimulance;
 I liet never in earneſt to na wicht,
 Than unto zow, my heart and Ladie bricht,
 Why ſould I do ſo curſit ane treaſoun?
 1450 Fy on ſike feingit falſe perdition!
 Zit ſchope I never no wicht for to deceave,
 Sike longis to ane harlot or ane knaive,
 And to no wicht that lovis his honoure;
 For ſo mot God gif to my faule ſuccoure,
 As ever I lovit uther Ladie zit
 Bot only zow, ſen firſt I did promit
 To be zour ſervant and zour [ain] trew Knight,
 The quhilk I falbe ever eſter my might

- But slight or ony dissimulatioun,
 1460 As God alse trewlie be my salvatioun :
 And in so far as I nocht to gow schew,
 That I this tyme to justing wald persew,
 Treft not that I of male ingyne it wrocht,
 Quhilke enterit never nor fall into my thocht,
 And never zeilds ; git I gow mercie cry,
 Now of sleuth and ignorance that I
 So me misgydit in my raklesnes,
 Forgive me, Ladie, for gour gentilnes,
 And of gour rewth and womanlie pitie,
 1470 That ge no longer have no hait at me
 In this mater ; and thocht my wite was dull,
 It falbe efter amendit at the full.
 With that he fate upon his kneis adoune,
 Asking hir mercie [pitie] and pardoune.
 Scho is content quhen [he] hir mercie cryt ;
 And eike scho be his countenance espyit
 That he displeasit was and wo begone,
 And uther thing save trewth he meinit none.
 Then was hir breist affwagit of all thing ;
 1480 Bot scho hir heart sa fare had donne resing
 Unto hir Knight, that [it] atoure meafoure
 Maid at hir heart of jelosie ane schoure,
 Whairof the straikeand unfufferabill [stound]
 The breist affaillis quhair love dois so abound.
 In heart then was scho glaid and rycht joyous,
 And said, My only Knight, Clariodus,
 Sen it is so, I heir forgeive gow fall,
 And af his knie thair raifit him at all.
 And this was donne and that so privily,
 1490 That naine of them persavit standing by ;

For with two loveris, being of ane consent,
Full secreitlie monie ane gait is went.

Then turnit he againe unto the dance,
And tuike be hand this Ladie of plesance.
And with [new] curage danfit then thir two,
As thay that war relaxit out of wo ;
That then before with painis war oprest,
And now againe with joyis new possest ;
Upon so fair and gudlie wayis they dance.

1500 Then said the King, he never saw in France
So plesant danferis, and more for to commend.

And quhen thair danfing all was at ane end,
Clariodus said to Meliades,

Madam, I gart grath on [maist] gudlie wayis
Twentie fair robis all of fatine quhyte,
And wrocht all with orphand arte of delyte,
To give unto the Kingis Knights and gouris,
That frescheft beine all furrit with amouris ;
And if ge think the tyme war oportune,

1510 I wold gar fetch them or the danse war donne,
And distribute them efter gour plesance.

Scho anfwairit him with gudlie countenance,
Rycht honorabill is gour devyfe persey,

I wald glaidlie have ane of gour aray
Intill ane hat of cullour quhyte as floure.

Glaidlie, Madame, he said, with grit honoure.
Unto the Constabill eik he this told,

Saying, My Lord, I pray zow that ge wold
Helpe me to distribute my livaray,

1520 And to befeike the fellowschipe that thay
Wald not disdaine like gifts for to refave,

Thocht they be sypme to fike lyke men to have.

Quoth he, My brother, Sir Clariodus,
 Sen ze dispone to gif ane livaray thus,
 Me of zour livaray quhy will ze refuse,
 Sen I zow love as other Knightis dois.
 With that he lewch on him full joyoufflie,
 For he him lovit ay full tenderlie.
 I please weill, said Clariodus, that ze
 1530 Formist of all into my livaray be,
 Seing that ze defyre it. Then ar thay gone
 Unto the Constabillis chalmer, and thar anone
 Devysit they on this thing. Then Clariodus
 Sent for the robis that war pretious.
 To Bonvaleir he gave command anone,
 That he fould to the merchandis buithes gone,
 And bade that he fould by ane hat alfe quhyte
 As is the Mayis bloffome of delyte;
 And syne it geive to Romaryn in keiping,
 1540 And bad hir with it to hir Ladie ging.
 Then to the Constabill said Clariodus,
 Sen that ze beine so gentill and gracious
 To be ane of our fuite, chose ze anone
 Into this lovarray quha fall with zow gone.
 Then ten Knightis chosit the Constabill
 Out of the Court of France, [the] most abill ;
 Clariodus ten Knightis aveinand,
 The pik of Ingland and of Estur land ;
 Thair naimis heir neids not for to reporte,
 1550 The gudlieft thay war of all the forte.
 When that the Knightis war rewardit thus,
 Glaidlie thay thankit Sir Clariodus.
 Thir valiant Lordis vestit all in quhyte,
 Them to behold it was [ane] grite delyte.

- The Constabill tuike ane torch bricht birnand,
 Clariodus ane uther in his hand,
 And all the leave hes torches taine also,
 And swa went furth thir Knightis two and two,
 With hand in hand, all cled into ane fuite,
 1560 Befor them geid ane harpe and eike ane lute.
 Thay fand the King in joy and grite plesance,
 With Ladies enterit in ane carroll dance,
 Meliades full fresche leiding the ringe,
 With ane cleire torche, into hir hand, [birning,]
 With hir whyte hat on heid of rose culloure,
 And scho als fresch as is the lillie floure.
 Thair was the Queine into the danse also,
 And monie uther lustie ladies mo,
 And danfing, that to se it was delyte.
 1570 The Knightis entering so in culloure quhyte
 The King beheld, and had ane grit plesance
 To se the gudlie gyse and countinace.
 Unto the Constabill and Clariodus
 He said, Fair Siris, fresch and amorus,
 Ze have conseillit fra me this noveltie,
 Ze beine all lustie danfers as thinkis me :
 Bot [weill] he knew that Sir Clariodus
 Thir quhyte livoras hes ordanit thus,
 Becaus that he the Quhyte Knight was before,
 1580 Him prailing in his mynde ay more and more :
 And all the maner eike persavit he,
 How to Meliades of grite bewtie
 He fould be waddit ; bot he was wyse at all,
 And rewlit him as fould ane Prince royall.
 So in the midis of the jolifie,
 Thrie Counts are cumit that ar of grite degrie,

And in the Palice enterit ar anone ;
 The Counte of Deckare of the thre was one,
 The Counte of Distempis and the Counte of Champangie,
 1590 Unto the hall ascendit ar all thrie.

They helfit have the King on gudlie wayis,
 And eik the Queine and fair Meliades,
 The Counte and eik the Countes of Estur.
 The King, that was ane Prince of grite nurture,
 Hes them refavit on ane gudlie fassoune,
 And weill them chereift efter thair renoune.
 Thair purpose was to beine at the justing,
 Bot it all endit was or thair cuming.
 The danse indurit long, and the disporte,
 1600 The circumstance war long for to reporte.

When day approachit neir, to beddis they went,
 Both King and Queine, Lordis and Ladies jent.
 Meliades hes taine her leave to gone,
 The thrie Countis convoyit hir anone
 Unto hir chalmer ; syne tuike leave hir fro,
 And unto thair rest they all thrie can go.
 Thus all to beddis went, and sleipit still,
 Whill bricht Apollo schynit ouer holte and hill.

Right as the mirrie larke into the sky
 1610 Ascendit with ane joyous harmonie,
 When mistie vapours ryfis from the vaile,
 And leavis hinging full of silver hail,
 And small foullis delytis them to sing
 Among the tender rosie blumis geing,
 Of fresch Titane all againis the fichte,
 From langour them comforting with [the] licht,
 This lustie Prince no longer might he sleipe,
 Fra he unto the mirrie day tuike keipe,

- Bot thocht he wold in hunting for to ryde,
 1620 And callit on ane varlote him besyde,
 And bade him gar his maisteris of household,
 To Boyce de Wincente, that lustie hold,
 Go and provide with everie ordinance
 Pertaining to his kinglie governance.
 This being donne, up raife baith King and Queine,
 With all his royall Courte richt weil beseine,
 And service harde with gude devotioune,
 And fyne of menstrallie with merrie founde.
 Disjunit they baith lord and ladie bright,
 1630 And to thair horse anone they can them dicht.
 With this unto the fair Meliades
 Bonvalier com to hir on humbill wayis,
 Saying, My Lord Clariodus me fend
 To zow, Madame, and doing recommend,
 QUILKE hes zow fend ane diamond full bright,
 Remembering that he is zour trewthfull Knight ;
 And he also hes fend to zow ane sang,
 The quhilke he maid rycht as the morrow sprang ;
 He and his servandis ar cled in levoray blew,
 1640 In tokine that he falbe ever trew ;
 If ze the cullour pleise, he bade me speire.
 I pleise it weill, quoch scho, in all manere.
 Scho tuike the song and diamonde also,
 And threw ane goldin ring hir finger fro,
 And said, Anone present this to my Knight,
 And thanke him of his gyftis all at ryght.
 Bonvaleur went and did as scho him bad.
 With this the lustie Courte, with hartis glaid,
 Muntit on horse with weiddes fresch and gay.
 1650 Meliades, in nobill and rich aray,

In bewtie blumit as bloffome on the ryce,
 Triumphant as terreftrial paradice.
 To tell zow of hir fresch abuilgement,
 Or of hir palfrayis pretious ornament,
 It war prolix, thairfor I let it go.

- This nobill Courte and Prince furth ryding fo,
 Up to the hevin gois the trumpits found,
 Up gois the curious found of clarioun,
 With hornis blast they cheir the hardie houndis,
 1660 Whill Parice wallis reardit with the foundis.
 So furth thay raid at the ports of the toune,
 On fra the royall Palice of grite renoune.
 Clariodus cled in ane mantill blew,
 With his four fellowis alse in the ilke hew,
 Full rich furrir with mertrix that is fyne,
 Upon ane curfour, with heart leoneine,
 The quhilk Madame Meliades him gave,
 Softlie he raid quhill he owertuik the leave.
 Him followit varlots awcht in blew all clede,
 1670 On wantoun curfouris fate and full weill fede,
 With silver changeis about thair halfe full bright.
 Aucht gentill men, that lustie war and wight,
 He hade also all cled in dameis blew,
 With golden changeis that war bright of hew.
 Into the Courte he raid. His lustie entrie
 It was ane fight full gudlie for to fe.
 The King him callit, [and,] but mair abaide,
 Clariodus, tell me, anone he said,
 The maner of the tornament in Spaine;
 1680 [And] quha did best to me do ze not faine.
 Weill wist the King the hail renoune hade he,
 At the ilk justing was so fair to fe.

Ane litill reid than wox Clariodus,
 And to the King he hes maid anſweire thus :
 Sir, if that I the treuth fall gow declaire,
 Full monie mightie and nobill knight was thaire,
 That ſo weill provit, that harde was for to tell
 Whilk of the forte in chevalrie did excell,
 Althocht the ladies, of thair courteſſie,
 1690 To like ane honour did me magnifie,
 As for to gif the laude and praiſe to me ;
 Git I deſervit it in no degrie,
 For monie ane Knight thair better was nor I.
 Then ſaid the King, I traift rycht veralie,
 That men full far might feike, or that they fand
 Ane Knight that ware of deidis ſa valiand,
 To wine renoune in armis gow before.
 Of other diverſe materis ſpake they more.
 The King ſo gentill was in commoning,
 1700 [That] thair was none of honoure, old nor ying,
 Of all the Knightis of Meliades,
 Bot he with them at leafoure did advyſe.
 And quhen this royall Courte of nobilnes
 War cumit to Boyce de Vinſentes,
 From horſe all doune [thay quicklie] did deſcend,
 And in the mightie Palace as they wende
 The Ladies all ar unto chalmer gone,
 The nobill King to hall is went anone.
 The wallis ware arayit full luſtillie,
 1710 With rich arace [that] thar war full mightie ;
 The hall was mikill and [eik] full of licht.
 And quhen the denner was all redie dicht,
 The King ſent to [the] chalmer for the Queine,
 And for Meliades the luſtie ladie ſcheine ;

- They com anone at his commandiment,
 Himself begane the buirde incontinent,
 And set abone him all the ladies faire,
 For he no stait wald let be keipit thaire.
 The ladies at his tabill grit and small,
 1720 He gart be fete, thocht they refuifit all.
 The Count of Estur, and the Lord Constabill,
 Clariodus with uther lordis abill,
 Palexis and his brother Amandur,
 With thair two fellowis of grit honoure,
 Sir Pennent de la Carier full famous,
 Sir Charles, Sir Broun, and eike Sir Donaus,
 And all that longit to Meliades,
 He hes gart [thame] be fet in gudlie wayis
 At his awin tabill, thocht thay refuifit thairto,
 1730 His bidding git behuifit thay all to doe.
 He thair hes maid him fellow and no king,
 As myne awthour hes maid [trew] rehearsing.
 He was both manlie, wyfe and gracious,
 He could be mirrie and solatious
 Whair that him list, for till make companie.
 The courfis com right fair and royallie.
 The King wold not fit long in that degrie,
 So longit he the royall chafe to fe
 Of fellow deire within his perke royall.
 1740 Then suddantlie up ryfis ane and all.
 The King twike be the hand Meliades
 Before them all, and said on this wayis,
 Faire Siris, ge fall know, that it is so
 That none [this day] fould into widdis go
 Without ane lady, and thairfor that I
 Of brightest bewtie chose me ane lady.

They leuch all at the King that railit fo.

Be this was said, anone to horse they go.

The nobill King ascendit on his steid,

1750 And him behinde the floure of womanheid ;

Syne hes commandit Sir Clariodus

To take the Queine gudlie and gracious

Behinde him on his horse : and but demand

Thair hes he fulfillit the Kings command.

The Count Samphange with [alse] bissie cure

Twike behind him the Countes of Esture.

The Earle of Esture twike behind him eike

The Ladie De la Carier fair and meike.

So everie lustie Lord and gentill Knight

1760 Hes horfit ane Ladie of beawtie bright.

Out of the royall Palice have they past

With plesant found of [hunting] hornis blast,

And to the wodis raid full royallie,

Whair thay hade hunting right abundantlie.

It was ane nobill fight for to behold

The fair fresch forrest and the florifchit fold,

The faitis fet with hunters of knowledge,

The eger hounds defyrous of courage.

Furth gois the dogis throw the ryse on raw,

1770 The deir doun cumis dunting throw the schaw.

With How and Cry they follow them behinde.

The hunteris lurkis law under the lynde.

The heard in cumis. Fearlie but abaid

The hundis in thair leasches dois abraid,

Thair heartis dunting in breiftis for defyre.

Thus feing, the bukis go bak then in the swyre

Be two and thrie, endlong the water fyd.

The hunds fra monie ane leasch dois out glyde,

- That under the bewis beine loufit monie brace.
 1780 The hunters glaidlie followis on the chafe.
 Lo ! heir the hynde is letherit be the hunde,
 And thair ane heart gois gronand to the grunde.
 So this day fair quhat is thair maire to faine
 Whill thay of deiris ane grit number had flaine.
 Clariodus, that raid befor the Queine,
 Had in his hand ane dearte both scharpe and keine,
 That he was ufit ay weill for to cast ;
 So com ane [deir] buke by him at the last
 Into his way [and] halving him againe.
 1790 Madam, quoth he, pleis ge for to have flaine
 Zone faire deir buke that cumis in our way ?
 I zow requyer, the Quene can to him say.
 He did his coursour with his spurris broch
 Whill neir the buke swiftlie did he aproach,
 And with fike force the darte did in him dryve,
 Befor the Queine, that he fell deid belyve.
 Lordis and Ladies that this thing hes feine,
 Gritlie it praifit, and most of all the Queine
 Hes him commendit into mikill thing.
 1800 Ane Knight hes it reherfit to the King,
 QUILKE rydand was before Meliades.
 I know, quoth he, that mekill beine to praife
 The deidis all of Sir Clariodus,
 Whilke is both strong, hardie and chevalrus.
 This being said, the King schuipe him to ryde ;
 Clariodus he gart ryde him befyde,
 And bade him sing. He said, he wald anone,
 For he of dislobedience maide none.
 Then said he to Meliades, Madame,
 1810 Sing ge " Si je suis touf jours a Madame" ?

Scho said, Forfuith that song I can not sing.
 Clariodus, let heir it, said the King.
 On of his servitours he callit thane,
 The quhilke ane tennour pleasantlie begane,
 And he the truble sang rycht curiouflie,
 That it resoundit ane dulce melodie.
 The King grite plesance had it for to heire,
 So had the Queine and all the ladies cleire.
 When he had sung, the King said, Verament
 1820 This is ane lustie song, and right plesant ;
 This is ane ballet fresch and amorus,
 Is it new maid ? Jea, said Clariodus.
 Meliades then smyllit, changing hew,
 When that he speirit if it was maid of new ;
 For the ilk song it was that he hir fend
 That day of morrow with ane recommend,
 The quhilk Bonvaleir did to her present.
 The King in musike was intelligent,
 He sang ane tennor to Meliades,
 1830 And scho the trubill sang on gudlie wayis.
 The thrie Earlis that cumit ware of laite
 Did sing also with voices dulcorate.
 In cumpanies ouer all the courte they song,
 Grite mirrines and joy was them among.
 Thus pat thay off the tyme with faire pastance,
 With mirthful breiftis bathit in plesance,
 While that they enterit at Parice portis bricht ;
 And throw the ryndis raid with heartis licht,
 As thay that to the royall Palice tendit,
 1840 Whill fra thair horse alswewith they have descendit,
 And enterit all in thair chalmers anone,
 Whill tyme was unto supper for to gone.

The King, that ever in honour did excell,
 Them feiflit faire, the trewth if I fould tell,
 Ane monethes fpace, with fike triumphe and cheir,
 That none on lyfe under the fune fo cleire
 More plesance hade, nor levit in more joy,
 Nether in land of Greife, nor git in Troy.
 And quhen the moneth aprochit neir to ende,
 1850 The Ladie purpofit then hame to wende,
 And garte hir folke make readie in all thing,
 Againe the day of hir depairting.

So happinit in the meine tyme to be,
 Ane herald cumit out of Inland cuntrie
 Thair from the King unto Meliades,
 And in hir chalmer as fcho did up ryfe
 He enterit, and hir faluft courteslie,
 Saying, The King your Father rycht heartilie
 Commendis him to you, and eike the Queine,
 1860 The quhilkis for you grite langoure dois fufteine.
 Thay have me chargit hame you for to fpeid ;
 For thair is cuming withoutin ony dreide
 Thrie faire ambaffants from thrie fundrie Kings
 For your wadding. Outower all uther things
 Thay you defyre ; but neverthelefe the King,
 Into that mater worke will he nothing
 Whill your hame cuming, and quhill that he have [Advice] of Earle Eftur ; fa God me fave,
 Without his counfall he will doe nothing.

1870 And quhen this Ladie hard of the tyding,
 Sum thing fcho was into her heart adreid,
 Believing to fum King thay fould hir wade ;
 Whilke rather wald be deid, without feingeing,
 Nor of the world to have the gritteft King

- And leive Clariodus hir onlie Knight.
 Fair countenance scho maid git at [hir] nicht,
 Saying, My frind, welcum ge ar to me ;
 Thankit be God, of the prosperitie
 Both of my Father, and of my Mother eik ;
 1880 To save them two, Lord Jesus I befeike.
 Me for to wade quhen ever that they will,
 I salbe reddie thair counfall to fulfill.
 Within thrie dayis we fall out of France
 Depart, God willing, but more circumstance.
 When this was said, to Earle Estur he went,
 And in this mater schew all his intent,
 And all this thing to him maid manifest ;
 Syne went unto ane Oflarie to rest.
 The mariage of [the] faire Meliades
 1890 Into the Court hes spred on fike ane wayis,
 Whill it come to Clariodus audience,
 Whilke throw his breift withoutin resistance
 As grundine dairte then awfullie did glyde.
 With fade thochtis his mynd was occupied.
 He was dispairit and right fore adrede,
 Evin that the King her Father fould hir wade
 Upon ane of thofe Princes right potent ;
 Befeikeing God full oft in his intent,
 On fike ane wayis that it fould not proceed.
 1900 This Ladie eike, that leives in fike ane dreid,
 Ever to God scho prayis devotlie
 To fend hir him quhome that so [richt] trewlie
 Scho lovit ay, and fould quhill scho might left.
 Thus, nather of thair heartis beine at rest,
 To speike with uther defyring so gritly
 At lafoure, quhair no wight might [thame] espy.

Clariodus anone went to the King,
 Whilke then with his thre Counts wes advyling.
 The King then drew aparte fra them anone,
 1910 And with Clariodus at lafoure spake allone
 Of diverse things ; and so amongs the lave
 He said, Clariodus, sa mote God me save,
 I wald have zow still in my Courte dwelling,
 Whilk my defyre is ower all uther thing.
 I heir now that Our Brother of Ingland
 Hes for his Doughter sent, [and] defyrand
 To have hir waddit at hir hame cuming.
 Clariodus, ze doe for me this thing,
 The quhilke anone I fall unto zow fay,
 1920 Be fresch and lustie on hir wadding day ;
 With that he smylit on him lustillie.
 Clariodus weill understude the why,
 Whairfore, he said, and this he [smyling] spake,
 Sir, zour command to fill I undertake ;
 For that ilk day full blyth I think to be
 Of everie knight in that ilke assemblic.
 Then said the King, God grant that it be so,
 That ware my defyre, and falbe ever mo.
 The King he thankit in all humbill thing.
 1930 Then to the Queinis chalmer went the King,
 And thair he fand the faire Meliades,
 To quhome sweitlie he said on this wayis,
 Madam Meliades, as I suppose,
 Of lustie princes ze [fall] have zour chose ;
 Be not haistie, bot weill advyfit be,
 And chuse ane valiant man in all degrie
 Of might ; for landis ze neid nocht to crave,
 Seing ane mightie kingdome that ze have.

Sir, ge know, scho anfwairit, in all thing
 1940 I mone obey unto my Father the King.
 Thus raillit he with hir full pleafantlie,
 And scho him anfwair maid debonarlie.

When cumin was anone the latter day
 Of this moneth, withoutine mair delay
 Meliades unto the King is went,
 Saying unto him with full meike intent,
 Sir, I am readie to pafe in my cuntrie,
 Gif thair be nocht ellis ge wald with me.
 Madame, quoth he, gif fo be that ge will,
 1950 Now hamewarte pafe, God gour purpose fulfill,
 And zow conferve in plefance and in joy,
 I will my felf in gaitwarte zow convoy.
 Thoght scho laid nay, and laith was thairunto,
 Was none excufe, bot [that] he wold it doe.

Then said scho to the Queine, in humbill wayis,
 I thanke zow heire, Madame, ane thowfand fayis,
 Of the grite jentrice ge have schawin to me,
 Of zour hie honoure [and] nobilitie ;
 My Father hes me fend sex faire courfouris,
 1960 And sex haiknayis plefant attoure meafouris ;
 Ze fall have sex of them, and I zow pray
 Them to relave ; and tho the Queine alway
 Excusit hir, zit scho maid fike instance,
 The Queine garte take of them delyverance.
 Thair sadillis war of cloth of gold full bright,
 Browderit with ftonis radious and light,
 And they alse quhyte as onie fnowis doune.
 The nobill Queine, that was of grite renoune,
 Hir thankit sweitlie, and gave to her also 1970 Ane chaine of gold ; and fyne with heartis wo,

They kissit utheris with teiris distelling.
 Scho tuike hir leave at Ladies auld and zing.
 Syno came the gudlie Countes of Esture,
 And tuike hir leave with countenance demure
 Both at the Queine and at the Ladies all,
 And at the Kingis Court univerfall.
 Unto them all grite giftis gave the Queine.
 Meliades to clofe discendit beine.
 Syno at the Queine [his] leave tuik Earle Estur,
 1980 And at hir Ladies plesant of portratour.
 And last of all, Clariodus the Knight
 Inclynit to the Queine, and bad gude nicht,
 To hir ay recommending his servise.
 And scho againe upon full humbill wayis
 Said unto him, Ha! Sir Clariodus,
 Faire weill, in world the Knight most gracious,
 And most of deidis famous and of pryfe;
 I am weill holdine unto zow oft fyfe,
 The richest jewell to the worldis end,
 1990 Ze, the most nobill Knight, unto me fend.
 With that scho tuike thair of [the] bright gold cleire
 Ane verie lustie firmaleit most deire,
 And said, Clariodus, ze fall this take,
 And weire it in zour cuntrie for my faike.
 He thankit hir full courteslie at all;
 And then scho hes him kissit anone withall.
 He tuike his leave at everie Ladic faire.
 The King was mountit on ane palfray thaire,
 Ane of the sex the quhilke Meliades
 2000 Gave to the Queine, quhilke mikill beine to praife;
 He said thay war ane gyft most honorabill,
 And thankit hir with wordis amiabill;

- He said he wold with hir on gaitwart ryde.
 Not one of them no longer wald abyde ;
 They raid out throw the toune full royallie,
 With trumpit found of hevenlie melodie.
 And quhen they war two mylls without the toune,
 The nobill King, most worthie of renoune,
 Tuike leave at hir, and gave hir ane colleir,
 2010 With curious worke that pretious was and deire ;
 And said to hir, Madame Meliades,
 I me commend to zow on humbill wayis,
 Beseiking zow, the pearle of plesance,
 That ze wold have on ws remembrance ;
 Ze spair ws not, for we all tyme ar zouris.
 This lustie Princes, with changing collouris,
 Inclyning then, and reverencing the King,
 They kiffit thair, and [fo] maid departing :
 Syne kiffit he hir Ladies ane and ane.
 2020 The Count of Esture thair his leave hes taine,
 And his Countes ; and fyne Clariodus,
 To whom the King, with wordis gratious,
 Said, Faire coufing, in heart I am full wo
 So fuddantlie that ze depairte me fro ;
 Thair leivis none in all this world fo wyde,
 That is fo welcum with ws to abyde.
 This Knyght inclynit law with reverence,
 And humblie thankit the Kingis excellence ;
 Saying, Zour Hienes I thanke humbillie,
 2030 That hes me treitit heir fo nobillie ;
 My fervice falbe zouris for evermore,
 Whilke celfitude conserve the King of glore.
 With that he tuike his leave with courtes faire
 Both at the King and at the Lordis thaire,

And eik forget he not the Constabill.
 Thir Knightis two with wordis amiabill
 Tuike leave at uther, imbracing tenderlie,
 As thay that lovit uthers ay parfytlie.
 Depairtit fo thir Lordis of renoune,
 2040 Eik my Lord fayis in his translatioun,
 That from the King none unrewardit went,
 Of all the Court nobill and excellent,
 For unto them with grite humanitie,
 He schew his regale liberalitie ;
 The quhilk againe to Parice did returne,
 And thay raid furth withoutin more fojorne.
 This Princes and hir lustie companie
 Unto thair cuntrie sped fo biffilie,
 That to the sea they approachit belyve,
 2050 They schipit all and fyne did [faif] aryve
 In England, whair on horfe thay have ascendit,
 As thay that north into the cuntrie tendit.
 Thus in thair voyage all was fair and well,
 Whill, throw ane forrest as thay did travell,
 They saw ane pailgeoun lustillie upstent,
 Of filke all reide, that schew full redolent.
 The Earle said to Meliades the bright,
 Behold, Madame, besyde zow stent on height,
 The fairest pailgeoun that ever I saw with ey,
 2060 What is within I reid we go and see.
 Within the pailgeoun luikit thay anone,
 And saw ane Knight thair ly with monie grone
 Above ane bed that lustie was to feine,
 Full richlie coverit all with fatine greine ;
 Ane arrow stake into his schoulder deipe ;
 Befyde him fate ane Ladie doing weipe

So wofullie, that pitie was to see.
 Meliades abaifit than was fche,
 And bade the Earle within the pailgeoun go,
 2070 And fpeir the caufe quhairfore that he lay fo,
 And quhy fcho was fo wobegone ane wight.
 The Earle enterit and helfit hes the Knight.
 With febill voice he helfit him againe,
 Lyke as he hade felt unfufferabill paine.
 And then unto the damofell he faid,
 If that ge pleife, [my] faire and luftie Maide,
 I wald ge did the caufe to me declaire,
 Whairfor ge weipe fo pitiouflie and faire.
 Then fpake the Ladie, Sene that ge requyre,
 2080 I fall gow fchaw, this is my brother deir ;
 We beine difcendit of ane hous royall,
 For of our blude we ftand imperiall
 In our cuntrie callit Northumberland ;
 And he that was ane Knight full valiand
 Raid feikand adventuris in ane forreft dicht
 And met foure Knightis that was fearfe and wicht,
 Whilke femblit on him hes fo cruellie,
 And he defendit him right nobillie,
 That of the foure thrie [had] he brocht af lyfe,
 2090 The fourt then fled and let ane arrow dryve,
 Whilke hurte him in the fchoulder as ge fe,
 The quhilk was lanfit with fike deftanie,
 That of the world the jentillift Knight but doubt
 Mone with his hande this arrow now draw out,
 Or than, alleace ! he leivis never more.
 The nobill Earle faw hir weipe fo fore,
 Ladie, he faid, comfort gow and be fill,
 Peradventure God hes fend helpe gow till.

- The Earle went to Meliades againe,
 2100 And hir declairit the hail mater plaine
 All worde be worde richt as the Ladie schew,
 Saying, Will [now] your Knightis all perfew
 Whilk will the arrow draw out of the Knight?
 Thairof, I pray you, said this gudlie wight.
 Sir Amandour then [first] the Earle did call,
 And unto him the cace declairit all,
 And prayit him to go and to assay
 For to draw out the arrow gif he may.
 Sir Amandour this answair maid him to,
 2110 It noth effeiris like things for to doe,
 And Sir Clariodus in the companie :
 Bot him the Earle treitit so nobillie,
 That he is went the mater to assay,
 Richt modestlie withoutin grite delay,
 And pullit at the arrow with his hand ;
 Bot thair alsweith impediment he fand,
 For him it wald not steire out of the wounde ;
 The Knight full forelie schrinkit at the ffound.
 Sir Amandur was in his heart full woe,
 2120 And furth out of the pailgeoun can he go.
 With wordis wrath his Eame he could reprove,
 That like ane mater unto him did move.
 Palexis past thairefter to assay ;
 Bot he might noth the arrow draw away.
 The young Knightis [then] preifit all aboute ;
 Bot for them all no way it wald come out.
 Than meiklie said Meliades, I pray
 That ye will cause Clariodus assay.
 That war, quoth he, ane grite presumtioun,
 2130 Efter so monie Knightis of renowne,

- That I fould go affay quhair they have failgeit.
 Bot his excufe [in] nothing him avallit ;
 Scho him commandit for his Ladies faike,
 The quhilke fcharplie unto his hearte did fryke.
 Then lichtit he and in the pailgeoun went,
 The Knight he helfit and the Ladie jent,
 Saying, Faire Sir, cumin I am to fie
 Gif I may helpe gow of gour neceffitie.
 Neir him he went with full grite humbillnes,
 2140 Haveing in God all houpe and confidence,
 To helpe the Knight ; of him he hade pitie,
 And sofflie at the arrow pullit he.
 It com to him but preife or vehemence,
 Without obftakill or onie refiftence.
 The bluide with that fprang out aboundantlie
 Out of the wound, and bled continuallie ;
 Bot nevertheles the Knight on fute up flart,
 And thankit him full oft with all his heart
 Imbracing him, faying, Of Knightheid floure,
 2150 All hail ! the Eard awcht gow [for] to honoure.
 I thanke our gracious God ane thoufand fayis,
 That hes gow fent to me upon this wayis
 To be my helpe, the quhilk nane uther might ;
 For it affayit hes full monie ane Knight,
 Bot none of them micht it remeid bot ze,
 That is of Knightheid floure and A per fe.
 What is gour name, if that it war gour will ?
 And he anone anfweirit hes him till,
 Clariodus of Eftur they me call,
 2160 Gone was my Father vifite gow firft of all.
 This Knight and eike the Madine humbill and wyfe
 Unto the Earle and to Meliades

- Ar passit, and them thankit reverentlie,
 And so did thay to all the cumpanie,
 Onlie for saike of Sir Clariodus.
 Syne to the pailgeoun mirrie and joyous
 They went, quhair that Clariodus thay fand,
 To stanche his [wounde] quhilk git was abydand.
 The wounde out ran with grite effusioun,
 2170 Alswewith he tuike the ring of the Lyoune,
 And twichit it and stemmit it anone.
 Clariodus then to his horse is gone.
 He tuike his leave, and efter them he raide,
 Whilke them among grite avanceing hes maid
 Of him and of his hie renoune and prife,
 And how he gentill was at all devyfe.
 This woundit Knight relievit of his woe,
 Commandit than sex knightis for to go
 And make his litter of gudlie fassioune ;
 2180 And syne thairin hes [he] garte lay him doune,
 To have him to his friendis haistillie,
 This Ladie [also] ryding neir him by,
 With all hir madinis [full] faire in feire :
 Thus hame he went, rycht gladsome of his cheire.
 Sir Brounar de la Haunt it was his name,
 Ane Lord he was of grite renowne and fame,
 Quhilk to Clariodus was efterwarte,
 Ane servitoure richt faithfull in [his] heart.
 Clariodus hes sped him haistillie,
 2190 And sounne he hes owertaine the companie,
 And long with them raide speiking to and fro ;
 And syne unto Meliades can go,
 And spake of diverse materis by the way,
 And of the woundit Knight eike speak did thay ;

- He tauld how he him stanchit of bleiding.
 To hir he said among all uther thing,
 Madame, ge fould be blyth and have courage
 That rydis hame now to zour mariage ;
 Fair Princes bydis [for] zour hame cuming.
 2200 Scho anfwairit him with wordis richt bening,
 Saying, Monie alkis the thing thay not get ;
 To love and ferve quho may loveris let ?
 Quoth he, Madame, full fuith it is ge fay,
 Bot git me thinke that gude it war alway
 That ge providit war of mariage,
 Confidering that the King is of grite age,
 And hes no bairnis bot your self allone.
 And that is fuith, quoth scho, fo mote I gone ;
 Thairfor ane thing at zow I will require,
 2210 Whilke of gone Princes war it zour defyre
 That I fould marie, diffimull not at all.
 Quoth he, Madame, my wite it is bot small
 [Thus] the estaite of Princes for to judge ;
 Becaus as git to zouth I beine ane fudge,
 And can not on fo grite maters decerne,
 For my zoung counfall wyfe men will disperne.
 And than, quoth scho, to this anfwair ge can,
 Into this warld of everie leving man,
 Whom wald ge tytest hade me to his wyfe ?
 2220 Quoth he, Grite Lordis wyfer be fike fyve
 The King your Father hes to his counsell,
 Whairfor in vaine it war for me to tell,
 For, as thay fay, is abiller for to be ;
 Whairfor, Madame, ge sorne to speir at me.
 Then said the Ladie, Ge fast your selfe excufe,
 Of zour counfall fay on for zour behuife ;

For thocht ze know not quhat the lordis ment,
 Ze know thair of quhat is zour awin intent,
 Whom with ze wold [that] I fould maried beine ;
 2230 Know ze not eik the trew love us betweine ?
 Now go I alfe neir zow as [that] I may,
 To gar zow fumthing in this mater fay ;
 And I remember that like thing hes beine,
 Quhen thair was nothing fpokine us betweine,
 Bot ze wald anfweir, and not be dangerous.
 I cry zow mercie, faid Clariodus,
 My mynde thairin rycht as my felf ze knaw,
 Whairfore thair was no neid to zow to fchaw ;
 Ze can not weill confidder as I deime ;
 2240 And fen ze will the fuith that I expreime,
 Gif it fould be as I wald wifch, I fay
 I wald no wight in world zow had bot I,
 And thocht I fpeike fik words, ze not difdaine,
 For grite defyre dois [ever] me constraine.
 To fpeik thir wordis, then faid Meliades,
 My Knight, I thanke zow on moft humbill wayis,
 That ze wold do me like worfchipe and honoure
 As me to wade, and ze of knightheid floure.
 Full weill I waite, had ze not lovit me,
 2250 Ze wald not ask with me to mariet be ;
 Bot I fa far beholdine ame trewlie
 Unto zour Father the Count [maift] worthie,
 And alfe unto zour Mother the Countes,
 And to zour felfe in love and worthines,
 I zow promit I fall no husband have,
 Bot quhom ze wald I hade, fa God me fave.
 I height to keipe zow this promiffioun,
 As I am Kingis dochter of renoune ;

- Or I it breke ather for weill or wo,
 2260 I fall dreidles out of the countrie go,
 As I have done before tyme for gour faike ;
 And thairfor no displeifoure in hearte ge take,
 Whatever ge heir or fe, ge hold zow still :
 In figne that I this promeis fall fulfill,
 Ane ring of gold I gif zow heir, my Knight,
 And for my faike gour heart ge hold on height.
 Clariodus the gold ring did refave,
 And courtellie he oft thanks to her gave,
 Saying, Madame, nixt God I awght to serve
 2270 And love gour Ladifchipe quhill that I sterve,
 That hes me gevin fik confolatioun,
 Quhilke falling was in disperatioun.
 For gif I fall the trewth to zow declare,
 My heart was full of dreid and [of] dispaire,
 Ay fen I tyding hard of gour wadding ;
 Whair I hade will to figh, now may I fing ;
 And quhair I trowit langour fould me flo,
 Ze have delyverit me of all that wo.
 Of this mater as then thay fpake no more ;
 2280 He let hir ryde ane litill him before,
 That schoe might talke with uther companie ;
 And he began to fing all secreitlie,
 For the grite joy was at his heart perfay.
 This luffie courte thay raide furth [all] the way,
 Whill thay com neire to Londoun the citie.
 Thair monie ane Lord that was of grite degrie
 Them met triumphantlie without the toune,
 Baith Bifchops, Duiks, and Earlis of renoune,
 And hir convoyit throw the rewis faire,
 2290 With filke and arras that arrayit war.

The bellis range in kirkis up and doune,
 The silver trumpits maid ane mirrie found ;
 Among the pepill hail was this clamoure,
 Welcum our lustie Princefs of honoure !
 Then at the Palice richt as scho discendit,
 The nobill Lordis still on hir dependit,
 And hir convoyit up into the hall ;
 Of hir cuming [richt] glaid was ane and all,
 And of the cuming of Clariodus :

2300 Thus was the Court richt blyth and joyous.
 The supper was anone [all] redie dicht,
 And to the tabill with monie Lord and Knight
 Adoune [then] sate this Princes honorabill,
 And servit was with meitis delectabill.

The night before thair cuming to the toune,
 Thre famous Bischops of full grite renoune,
 And thrie grite Earlis that war full worthie,
 Quhilkis war sex hundereth horse in companie ;
 Ane of them sent was to Clariodus,

2310 The uther to Palexis richt famous,
 The third to Amandour the nobill Knight,
 And broght with them thrie golden crounis bright,
 To crowne them Kingis of thrie kynriks cleire,
 As ge fall efter in this storie heire.

Into ane lustie Innis ludgit thay,
 Whair they on windowis and on stairis lay
 And saw this Princes and this Courte ryde by,
 And said they saw never sik ane company ;
 And of thair Oift they speirit of the thrie

2320 That fould the Princes of thair realmis be.
 And he them schew unto [the] Knightis thair,
 Vailgeand of deidis and of thair bodies faire.

Thir Lordis them commendit grittumlie,
 Saying, That they war nobill and worthie,
 Of thrie realmis to be crounit Kings,
 And happilie providit war thair rings
 To have like thrie Princes for to be,
 That both war cumit of ane linage hie,
 And syne was faire and seimit gracious ;
 2330 And most they praisit Sir Clariodus.

This night owerdrave, day cumand was anone,
 And bright Apollo with his beamis schone
 Ower land and sea, and all the land abreid ;
 This gudlie Princes, floure of womanheid,
 Addressit hir in hir freschest aray,
 As is the freschest bloffome into May ;
 And up him drestit everie Lord and Knight ;
 Thir thrie Ambasslats freschlie hes them dicht
 Unto thair Lordis, presents to attaine,
 2340 Full monie ane gowne of filke and golden chaine
 Was thame among, and gif [I] tell the treuth,
 Unto the Palice bounit they all but fleuth.

Thir tydings harde hes [Sir] Clariodus ;
 Them to convoy he hes sent Knights famous.

When all hade fervit God, and syne disjunit,
 Talbrounis and trumpits syne up tunit ;
 Meliades knights convoyit them the way.
 Alfweith within the Palace enterit they.
 Weill orderit, and on ane gudlie wayis,
 2350 They come before Madame Meliades ;
 They helfit have this Princes of bewtie ;
 Syne everie Lord and Knight in his degrie.

When they hade salust other courteslie,
 Then to Meliades thay said humbillie,

Madame, with leive of gow we will advyfe
 Heir with the Earle of Eftur in fum wayis,
 And we at lenth fall commoune with gow fyne;
 With that thay doe full low to hir inclyne.
 Doe as ge pleife, quoth fchoe, I am content.

2360 Thir Lordis and the Earle togidder went

Into ane chalmer be them felves allone.
 Ane of the bifchops speikis thus anone,
 My Lord, ge know the Lady your Countes
 Beine fifter to the Kingis nobilnes
 Of Ireland, quhilke [now] febill is and old,
 And may excerfe no juftice as he wold,
 And hes no heares abill unto the croune,
 That cuming are of his fucceffioune :

Whairfor unto your Sonne ws fent hes he,
 2370 To gar him cum and ringe in our countrie ;
 And heir we have brought for his [hie] renoune
 The regale wande of juftice and the croune,
 To delyver to him, and give poffeffioun
 Of all his nobill and mightie regioun ;
 And bade, or we returne, to croune him King,
 And in his name the realme to him refinge.
 We underftand that this may not be donne
 Into ane tyme that ware mair oportoune
 Nor heir befor this royall companie.

2380 The Earle maid answeir, and faid full courteslie,
 Firft God I thanke, from quhilke cumis all grace,
 And fyne the King, that fo weill ordanit hes
 His tender bluide efter himfelf to ringe.
 Clariodus he gart unto him bring,
 And faid, My Sonne is heir, the quhilk I geive
 Unto the King alfe long as he may leive.

Of Ireland two Lordis that was of mikill fame,
 Of quhom as now I neid not fchaw the name,
 Ane Bifchope and ane Earle, them betweine
 2390 Hes led him furth, quhilk gudlie is to feine.
 Full joyfull was the pepell auld and geing,
 Quhen that thay faw him led then as ane King,
 Betweine two Lordis nobill and potent :
 Bot thay fum pairt in heartis war dolent,
 Trowand that into Ireland he fould go,
 Full loath war thay he fould depairte them fro.
 Two famous Bifchopis and honorabill Earlis two
 Palexis tuike and Amandour alfo,
 And to them said on this [famine] maneire.
 2400 Becaus thir brether two Uncles war but weire
 To thir two Princes that grite war of degrie,
 The King of Garnet and of Castelzie,
 They war lede furth upon the famine wayis.
 Full gudlie was the maner and the gyfe
 Of the triumph was maid at thair crouning.
 All to the kirke are went thir Lordis dinge.
 Thir Kingis thrie was fete full royallie
 In regale feats, coverit mightillie
 With cloathes of gold, befor the hie altere,
 2410 And on thair heidis thrie goldin crounis deire,
 With awfull wand of iustice in thair hand,
 Servet with nobill Lordis inclynande.
 And Prelats that war dinge and honorabill,
 Begane the fervice in wayis conveyinabill,
 And thair ane psalme [full] solemelie they fang,
 For noyife of organis all the collage rang.
 When that the royall service all was fynit,
 The Earlis, Lordis and barrounis all inclynit

- Befor Clariodus with blyth vifage,
 2420 Randering to him of Ireland the homage ;
 Richt fo was donne unto the uther two.
 And fyne unto the Palice can thay go,
 Whair ane full royall denner ordanit was.
 The Kingis thrie war lede with nobilnes
 Out of the kirke, with feptour, fword, and croune,
 With noyse of trumpit and of clarioun ;
 They enterit in the Palice joyfullie,
 With mirthfull found of hevinlie mentrellie.
 Heir to be fehorte, and leive all circumstance,
 2430 Thay go to tabill with joy and all plesance.
 Betwix two Kingis fate Meliades,
 Ane King fat hir before on gudlie wayis ;
 Thrie Bifchopis, and of Eftur the Countes,
 Sate at the tabill thair with all glaidnes ;
 Two maifters of houfhold to King Philippon
 War merchald at the tabill end anone,
 With them Earle Eftur of nobilnes and fame,
 And the richt honorabill Bifchope of Durhame.
 I may not tary on thair marchelling,
 2440 To tell zow all the royall triumphing,
 Thair excellent and thair [maift] plesant cheire,
 Nor of their gudlie fervice the maneire,
 Nor of thair grite difport and minftrellie,
 Nor of the courfis that did multiplie,
 Nor among courfis the intermeifis glaid,
 Nor the delectabill comoning thay hade,
 Nor of the pretious meitis delicate,
 Nor of thair fyndrie flories prorogate ;
 I let owerigo all fik prolixitie.
 2450 Foure fyndrie liquoris ran with royaltie,

From foure beiftis in foure nuiks of the hall,
 Whilke was ane fight richt fair and triumphall :
 Ane was ane lyoun, right awfull and terribill,
 At quhois gaiping mouth, full horibill,
 Rane myghtie wyne, right plesant, cleir, and cauld ;
 It was ane gude fight him for to behald :
 The uthar was ane luffie unicorne,
 Fyne Ipocras did ryn out at his horne :
 The thride ane tyger was, felloun and stout,
 2460 Rose water fearcelie at his nose ran out :
 The fourte ane marmaide was, with traces bright,
 At both her papis mylke ran out on height.
 And at the letter courfe, in come ane gyfe
 Of finall chyldreine, [full] gudlie to devyfe,
 To the number of fortie, all tranffigurat
 As wolfes full wyld, and [strangelie] deformate,
 Quhilk fcatterit flouris faire throw the hall,
 With favoure sweit as ony balme royall ;
 And ever ilk ane on ane instrument,
 2470 On courious wayis, with fyngeris diligent,
 Diverslie glaidand, all in ane accorde
 Raifing on loft, with joy and grite conforde,
 The hearts of all the nobill audience.
 Of eardlie joy thair was no indigence.
 What fould I longer tell of thair feasting ?
 Thair cumis ane end of everie worldlie thing.
 When thay hade feaftit long upon this wayis,
 Both Kingis, Lordis, and Ladies, up thay raife,
 And went to chalmeris fair at all pleasouris,
 2480 Thair to delyver the ambaffadouris.
 The Ireland Bifchope, and the Earle alfo,
 [Hes] thair delyverance askit hame to go.

The King Clariodus on faire maneire,
 Thus faide, My Lordis and [my] friendis deire,
 I thanke the King my Eame of his [gude] grace,
 That hes his croune, his septore, and his mace,
 Donne of his nobilnes to me refinge,
 Albeit thairto I am no thing condinge ;
 And quhair he wold I to his ringe repairit,
 2490 It may be with expedience declairit
 Before zow all now at this [fame] instante,
 My companie this Princes may not wante,
 Whilk to hir Father rydis furth anone,
 Go I hir fro, scho then is left allone ;
 Bot of this voyage quhen [that] I have donne,
 And quhen I fe the tyme is oportune,
 Sall none ambassage neide me for to bring,
 Unto my Eame and honorabill King :
 Ze counfall me thairfor in this mater,
 2500 And to zour myndis I fall assent right heir.
 Then said the Bishope with all reverence,
 Zour wordis beine, Sir, fructuous of sentence ;
 Nothing we can zour speache [as now] impunge,
 So scharpe with reafounis cyllit beine our tonge,
 Zow in this present voyage we excuse ;
 Sen on no wayis fro hir [zow go] behuife,
 Ze may not leave the realme defolate,
 Thairfor ane louetenant to us create,
 Our realme to governe in [richt] regiment,
 2510 Whill ze gif us your prefence excellent.
 The King consentit to this petitioun,
 And gave right thair his [hie] commiffioun
 Unto the Earle of Durhame right famous ;
 And soune anone they war delyverit thus.

- And finallie thir other Kingis two
 Their ambaffatis hes delyverit also.
 Full grite giftis thir Kingis gave all thrie
 Unto thir Lordis mikill of dignitie,
 Commending them with hearts unto their Kings,
 2520 Them thanking oft [fyfs] into mikill things.
 They tuike thair leave full fairlie on this wayis,
 Both at the Kings and at Meliades.
 Earle Estur them convoyit bissilie,
 Unto the clofe quhair they fand all redie
 Ane Knight ordanit be King Clariodus,
 With monie ane goldin jewell pretious,
 Both goldin coupis, changeis and rings,
 Rich cloathes of gold, and monie coastlie things,
 For to present to the ambaffadouris ;
 2530 And syne they did with [verie] grite honouris,
 Convoy them [all] weill far out of the toune.
 The Bischope and the Earle of great renoune
 Of Durhame hes thair leavis taine anone,
 With the ambaffate grathing them to gone ;
 With that their gaitis they did depairt, and than
 Thair leave at uther hes taine everie man.
 Earle Esture tuike his leave and hamewart raid.
 And the Ambaffadours, withoutin more abaid,
 In thair voyage usit sik diligence,
 2540 Whill thay all come sounne into the prefence
 Of thair thrie Kings, and than thay all declairit
 How thay had donne, and hade [in] nothing spairit.
 Full glaid they war quhen they hard this tyding
 Of thair Uncles and of thair honoring.
 All thrie they feastit the Ambaffadouris,
 That had so plesantlie donne thair pleafouris.

To chalmer King Clariodus is gone,
 And his rob royall hes laid af anone,
 And eik his crown of gold i-forgit new,
 2550 And pute on him ane gounce of velvete blew ;
 Syne went unto the chalmer of Meliades,
 To quhome seho courteslie did [thair] up ryfe,
 And unto him maid kinglie reverence,
 Saying to him, with smylling countenance,
 Is this the fassoun of ane King, said sche,
 So quyetlie to cum in this degrie
 Into ane chalmer quhair ladies dois abyde ?
 Scho fet him on ane cuscheine hir besyde.
 He said to hir thir wordis secreteilie,

2560 Nather King, Earle, nor [git ane] Duike am I,
 Nor uther Lord, Madame, in your presence,
 Bot your awin Knight to doe your reverence
 To your abone all uther warldis wight,
 Als long as I have ather wite or might.
 Long spake they thus of materis to and fro.

The Earle Estur towardis them can go,
 And said, that speidfull [now it] war that we
 Schoupe ws this night in Belvilladoune to be,
 Whilk is from ws bot awcht mylis of way.

2570 All to this thing anone consentit thay,
 Thair horse thay gart be grathed suddently.

When everie thing was at poynt and readie,
 The quhilke pertieit unto thair estaite,
 At sehorde thay maid them readie for the gaitie,
 Kingis, Knightis, and Ladies of renowne,
 Ascendit on thair horse with trumpit soun.
 The Lordis of the toune did them convoy,
 Rycht honorabillie with plesance and with joy,

Whill thay war riddine ane great pearte of the way ;
 2580 Syne to the toune againe returnit thay.

The lustie Courte them sped on fike maneire,
 So at Belvell they come to the suppeire.

When the King wist his Dochter was fo neire,
 He hes delyverit on ane fair maneire
 The thrie Ambaffats, so thay war content ;
 Syne them rewairdit with giftis richt potent,
 Quhilk leave hes taine and hame raid fuddanlie
 To their Princes, commending grittumlie
 The Kings honoure and [eik] his gentilnes.

2590 Meliades this lustie gounge Princes,
 With [all] hir C urte [full] greatlie to advance,
 Aproached quhair the King maid residence,
 Whair monie Lords maid full grite reverence,
 Presentlie com before hir excellence,
 Fairlie hir met weiping with joy and blis,
 That schoe againe in hir cuntrie cumin is.
 Scho enterit in the toun right royallie,
 Quhilke stentit was with royall tapestrie,
 Into the honour of hir hame cuming ;

2600 Minstrellis did play, and bellis long did ring.
 Full fast the pepill praifit hir bewtie.
 And so, with all hir Court of royaltie,
 On gudlie wayis scho rydis throw the toun,
 And at the Kingis Palice lichtit doune.

And when the gudlie frefche Meliades
 Was from hir horse discendit on this ways,
 And enterit in the clofe of the Palice,
 The King hir Father, with [ane] mirrie face,
 Upon his heid put on his nobill croune,
 2610 Incontinent undid from him his gounge

And doublet, all alleane he hes discendit
 To hir quhom to he had so far offendit.
 Then all the Courte hade ferlie him to sie
 Go meit his Doghter in sik [ane] degrie.
 Rycht thair to hir he fate on kneis adoune,
 All bair heided, saiffand he hade on his croune,
 As not the father to the chyld fould do :
 Bot he so gritlie failzeit hir unto ;
 Whairfor he thocht he wald to hir amende.

2620 This Princes saw her Father and did attende,
 And saw him on his knie, and thocht ferlie ;
 For scho was then abaisit grittumlie,
 And him before scho fell on kneis eike.
 The King wirdis lamentabill and meike
 First spake upon this wayis, I aske God mercie
 Of my delyverance curfit and hastie,
 And of my wit that beifflie was and wyld
 For to believe fike treafoun of my chyld :
 Syne I aske mercie at zow, Dochter deir,

2630 In this estait as I am sitting heir,
 Beseikand zow that ze wald me forgive ;
 For I repent, and fall do quhill I leive,
 The grite trespase that I have to zow wrought.
 With that from weiping he [refrain] might nocht.
 His beard begane with teares to weit for sorrow
 As dasie buske bedewit in the morrow.
 Then all the pepill that this thing could sie,
 Full fast they weipit for rewth and for pitie,
 To sie the King regrate on fike ane wayes.

2640 This bening Ladie, fair Meliades,
 Heiring hir Father to hir compleaning so,
 Hir tender heart almaist it fell in two ;

- For sorrow and pitie neir out of wit scho braid.
 I cry gow mercie, myne Father, scho said,
 Ryfe up, my Lord, quhy fit ge fo, alleace ;
 For it no thing perteinis to gour Grace,
 To me, gour Chyld, to fit upon gour knie :
 Bot fuithlie it pertenis unto me
 To fit on kneis to gow, my Father deir,
 2650 My foverane Lord and Prince most inteir ;
 For weill ge know that I full humbillie
 At gour command will do aluterlie ;
 And, Father, I forgive gow hertfullie.
 And both with [that] they weipit pitioufflie.
 Than raife the King but ony wordis mo,
 And tuik his Doghter in his armis two,
 Whom that he lovit attoure all eardlie thing,
 And kissit hir with tender imbracing.
 Syne he refavit King Clariodus
 2660 Into his armis, with countinance joyous ;
 And on the famyne wayis his Cousings two
 With kinglie honour refavit he also ;
 [Then the] Earle Estur and his Countes eike
 He hes refavit with ane visage meike ;
 Syne all the Lordis and Ladies on be on
 He helfit hes. And quhen the Queine anone
 Hir Doghter saw, uneis scho might conetine,
 Or in hir heart so grit ane joy fusteine,
 To fie hir in so gude prosperitie,
 2670 That ordanit was so crewellie to die.
 Hir bairne schoe tuike in armis tenderlie,
 Ane weill long space imbracing heartillie ;
 Schoe kissit hir [full] oft, with spreite joyous.
 Syne scho refavit King Clariodus,

And fyne [the] uther Kingis both in feire,
 Kiffing them [all] with mirth and glaidfume cheir ;
 The Earle of Estur eik, and his Countes,
 Refavit schoe with joy and mirrines ;
 Than everie Lord and Ladie that was thair,
 2680 Scho welcumit. Syne to the hall they faire,
 Whair feiges royall was gudlie to behold
 For foure Kingis coverit with cloath of gold,
 Above thair heidis fiklyke thair was stent,
 Whilke to behold was pretious and potent.
 The hall was all arayit with the famyne,
 Thair was grit joy of menstrallie and gaming.

So quhen thay war all enterit in the hall,
 King Philipon said this befor them all,
 Lordingis, it is not unkend perdie,
 2690 How the knighthaid and magnanimitie
 Of King Clariodus, [the] most famous,
 And alse his Father, worthy and gratious,
 This kingrik now exaltit hes so hé,
 So that it standis imperiall of degrie,
 Nixt under France, of lawde, honour and fame,
 Whome fra nane mortall tribute may recleame,
 Out of [all] thraldome and subjeitioun ;
 And eik hes put our foes to affliction,
 Onlie be thame active and chevelrus,
 2700 And speciallie be King Clariodus,
 That hes beine hail protectour and defence.
 Into this regne, quhilk haid [grite] indigence
 Of help and comfort while he came in refuge,
 And uther regnes he maid unto us fuge.
 Now with rewairde I wald faine him requite,
 That might doe him baith [honour] and delyte ;

And gif that heir for to relave him list,
 I fall him geive the thing that I love best,
 That is my Doghter, heare of this regioun,
 2730 Thairto I gif my kingdom and my croun
 Heir unto him with hir in marriage,
 All unconstrainit, of my awin curage.
 For joy at onis the pepill all could cry,
 Thanking the King that said so worthily.
 Syne he said to Clariodus the King,
 Sir, if sa be that ge no promising
 Hes maid unto no uther Ladie cleire,
 I gif to zow my onlie Doghter deire.
 Meiklie him thankit King Clariodus
 2740 Of his grite gift that was so gratiouns,
 [Thus] saying, Sir, I dar zow weill affure,
 I zit promittit to na creatoure,
 Nor covenant maid, nor conditioun,
 To earthlie wight into na regioun.
 And Sir, if that zow pleise into this wayis,
 To gif zour Doghter, fair Meliades,
 In mariage to me, believe ge fall
 Glaidin me more, and better please at all,
 Nor me to gif ane hundreth realmis faire,
 2750 And all the riches eike under the aire.
 King Philipone on this most gudlie wayis,
 Delyverit thair this faire Meliades
 To King Clariodus; and he anone
 This fair Princes into his armes hes tone,
 Imbracing hir, and lowlie did inclyne.
 Unto the King: but quho could all defyne
 The joy that did enter into his heart!
 With that the King alswyth did him revert

Of Ingland to the Cardinall famous,
 2760 And gart him handfast thame, and be joyous
 To go togidir in Godis holy band.

When this wes done with feiftis triumphand,
 Quhilk wer ane proces owir lang on to dwell,
 King Philoppon convoyit them him fell,
 And maid hir Queine of all his regioun ;
 Syne in his handis two he tuik the croun,
 And on the heid of King Clariodus
 He hes it fet with countenance joyous,
 And maid him King of all his regioun faire,
 2770 Before the people all wer standing thaire.

Than did they to Clariodus of knighthaid well,
 Zeild thankis more nor I can think or tell,
 Reverencing him with all diligence.
 Bot he, before that gudlie audience,
 Said he wold not as git the honour have
 Of his kingrik, nor git the croun reffave
 So long as he on lyf wes it to bruike.
 Zit nevirtheles, thocht he it oft forfuike,
 King Philippon fik instance maid him till,
 2780 That he behuifit to obey his will.

Thus he of Ingland and Ireland both was King,
 To the [quhilk] git fuceeidis his offspring.

This beine donne, the dance anone begane,
 Grit joy and pleafoure was them amonge than.
 In chalmer they disport ane weill longe fpace,
 Whill that the supper almost redie was.
 The foure Kingis to supper all they went.
 King Philippon nobill and reverent,
 And King Clariodus fat at [the] tabill ;
 2790 Before themfate thir Kingis honorabill :

- King Amandur and King Palexis syne
 Sate before uther thair as ony lyne.
 The Cardinall of [richt] grite nobilnes
 Was set of Estur before the Countes,
 Next [to] the Counte at the tabillis ende ;
 The discreit Marchell thair estaitis kende.
 And at the uther end, I gow assure,
 Sat the Duike of Glofester, and the Earle Esture :
 And syne ever ilk Lord sate in his degrie.
 2800 They sowppit with triumph and mynstrallie.
 And efter supper quhen ischit was the hall,
 The Maisteris of Houshald them commandit all
 To go into thair Innis for that night
 Bot secreit Lordis. And than everis wight
 Devoydit beine that was not of Counsell.
 Than King, Queine, Lord, Knight and Damofell,
 To chalmeris went with mirrines and plesance.
 The Kingis foure with fade remembrance,
 Devyfit togidder be themselves allone
 2810 Anents the wadding how [that] all fould gone ;
 And certainlie within ane moneth day
 For to compleit the mariage ordanit thay ;
 And devyfit what Princes of honoure,
 What Duikis, and what Lordis of valoure,
 Thay wald have at the forsaide mariage.
 And quhen the King with uther Lordis sage
 Had long devyfit upon this mateire,
 Then went to beddis Knights and Ladies cleire.
 King Clariodus and his coufingis two
 2820 Tuke leave allweith, and could to chalmer go.
 This nobill Prince, full fresch and [full] lustie,
 Put on ane goune of velvete cramofie,

And to his Ladie Meliades is gone ;
 The quhilke up raife and kneillit hes anone.
 Then tuike he hir in armis tenderlie,
 And said into hir eare full quyetlie,
 This is ane strange warld that dois indure,
 When Ladies kneillis to thair serviture.
 Meliades than changit hew alyte,
 2830 Of fike language that had no use perfyte.
 And fyne he schew to hir the namis hail,
 That he wald have to be at the brydell ;
 And first the King he namit of Spaingze,
 And fyne the King of Galice namit he,
 And his sifter Madonat, of Spaingze Queine,
 And eik the King of Spaingzes sifter scheine,
 And Ladie Cadder that fould mariet be
 With King Palexis, as ellis hard have ge.
 He spake of this and diverse thingis mo,
 2840 Syne tuike his leave ; bot git or he wald [go,]
 To hir ane gudlie diamond he gave,
 And of the Ladies rewairdit he the leave.
 When this was donne, he to his chalmer went,
 Syne for the Count his Father hes he fent,
 And with his counfall delyverit he hes anone
 In foure realmis foure heralds for to gone,
 And everie ane directit ane syndrie way,
 Thir said Princes and Ladies for to pray ;
 And gart expensis delyver them anone ;
 2850 And thay belyve hes taine thair leave to gone.
 King Philipone gart make ane royall croune
 Of gold and stainis, richt pretious of fasslioun,
 To this young Prince, with uther riche aray,
 Of quhilk the maner war lang for to say.

The King Clariodus gart grath also
 For himself richlie; so did his Coufings two;
 And ever ilk Lord, Ladie, and Damofell,
 Hes for them ordanit royall apparrell.
 Thus them I leive in mirth, joy, and bliffe;
 2860 So of this Tail the Fourt Buik endit is.

THE FYFT BUIK
CLARIODUS.

THE PROLOGUE OF THE FYFT BUIK.

IN Mayis feafoune [that is] foft and fweyt,
When balmie liquore dois on leavis gleit,
And bewis brekes and blomis upon breid,
And pleafantlie inamillit beine the meid
All ower depaintit with collouris new,
.....

HAVING paffit the fea and cum to land,
I meane the foure heralds out of England ;
Firft two of them arryvit into France,
And to the King with humbill reverence
Thay fchew thair credence and commiffioun.
He them delyverit with bening fermoune ;
And fyne anone fent for the Conftabill,
Saying to him thir wordis honorabill,

- We have gude tydings of Sir Clariodus,
 10 Of two realmes now is he King famous ;
 And heir anone he hes ane meffage fend,
 Befeikand me to gif zow leave to wende
 In Inglan d cuntrie agains his wadding day,
 The quhilke I grant zow, fchortlie for to fay.
 Hade he my felfe defyrit for to be,
 I wald not have denyit it perdie.
 Ze fall take threttie knightis of renoune,
 Whilke nobilleft beine of all my regioun,
 To go with zow to doe to him honoure,
 20 Quhilk is of knightheid verie well and floure.
 The Constabill thankit him humbillie,
 And to the heralds did promit trowly
 Againe the day unto the tryft to wend.
 The nobill King bade oft him recommend
 To him, and to his Queine Meliades.
 And quhen thay war delyverit on this wayfe,
 He gart gif them ane thowfand pound of gold,
 And two riche garmonds gullie to behold.
 Thay thankit have this Prince of [hie] renoune,
 30 Inclyning low upon thair kneis doune ;
 Syne tuike thair leave, and tuike them to the way.
 Into few dayis in Inglan d landit thay ;
 Whair thay aryvit, and fchew unto the King
 As ze have harde me fay in everie thing,
 And how thay ware rewairdit of this wayes ;
 The fame they fchew to Queine Meliades,
 And how the King and the Lord Constabill,
 Did them commend in wayis honorabill
 Unto the King and unto hir bewtie.
 40 And fcho was glaide of thair prosperitie.

Within awcht dayis efter thair cuming,
 The uther heraldis both come to the King,
 Whilk war delyverit on the same maneire.
 Then was the King richt glaidfume of his cheire.

King Philipone aucht barrouns hade ordande,
 The most active that was into Inland,
 To helpe the maisters of houshald to devyfe
 And rewle his Palice on most gudlie wayis,
 And to refave with gudlie countinace,
 50 All Lordis, Knights and Ladies of pleafance,
 And eik all frangeris [baith] most and least,
 That with thair prefence honour wald the feast.
 The Lordis awcht with all [thair] diligence,
 With grite triumph, laude and magnificence,
 Apperrellit hes the Palice royallie,
 And all the wallis coverit lustillie,
 With cloathes of gold, and stainis pretious,
 And riche arras with workis curious,
 With auld stories depaint and figurate ;
 60 How Troy be slaughter was depopulate,
 And how the toune was taine be false ingyne,
 And how the wallis ware broght unto ruine :
 Thair was the feige of Thebis toun also,
 How oder flew the Trojan brether two,
 King Polinices, and King Ethiocles :
 Thair was the deidis of strong Hercules,
 And all his strength and courage leonyne :
 And thair was Jafon with his cheire vulpeine :
 Thair was the Conqueife of nobill Alexander :
 70 Thair was of Cresseid the faikles slander :
 The schort perfewing of Diomedes :
 The fervent love of sorrowful Achilles :

- The craftie winning of the Goldin fleice :
 The revifching of Heline out of Greice :
 The dreame of Paris of the Goddis superne,
 The bewtie of thame how he did decerne,
 And how he gave the apill to Venus :
 Thair was the weiping of Sir Troylus,
 When Crefleid did depairt frome Troy toun :
 80 Thair wes the forcie Trojane campoun,
 Most worthie Hector in armes invincibill,
 Chaiceing the Greikis with feir right teribill,
 With naikit fword in hand of bluid all reid :
 Thair was of Sampfon the murthere, and the feid
 Betwix him and the fals Philiftiane :
 And thair wes Lucreis of hir awin hand flaine :
 And diverfe Knights full trew and nothing faint,
 Bot monie ane fals woman thair wes paint :
 Thair wes the plaint full pitious and mone
 90 Of Arfyte and his brother Palamon :
 The treuth of Dido and Penelope :
 Of Clytemnefra the great crweltie,
 Wha flew hir husband with ane knyfe in bed :
 Thair wes Piramus and Thisbe both forbled,
 For sorow of other lay flaine be the well :
 Thair wes King Orphius, that out of hell
 His wife did bring with harping [wondrous] fweit :
 Thair wes Saturnus baneift out of Creit,
 In fik desert by Jupiter his fone,
 100 For he him drink gave of the bittir cone :
 Thair wes the storeis of all the Nobillis nyne :
 The half I can not wryte, nor git defyne,
 Of Campiounis the craftie depicturis,
 Seiming full quick, and livelie of figouris.

All paithit wes the hall of marbill whyte.
 And cloth of gold surmonting of delyte
 Above the deice wes royallie upstent
 Of curious champis of rosis redolent ;
 The buird cloth of the famin was but dreid,
 110 The silver seimit birning as ane gleid,
 Of stiff depurit gold [all] birning bright,
 Of stonè and perle the bordour caist ane light.
 For the four Kings thair of estait withall
 In four places wer ordanit feidgis royall,
 With stonè and perle [all] richelie resplendent,
 Lyk to the radious starrie firmament.
 The cufchingis of deaureat splendure schone,
 Ane fairer sight into the world wes none ;
 And all the wallis wer full royallie
 120 Vestit with clothis of gold full richelie ;
 And all the chalmeris on the famine wayes
 Arrayit wer full gudlie to devyfe.
 The galleireis about the fresch gardingis
 Wer stentit all with rich apperrellingis.
 The Palice clofe wes fairlie paythit new
 With marbill stonis reid, [and] whyte and blew.
 It wer prolikis, and long of circumstancis
 To tell all hail the royall ordinancis,
 The fair apperrell and lustie fresch array
 130 That thair wes maid for the triumphand day.
 The gret Constabill of France full mightie
 Ordanit his Knights all, and maid readie
 To passe in England to the mariage.
 And quhen the tyme was cumit of his passage,
 He tuike his leave full lowlie at the King,
 Whilk to him said, Sir Constabill, fair Couling,

Commend us to the King Clariodus,
 And bid him keipe the height he maid to us ;
 Quhilk was to be [richt] glaid and have curage
 140 On the day of Meliades mariage,
 And we fall keipe all the avowis perdie
 Maid at the supper as weill knowis he ;
 And bid him spair ws not, bot charge us ay,
 For we ar his in all that we do may.
 The Constabill said all fould be donne anone ;
 He tuik his leave, and to the Queine is gone,
 Quhilk bad hir recommend in humbill wayis
 Both to the King and to Meliades.
 He tuike his leave, and to his horse ascendit,
 150 With all his Knightis that on him dependit ;
 Lordis in France anc grite pairt of the way
 Convoyit him, and fyne thair leave tuike thay.
 The Lord Constabill, and all his lustie forte,
 Ar cumit to Calice and lichtit at the porte.
 And thair thay went to schippis all belyve,
 And into Dovar founc thay did aryve ;
 And thair on horse thay mountit but abaid,
 And to the toune of Londoune furth thay raid,
 Whaire diverse Lords and marchands of renoune
 160 With grite triumph him met without the toune.
 And thair thay feastit him full royallie,
 And him convoyit fyne full honorabillie
 Two myllis on gaitward, fyne thair leave hes tone.
 To Bellvilladoun come this Lord anone.
 When King Clariodus hard of his cuming,
 He lape on horse but ony tarying
 Him for to meit, and bad his two Coufings,
 Of Garnat and of Castalge the Kings,

- Remaine in Palice with King Philippon ;
 170 And he to meit the Constabill anone
 Furth passit with ane nobill companie ;
 And swa without the portis royallie
 This Lord he met, and fyne did him imbrace,
 And him refavit with richt merie face ;
 He helfit all his companie also ;
 And fyne blythlie unto the toun they go.
 He bad the Constabill ryd richt by his fyd,
 Bot he refusit equall with him to ryde ;
 ¶ It nevertheles he streingit him thairto,
 180 And his command behuifit him to doe.
 Syne speirit he richt heartillie of the King,
 And of his Princes lustie and beninge.
 He said, they heartilie greating to him send,
 And bad that he sould oft them recommend
 To him and to the Queen Meliades ;
 And eik he said to him upon this wayis,
 The King prayit to keip weill your promit,
 And on no ways ge to forgettine it.
 And what he meint weill understude the King,
 190 And said he sould fulfill it in all thing ;
 Thairwith he lewch, so did [the] Lord Constabill.
 And so thay raid with heartis amiabill,
 Whill thay to Palice come, and thair they licht,
 And up the gries passit they on height ;
 Syne enterit in the hall, and that anone,
 Whair that the wallis [all] full brightlie schone ;
 Whilk the Lord Constabill commendit grittumlie,
 And so did all the nobill companie.
 Syne thay have past to Philippon the King,
 200 To quhome the Constabill maid fair halving ;

Then he him thair in armis did refave,
 And fairlie fyne did welcum all the leave.
 Syne this Lord helfit hes the Kingis two,
 Palexis and King Amandour alfo ;
 And thay refavit him on faire maneir,
 And all his folkis, both knight and bachileir ;
 And then they spake of thingis to and fro.
 And to the Queinis chalmer fyne they go,
 And thair thay halfit both the Queinis fair ;
 210 And thay him quyte with wordis debonare,
 And kiffit him with countinance demure,
 Syne speirit for the King, and how he fure ;
 And alfo of his lustie Princes eike,
 And how scho fure, and all hir Ladies meike.
 He said thay both war in prosperitie,
 And did commend him unto thair bewtie.

Meliades then said unto the Queine,
 Madam, if ze of remembrance beine,
 Full oft or now I have [unto] zow told
 220 Both unto King and Queine how I was hold,
 And to the Constabill heire, my faire Coufing,
 To quhom I am addettit in grite thing.
 The Lord Constabill then said in this wayis,
 Madame, ze say that bot of zour gentrice,
 And of zour fweit affurit womanheid,
 And nether for my service nor gude deid ;
 Bot traift, Madame, efter my pure power,
 I fall be to zow ane fervant finguler.
 When this said was, the Lord [then] went anone,
 230 And kiffit all the Ladies on be one.

As they abaid amongs the Ladies bright,
 Out of the hall alfweith thair come ane knight,

And to the King Clariodus he said,
 The nobill King from tabill him abaid ;
 Thair Kingis, Queinis, Lordis, fair Ladies,
 Com to the hall, all went on luffie wayis.
 Full reverentlie the King Clariodus
 Unto King Philipon [then] ſpeikis thus,
 Sir, gif it pleasis gow, my Brother heire,
 240 The Lord Conſtabill and I will go in feire,
 And dyne into my chalmer quyetlie.
 Thairof, ſaid he, full weill content am I.
 And then anone the King Clariodus
 The Conſtabill hes led furth joyous,
 With diverſe Knightis of his companie.
 King Philipon to tabill royallie
 Was ſet betwix the [gude] King Palexis
 And King Amandur that [richt] worthie was ;
 And at the end eike of this royall tabill
 250 Was ſet the Earle Eſtur honorabill
 Before ane famous Duike of that cuntrie ;
 Syne everilk Lord and Duike in their degrie
 Was ſet, and ſervit wonder nobillie
 With pleaſand meits and wyne aboundantlie.
 The King Clariodus greate feiſting maid
 To the French Lord that he in chalmer hade,
 And to his Knightis freſche and weil beſeine.
 Great mirth and feiſting maid baith King and Queine.
 The menſtrells plays with ane melodious ſoune
 260 Before thir Princes of ſo great renowne.
 When thay had ſittine long on this maneire,
 Kingis, Princis, Lordis, and Ladies cleire,
 From burdes thay did up ryſe, and ſaid the grace.
 Clariodus the King, with great ſolace,

And the Lord Constabill ar cumit to hall
 With ane cumpanie of Knights full royall.
 King Amandur and King Palexis
 Unto the Queinis chalmer can them dresse,
 Thir [said] Princes to bring unto the hall,
 270 Quhair thay in chalmer, and thair Ladies all,
 Dynis, as then of England was the gyfe.
 Thay war arayit on ane gudlie wayis.
 Meliades, this lustie [fair] young Queine,
 As ony Goddes fresch was for to feine,
 Into ane corfit of claith of gold all quhyte,
 Whilk was of fasslioun wonderlie perfyte ;
 Rich talbart fleves, [that war] long, large and wyde,
 Upon the eard behind hir trailling fyde,
 As it was the gyfe of England tho ;
 280 For in thaife tymis ladyis cled war fo.
 Upon hir heade ane rosie chapilet
 Within ane roseire all in bright gold fet,
 The roseis reid war all of cullour bricht,
 And carbunkle stonis casting plesant licht.
 Upon the roseire lustie to be feine,
 Insteid of leives hang emeroldis greine,
 Full freschlie powderit all with leavis quhyt,
 Whilk to behald ane hevin was of delyte.
 About hir snow quhyte throte, as blossome cleire,
 290 Of curious warkis hang ane fair colleire.
 King Amandur to hall did hir convoy,
 As scho hade beine this worldis gem and joy ;
 And King Palexis led hir mother the Queine ;
 Thair followed hir monie Ladie scheine.
 And at the entrie of Queine Meliades,
 They hir beheld upon ane gudlie wayes ;

For certainlie it seemit to thair eye,
 That day by day increffit hir bewtie.
 The King said to the Constabill of France,
 300 Go ze, fair Coufing, and begine the dance,
 And take into your hand Meliades.
 And his command he did on humbill wayis.
 He gart the King Clariodus also
 With the fair Duches of Yorke in danse to go.
 Full lustie Knights of Inghland and of France
 Anone enterit freschlie in the danse.
 Both King and Queine are in thair seiges set,
 With stone and pearle mightilie owerfret.
 Of instruments up raise the mightie soun.
 310 Thair danfit monie Ladie of renoune ;
 And uther Ladies, that list not for to danse,
 Sate with bening and gudlie countinace
 About the Queine, beholding on the feist.
 Thus war thay all in joy, both most and leist.
 In midis of thair mirthful melodie,
 Doune at the Palice get all royallie,
 Thair lichtit Kings and Lordis of honour,
 And lustie Ladies alse fresche as Mayis floure ;
 With plesant Court [all] fresche and weill beseine,
 320 The mightie King of Spaing and the Queine :
 And alse thair enterit in the Palice tho,
 The King of Galice and his Queine also,
 With fair Cadar, that lustie Ladie zeing,
 With Donas sifter to the Spanisch King,
 With Duikis, Earlis, Lordis and [eik] Knights,
 And monie uther fresch and lustie wights :
 And suddanlie thay ar all cumin thus,
 In witting of the King Clariodus.

And when he wist, he [did] discend anone
 330 Unto the clofe with Lordis monie one,
 And them refavit [thair] full reverentlie ;
 Syne led them to the hall honorable.
 King Philipon, and eike the nobill Queine,
 And fair Meliades of bewtie fcheine,
 Thir Princes met in middis of the hall,
 And them refavit with triumph royall.
 Bot thair men nicht [have] learnit courtife,
 To fie thir mightie Princes nobillie
 Reflect to uther, and reverentlie inclyne ;
 340 And eike Ladies with havings femenine
 To utheris kneillit with fweit debonar cheir,
 With leuke bening and womanlie effeire.
 Fresch Mandonat, [that was] of Spaingie Queine,
 Hir Father of Eftur had grite pleafoure to feine ;
 Eik of hir Mother fchoe was thair joyous,
 And of hir Brother King Clariodus ;
 Thay war fo glaid of uther everie one,
 That long thay could not out of armis gone.
 The Princes all war led to hall and fet on deice,
 350 And Lordis to the dance newlie did preife,
 And minftrellis to play againe begane ;
 Amongis them was joy and mirthis thane.
 And quhen thus perlavit hes Clariodus
 Sik number of folkis worthie and famous,
 The wyfe Lord Conftabill prayit he to take
 On him fike office for his Ladies faike,
 To have the rewle as [the] moft principall,
 Abone the Lordis awcht in fpeciall
 The maifters of houfhold, to command and correct
 360 [That thay provifion make with due respect]

Belonging to the feist in everie thing.
 And glaidlie he hes grantit to the King,
 As he that was of sik doings expert,
 For him fuirlie thay nicht no tyme estart,
 Bot he [ay] redie was in all maneir
 To make the companie merrie feist and cheire,
 Of Garnat, Galice, France and Spaingie,
 Ingland, Irland, Esture and Castelgie ;
 For he thir Lordis hade all on his toung,
 370 All knowis he quahatever be said or sounng
 Amongs them all ; and eike he knowis perfyte,
 What may them greive, or quhat may them delyte :
 The Constabill of France all this he can,
 At fike ane tyme he was ane neidfull man.

When thay had long disportit on this wayis,
 Whilk for to seine it was ane parradice,
 Then Kingis, Queinis, Princis and monie Lordis,
 Earlis, Knightis, Ladies and all accordis,
 To chalmeris went, at ease them to atray,
 380 And put on them ane lustie new aray ;
 And thay at leafour changit thair cleathing,
 The quhyte lillie and tender flouris greine.
 Meliades the ding and lustie Queine,
 The fresch and new spred rose of bewtie scheine,
 Abuilgeit hir full fair and lustillie
 Into ane goune of fatine cramosie,
 With orient pearles pouderat and owerfret,
 Whilk war full thike and grit thairupon set,
 Schyning upon the cramosie so bright,
 390 Of quhyte and reid full lustie was the sight,
 Whairof full weill might likinit beine the hew
 Unto the hevinlie rose with liquor new,

Pouderit in morrow with cristall dropis lyke,
 The reid in equal junxit with the quhyte ;
 And as the bloffum honours the bloffum in May,
 So did hir bewtie in hir [fresch] aray.
 Hir cleire cullour of angel lyke clemence
 Full far furmuntit into excellence
 All hir attyre and riche abuilgement :
 400 And most of all hir vertew redolent
 Full cleire I wis abone hir bewtie schone ;
 For in this warld git creatoure was none
 That ever persavit in hir crueltie,
 For scho fulfillit was of womanlie pitie,
 Whilk full was of assurit patience,
 Approvit be right grit experience ;
 Ay humbill, symple, and schamfull under dreid
 Was this illustar floure of womanheid.
 Be this the maisteris of houfhold in cum wer,
 410 And wairnit them to cum to the supper.
 Kingis and Princes then went to the hall,
 Queinis and Ladies [fair] went with them all.
 Betwix twa Duikis, fresch at all devyse,
 Unto the hall led was Meliades ;
 God wit if scho was lustie for to fie,
 So entering them among in that degrie,
 Hir following in weidis freschlie dicht,
 Duchesses, Countesses, and plesant Ladies bright.
 Fyve mightie Kingis was set at the tabill,
 420 With them thair Queinis fresch and honorabill ;
 Bot King Clariodus wald fit no way
 From the Lord Constabill, for togidder thay
 Held companie without diffaverance.
 This Constabill, full wyse of governance,

- Ordanit the hall fo weill in everie thing,
 Alse weill in cheire as in thair marchelling,
 That he commendit was of everie wight.
 Fair was the hall and the supper that nicht.
 The King Palexis, and King Amandur,
 430 Oft sent to Donas and to faire Cadar
 Them praying to be glaid and make gude cheire.
 When they hade feistit long on this maneire,
 Foure maisters of houfhald, that war honorabill,
 At the command of the Lord Constabill
 Servit them with the latter courfes thair,
 With towell and water that was cleir and faire.
 When thay had wafchin and [the] grace all said,
 From tabill then thay raille but more abaid.
 This being donne, the minstrells playit on height ;
 440 Syne to the hall come monie ane Ladie bright,
 That foupit had in chalmer royallie :
 Thus pair and pair thay present pleasantlie.
 The King Clariodus commandit thair
 The Lord Constabill to take his Sifter faire,
 The Queine of Spaingze, and leid hir in the danse ;
 The quhilke he did anone without neance :
 And he himself the Queine led of Galice :
 The King of Spaingze led Meliades :
 The King Palexis led Donas maist bening,
 450 Whilk Sifter was of Spaingze to the King :
 King Amandur led Cadar that was cleire,
 Whilk was the King of Galice dochter deire :
 Sir Gilgeam de la Forrest led the Duches,
 The quhilke ane Ladie fair and lustie was :
 Ane Countes led Sir Richard de Mayance :
 And utheris Lordis and Ladies of pleafance

Zeid in the danse, with countenance demure.
 The King of Galice and the Count Esture
 Not danfit, bot abaid in companie
 460 With Philipon that was King [maist] worthie.
 The uther Ladies, that list not for to dance,
 Sat with the Queine, to pryse and to advanse
 Them that best danfit of that lustie forte.
 And on this wayis glaidlie can them disport
 Ane weill long space. And quhen the dance was ceisit,
 Princes and Ladies to thair chalmers preisit.
 King Clariodus the Constabill hes taine,
 And to the King of Spainis chalmer is gane,
 And unto him he said, My Brother deire,
 470 I will my Sifter borrow at gow heire,
 The Ladie Donas ; thairto I gow exhorte,
 That we ane quhyle may commoun and disporte
 Into the chalmer with Meliades.
 The King him answeirit into lumbill wayis,
 Fair Brother, all beine gouris that beine myne.
 With this to uther ather can inclyne.
 He tuike fair Donas, that lustie was to feine,
 And garte the Constabill of France leid the Queine.
 And then thay went upon the famine wayis,
 480 Unto the Kingis chalmer of Galice,
 And tuike with him goung Cadder that was faire.
 Syne to the chalmer glaidlie can repaire
 Of Queine Meliades ; and in the way
 To Donas King Clariodus can fay,
 Madame, I have to your Brother the King,
 Anent gour mariage sent my wryting,
 Thairwith to be advyfit of that cace ;
 And I him thanke that in that mater hes

- Done all according unto my intent ;
 490 And veralie, if that ge wald consent,
 I wald ge waddit Amandur the King ;
 And fuithlie if I trowit that this thing
 Sould gow displeife, I wald it fchow no way ;
 Now quhat ge thinke of this to me ge fay.
 Scho faid, My fair Brother, [full] weill I know
 That ge no thing into this world me fchaw
 Bot it according war to my honour ;
 My Brotheris will and gouris at all houre
 I will obey. And this full foberlie
 500 Scho faid, and fmyllit fum deall quyetlie ;
 Quhilk he perfavit, and the caus [he] fpeirit
 Why that fcho lewch. And quhen fcho was requyrit
 The caufe to tell ; then faid fcho womanlie,
 Why that I lewch, if ge rememberit be
 When with my Brother ge war into Spaine,
 The trewth heirop I fall tell gow [all] plaine,
 When with gour Sifter weddit was the King,
 Betwix us two was quyet commoning,
 I fpake to gow belonging gour mariage,
 510 I lewgh quhen [that] I thocht on that language ;
 For then certes thair was no man on lyfe
 Whom to that I defyrit to be wyfe
 Bot unto gow, quhairof none fould me blame
 To have defyret the Knight of nobileft fame
 In all the world, thocht I fo fymple was ;
 For it perteinait to gour nobilnes
 To have ane ladie of mair luftiheid,
 As ge have now withoutin ony dreid.
 My faire Sifter, faid [King] Clariodus,
 520 I thanke gow of gour [love,] that gratious

Stude towards me into fike [ane] degrie ;
 For fuith it beine ane fair debait, said he,
 Of two fair Ladies upon fike ane wayes,
 Of gow Sifter and of Meliades.
 With gudlie wordis and plesant commoning
 Thir lustie Knightis and thir Ladies ging
 Enterit in the chalmer of this zoung Queine,
 Meliades the rose of bewtie scheine.
 Scho raise upon hir feit full courteslie,
 530 With all the Ladies of hir companie ;
 And doun scho set the Queine, hir Sifter faire,
 Upon ane coufchen of claith of gold preclaire
 Abone hir self, quhilk alwayis scho refusit ;
 Bot at that tyme scho nicht not be excusit.
 With fair treatie scho gart hir take that place,
 And scho fate doune betwix hir and Donas.
 The zoung Cadar scho gart them set before,
 That thay might at thair ease speike all the more.
 The King Clariodus and the Lord Constabill
 540 Commoned with uther Lordis amiabill,
 And them disportit with full grite folace.
 And monie ane lustie ladie fair of face
 Was in that blythfull chalmer of plesance,
 Ane with ane uther maid [thair] aquantance,
 Ladeis of France, Spainze, and Inglande,
 As thay had all beine nureist in ane lande.
 Ilke King disportit theme full plesandlie
 Amongs thaife ladies that war womanlie.
 The tyme thay schorte with heartis glaid and licht,
 550 Whill neir the houre was cumit of midnight ;
 And thay war loath git than for to diffever,
 Thir ladies tyre of uther could thay never.

Bot quhen the gudlie fresch Meliades
 Saw that thay wald depairt upon this wayis,
 Scho callit Romaryn, and gart hir gone
 Unto ane calfer, and gart hir fetch anone
 Ane crown of gold that massie was and wight,
 All fet with stonis radious and licht,
 And two riche hearts of gold all birning new,
 560 Circulate with roobies and sapheiris blew.
 Into hir hand scho tuike the crounall scheine,
 And said richt thus unto the Spainze Queine,
 My Sifter fair, in France was maid this croun,
 And for that it is maid of new faldoun
 Ze sall it have with zow in zour cuntrie ;
 The quhilk for to refave full laith was sche :
 Bot scho hes hir befoght in sik maneire,
 That scho hes taine the croun of gemis cleir,
 Reverencing hir Sifter grittumlie.
 570 The two heartis of gold that war lustie
 Scho gave to Donas and to Cadar faire ;
 And unto everie ladie that was thair
 Scho gave rewaird and that full largelie.
 Quhilke the Lord Constabill perfavit tentivelie,
 And ever ilk wight of hé and law degrie
 Grittumlie praisit hir liberalitie.
 Thir Princessis hes thane thair leavis taine,
 Them to convoy this Ladie wald have gaine :
 Bot thay wald not hir suffer in no way ;
 580 For it the use of England was perfay,
 Ladies the nicht before their mariage
 Sould dwell in chalmeris, of auld ufage,
 Whill thay went to the kirke to spoufit be ;
 So stude that Ladie in that ilk degrie.

Efter the leave the King Clariodus
 Baid with the Queine, for he was amorous.
 They fpake ane quhyle wordis plesand and faire ;
 And fyne he tuike ane diamond full cleire
 And gave to hir, and kiffit hir also ;
 590 And fyne him grathit efter the leave to go.
 The Queine of Spaing schew unto the King
 The gift that was so honorabill and ding,
 Unto hir gevin be Meliades.
 The King forfuith it [weill] can rufe and praife.
 Bot moir abaid ilk ane to beddis gois,
 Them with the nightis rest for to repose,
 Except worke men that war laborius,
 And bissie makand workis curious ;
 Sum for the cleithing into fresch aray
 600 Of Lords and Knights ; and sum for the turnay ;
 Sum [for] to build the listis tuike grite cure ;
 Sum bissie was for to forge new armour ;
 And sum to make the barras great and wyde.
 Thus everie man was bissie to provide
 For thingis longing to this nobill feist,
 Whill that the day up sprang into the eist ;
 And when that Phebus did all the world ouerschyne,
 Craftismen thair worke bissielie did fyne.
 When that the Duike of Miland hes hard taulde
 610 Of this wading, and quhan that it fould hauld,
 He sent thrie fommeris chargit richlie
 To King Clariodus that was worthie,
 Ane chargit was with cloth of gold full deir,
 Ane uther with silver chargit was most cleire,
 The third with filk the best in that cuntrie,
 For he was full of liberalitie ;

And to ane nobill man he hes them taught,
 The Knight Lumbarde, that in the listis faught
 With King Clariodus but variance,
 620 He callit is Sir Amé de Plafance.
 Sex fresch varlots he did delyver thaire,
 And four stout squyeris with him for to fair.
 The Duike of Miland bad that he sould wend
 Into Ingland, and thair him recommend
 To King Clariodus in forme reverent,
 And thaife thrie fommeris unto him present.
 This Knight he maid no longer residence,
 Bot hes him sped with so grite diligence
 That he hade all compleitit his voyage
 630 Againe the day of the ilk mariage.
 And as the King adressit him to ryse,
 The Knight Lombard upon ane gudlie wayis
 Is enterit in at the port of the toun,
 And at the Palice get is lichtit doune;
 Into the Court weill knowin was the Knight.
 And then allweith as [that] thay hade ane sight,
 Of him thay told to King Clariodus,
 Of his cuming whilk was full joyous,
 And said that he wald presence have anone.
 640 Then founne ane [fair] meffage is for him gone.
 Thay chargit him to cum unto the King,
 And said, that he was glaid of his cuming.
 His four squyeris this Knight hes with him taine,
 And bad the varlots with the horse remaine,
 And to the Kingis chalmer passit he,
 [And kneillit doun, quhen he the King did sie,]
 Upon his knie richt fair and reverentlie.
 The King Clariodus full tenderlie

Refavit him with full glaid countinace,
 650 And said, Welcum, Sir Amé de Plifance,
 What tidings have ze broght in this cuntrie?
 All guide unto your Hienes, Sir, said he,
 The Duke of Myland dois him recommend Unto your Hienes, quhilk with me hes send
 To you thrie fommeris chargit richlie
 With cloath of gold and silver richt mightie.
 How dois my Brother the Duike, sayis the King,
 I thocht full long to heir of him tyding.
 At my depairting, Sir, richt weill fuire he,
 660 I left him into gude prosperitie.
 The squyeris went againe to horse glaidlie,
 And loufit hes the summeris bissilie,
 And broght the clothis thair unto the King,
 The quhilk them praisit into mikill thing.
 Thay oppinit them on breade upon ane tabill,
 The quhilk to sic was fair and amiabill.
 The King gart deale them all but more proces,
 And distribute them glaidlie more and les.
 The Kingis, Princes, and Queinis of honoure,
 670 And uther Lordis and Knightis of valoure,
 Thus distribute thir cloathis in this wayis,
 All bot two peices to Meliades.
 Then enterit in the chalmer, the Constabill,
 Thanking the King on wayis honorabill
 Of the fair cloath of gold that he him send;
 And eike he said, that tyme it was to wend
 Unto the kirk. The King Clariodus
 Him vestit hes in cloathis full pretious,
 And put on him anone ane rob. royall.
 680 Be this the houshold was arrayit all,

To go to kirke into thair belt aray,
 Thay war ane lustie companie perfay.
 Meliades, this zoung and lustie Queine,
 Was in ane kirtill of cloath of gold befeine
 Of quhyte culloure, with curious champe of floure
 Pouderit with pearlis, as the bright dew pure ;
 With mantill of the famyne, rich and deire,
 With taill full long, quhilk buire ane Ladie cleire ;
 Ane broach of gold, with stonis casting licht,
 690 Togidder held hir glorious mantill bright.
 Ane royall crowne was set upon her heid,
 Owerfret with stonis mightie blew and reid ;
 And lustillie scho fat in feige royall,
 Of all bewtie as floure imperiall.

The King Clariodus of grite renoune,
 With thrie Kingis triumphand under crowne,
 Convoyit was to kirke full royallie.
 Thair was with him King Philipon worthie,
 The King Palexis and King Amandur,
 700 With monie ane Duke and Lord of [grit] honoure.
 Two mightie Kings of Spaingie and Galeice
 To kirke leidis the fresch Meliades.
 Thair followit hir thrie Ladies weil befeine,
 In fresch aray and full of bewtie scheine.
 Full monie ane Ladie [bricht] did hir convoy ;
 Thair was the Duches fair of Bellavoy ;
 Of Beline countrie thair was the Duches fair ;
 Of Glocester the Duches eik was thair ;
 With monie ane uther Duches and Countes,
 710 And feimlie Ladies of grite nobilnes ;
 The Ladie Cadder, and fair Donas also,
 Whilk honorabillie the Queinis nixt did go.

- And efter all thir Ladies fresch and scheine,
 Thair followit threttie Ladies weil befeine,
 All cled in cloath of silver of delyte,
 With perlit hatis schyning of cullour quhyte.
 Full monie silver trumpit and clarioun
 Befor them past with noyse throw the toun,
 With everic maner of uther minstrallie.
- 720 The rewis all war stintit right richlie
 With cloathes of gold, and arras wounder faire.
 The royaltie I cannot half declaire
 Was them among on this triumphall day,
 Thair jolitie, thair festing, and thair play.
 To kirke thay come. What is thair more to tell,
 For he onlie, that is of Knightheid well,
 Beine spoufit to the floure of womanheid,
 Before monie ane Prince of nobilheid,
 And monie lustie Ladie honorabill,
- 730 [That marchallit war by the Lord Constabill
 Efter the order of thair nobilnes.]
 Ane Archbischope anone them maryit hes ;
 Ane mese was fingin ryght solemnitlie,
 With found of organs, and with melodie.
 And quhen the service all [thair] endit wes,
 First can the King Clariodus him dres
 On gudlie wayis furth of the kirke to go.
 The King of Spainge, and of Galice also,
 Convoyit him with monie Duike and Lord.
- 740 And trewlie, as myne Authore can recorde,
 The King Palæxis, and King Amandur,
 Alfweith convoyit this Princes of honoure
 Unto the Palice etis of renoune,
 The minstrellis [playing] with ane myrrie found.

Thay enterit in the clofe that was right faire,
 Abone arrayit, as ze harde of aire.
 The gait and gries, arrayit to the hall,
 Was all of marbill quhyte, and coverit all
 With coftlie arras and curious workis feire ;
 750 Whilk thay afcendit have in fair maneire.

This royall fort unto the hall is gone,
 Qubair the hie tabill was raifit anone ;
 And on the deice on [the] moft gudlie wayis
 Was fet this luftie Queine Meliades ;
 Hir Mother the Queine fate on hir right hande,
 And nixt her fate the King of Spainze land,
 And fyne the Queine of Galice fair to fe,
 With Donas and Caddar baith full luftie,
 And fyne of Belum cuntrie the Duches ;
 760 And on hir uther hand [eik] fet thair was
 The King of Spainze, the Count of Eftur,
 The King of Galice gudlie of ftature,
 Of Brataleme the Duches of bewtie,
 The Duches of Bellavoy of Spaingie cuntrie.

When royallie the deice [all] fet was thus,
 Anone the nobill King Clariodus,
 King Philippon and [eik] King Amandure,
 The King Palexis and [the] Earle Eftur,
 The Lord Conftabill and uther Lordis feire,
 770 Unto the grite chalmer went all in feire,
 The Maifters of houfhold and Conftabill before ;
 They war all fet, but ony proces more.
 The King Clariodus forget hes nocht
 The Lumbard [Knicht ;] bot garrit him be broght,
 And fet him in ane honorabill place.
 The threttie Virginis, that war fair of face,

Into the hall war marchellit them allone.
 All uther Lordis and Ladies everilk one
 Discreitlie fet war efter thair degrie.

- 780 The trumpits blawis with ane noyse fullie,
 Whill all the Palice wallis did redound.
 Ower all the hall the courfis did abound ;
 Grite was the feist, and royall was the cheire,
 And pleasand was the mentrellis for to heire
 In hall amongs this royall companie ;
 With intermeisfis playit mirrilie,
 And small padgeounis that war delectabill,
 Amongs the pleasand courfis inestimabill :
 Whairfor the maner passis manis ingyne,
 790 To tell the meits also of syndrie kynd,
 Or git the wynis nobill and mightie,
 Quhair of the buirde was servit by and by.

- The Constabill said to Clariodus,
 Now fall it weill be knowin unto us,
 Be your having and be your countinace,
 If that ge keipe unto the King of France
 That ge promittit at your depairting,
 For now it is the day of hir spoufing ;
 Weill aught ge glaid and joyous for to be 800 For saike of hir the floure of all bewtie.
 Thus answeirit hes the King Clariodus ;
 How fould ane man be glaid of his spous
 Nor he fould of his foverane Ladie be ?
 Then lewch they both and maid ane mirrie glie.
 Then said anone to him King Philipon,
 Ha, [my] fair Sone, will ge be of them one
 Unto thair wyfis that becumis thrall ?
 Thairto no thing I counfall zow at all.

- Thus war thay all in joyous commoning.
 810 The Constabill, but longer tarying,
 Up raise and went to feist them in the hall.
 King Clariodus him callit thair withall,
 And privallie he roundit in his eare,
 And said, My Brother, ge beire this rubie cleire,
 And at my only instance and requeist,
 It present to the Ladie of the feist;
 And say, The Knight fulfillit of all joy,
 Devoyde of everilk sorrow and of noy,
 In ane remembrance hes it to hir fend,
 820 Unto hir bewtie doing him recommend.
 The Constabill the rubie tuike anone,
 And said, Glaidlie gour message I fall gone;
 Syne throw the Palice he passit joyoullie,
 Convoyit with Knights wounder royallie.
 To the hie deice [anone] but more abaid
 He past with countenance right blyth and glaid,
 And all the Ladies [thair] of fresch bewtie,
 He feistit hes, that joy was for to fie,
 With mirrie wordis and [richt] pleafante cheir;
 830 For he ane maister was and no scolleir
 Into like thing, as then it was weill feine;
 For he ane Lord of full grit nurture beine.
 When he had cheirit them ane weill long space,
 About the tabill he passit hes apaice,
 Whill he come to the Queine Meliades,
 And hir the rubie gave in secreit wayis,
 Saying, The Knight fulfillit of plesance,
 This ring zow sent in [ane] remembrance.
 Scho tuike the ring but ony persaving;
 840 For scho so steidfast was in hir having,

That naine perfave might be hir countinace
When that scho felt of paine or of plifance.

So happinit or the dinner was endit,
That Sir Porrus of Portugall affendit
Into the Palice, for oppine was everie porte,
Full wyde upfet, the trewth for to report ;
With him was knightis ten right honorabill,
And twentie fquyeris fresch and amiabill.
This Knight be fortoune and be thrawart fate

850 Into ane lyoun long was deformat,
Quhill King Clariodus, be his chevalrie,
Redeimit him be batell mightillie.
Soune to the Constabill this was tauld anone,
The quhilk foure fquyers hes gart for him gone.
And he anone hes cum to his prefence,
And helfit him with all dew reverence.
The Constabill faid, Welcum, Sir Porrus,
For he him knew both worthie and chevelrus.

He hes him reverencit, and faid anone,
860 My [gude] Lord, with your leave now I wald gone
To Queine Meliades with fresch effeire,
I have ane present [unto] hir to beire.
The Constabill faid, So mote I have joy,
I fall unto my Ladie gow convoy.
He hes him led to Queine Meliades,
Whom the Knight helfit hes upon this wayis,
Saying, The Lord, that power hes of all,
Conferve your Hienes and estait royall,
Togidder with your [moft] great excellence.

870 I comin am to thank your hie clemence
Of the moft bliffull and happie delyverance
Of my proterve miffortune and mifchance

Be King Clariodus ; for none bot he
 Nixt God micht of my fate delyver me ;
 Whom to was no remeid, bot if the best
 Knight of this world, and eik the gentilest,
 Redemit me out of my paine and wo :
 Whairfor in [his] remembrance ever mo,
 That in this warld is of knightheid [the] floure,
 880 His airis fall be nureist with honoure
 Into this creddell of gold all forgit bright,
 Discending ay to his successioun right ;
 Thus, fall his regall stok and his offspring
 Have of thair nobill progenitours loving.
 With that he gart his armigers ostend
 The creddill of gold gudlie to commend,
 Of sik ane curious worke and quantitie
 Two men togidder might laide into it be.
 Then everie Prince and Princes at tabill
 890 Said that it was ane gift most honorabill,
 And said, thay had not seine so rich ane gift,
 Both of so grite ane quantitie and might.
 The Queine him thankit hes on fair maneir.
 The grite Lord Constabill sent for Bonvaleir,
 And him delyverit this jewell pretious,
 And bad him have it to hir thesaur hous.
 The Maisteris of houshold syne he did command
 This nobill Knight to feist with cheir pleifand.
 Thay him obeyit with countinance joyous ;
 900 Bot first unto the King Clariodus
 Thay him convoyit have full gentillie.
 He him refavit and thankit full tenderlie
 Of his present. And syne unto the hall
 Thay go with him, and maid him feist royall.

Thairefter at the portis can doune licht
 Sir Brounar de la Haunt, that gentill Knight,
 Of quhois schoulder the King Clariodus
 Drew furth the arrow that was venomus.
 He broght with him sex coursouris in gud plicht,
 910 And sex fair haiknayis as the snow [all] quhyte,
 And them presentit to Meliades.
 And he anone, upon the famine wayis,
 Declairit hes right [loud] before the tabill,
 How he of ane hurt [that was] uncurabill
 Lay in the tent remeidles day and night,
 Whill King Clariodus the gentill Knight
 [Had] him releivit furth of his distres ;
 And so furth schew the maner mair and les,
 How in this world [thair] was no medicine
 920 That na uther wight might worke be ingyne.
 Thay feiftit him with glaid and mirrie cheire.
 The Count of Estur and his Ladie cleire
 Grite joy [than] hade in heart of the honour
 That to thair sone was donne in that [ilk] houre.
 Efter all uther intermeifis feire,
 As of the latter course thay fervit wer,
 Twentie zoung children of fourtine zeiris age
 On tame lyounis quhalpis, I ingage,
 Full gudlie into purpur filk arrayit,
 930 Come in before them ryding unafrayit,
 Sadillit and brydillit and put to poynt at right ;
 And twentie virginis that war blyth and bright,
 Of the famyne age, on unicornis fair,
 With harnifchingis pleafant and preclaire,
 Abuilgeit freschlie in the famine hew,
 And all in hatis greine, and fair and new ;

And everie madine that was into that place
 Ane lustie varlot led in goldin lace,
 With speiris in thair handis everie one.
 940 And quhen thay war all enterit in, anone
 The madinis lichtit gudlie to behald ;
 The varlots tuike thair unicorns to hald ;
 And thay begouth to gang in carralling,
 And so with that so mirrillie thay sing,
 That everie wight thair beine had joy to heir,
 Thair voices was so angell lyke and cleire.
 And as the madinis song upon this wayes,
 The varlots justit and maid interpryse ;
 And he, that from his horse was strikine doune,
 950 Gave to his fellow ane ring for his ranfoun ;
 And he that ring gave to ane Ladie scheinie,
 And scho againe gave him hir hat of greine,
 And did full womanlie to him inclyne.
 [This done] betwix hir and hir fellow, syne
 Scho tuike him in the ring with grit plesance ;
 Syne lustillie begouth thay all to dance.
 And this was donne, that everie wight might sie ;
 For all the close of [full] large quantitie
 That day was ordanit to the triumphall hall,
 960 With cloathes of gold it was coverit all ;
 And Lordis in the chalmeris round about
 At fenisteris and windowis luikit out.
 All saw playit this royall intermeis,
 The quhilke surmuntit into lustines
 So far, that thay hade wonder it to se,
 Saying, forfuith that thay in no cuntrie
 Hade seine siklyke into no tyme before.
 And quhen those madinis of bewtie so decore

Had lang disportit [thus] and playit glaide,
 970 The varlots hes the unicornis to them hade,
 And set them on thair sadillis lustillie,
 Syne on thair lyounis lape delyverlie,
 And of the hall thay past without tarie,
 And Queine Proserpina with hir Court of Fari.

The aucht Maisteris of houshald ordanit hes
 To draw the buirdis and to say the grace.
 At the hie deice upraifit was the tabill.
 Kingis and Princessis that war honorabill
 Dispoilgeit them of thair robis fair,
 980 And them delyverit unto heralds thair
 Of monie diverse realmis of grit honouris
 Into thair mightie Princes coat armouris,
 Quhilk gyftis gat to make them rich for ever.
 Ane fairer fight senfyne [thair] seine was never,
 Of Kingis, Queinis, Princes honorabill,
 Duikis, Lordis, and Ladies amiabill
 Within ane Palice nor was it in, I wife,
 Whair thair was nothing wanting of warlds blife.

All minstrellis then with instruments are gone,
 990 Both lute, harp, viole, clarcheo, and guthrone,
 To play into the grite triumphall hall,
 Whair monie ane Prince in thair estait royall
 Abaid, with monie ane [lustie] Princes faire,
 And monie ane Ladie blyth and debonare.
 Then said Clariodus the nobill King
 To the Constabill his Brother, I defyre the thing,
 That ge first go to leid into the dance
 My Lady my spous, for that war my pleafance ;
 Quhilk for to do he did refuse at all,
 1000 Considering thair was Princes in the hall

- Hir for to leid quhom [it] did more perteine :
 Bot git this Prince he will that fo fould beine,
 For unto him he will doe that honoure,
 For he in France was Lord of grite valoure ;
 Whairfor the King, of grite confiderance,
 Both for the faike of the nobill King of France,
 And for his awin great wit and nobilnes,
 He did grit honour unto him dreidles.
 Then the Lord Constabill into gudlie wayis
 1010 The dance begane with Queine Meliades ;
 The mightie King of Spain led Cadder scheine,
 And the Duike of Bellavoy led the Queine
 Of Spaingie cuntrie ; ane uther Duike alfo
 With the Duches of Bellavoy in the dance can go ;
 Ane Duches [eik] led Amandur the King,
 And King Palexis led Donas the zeing ;
 Ane lustie Earle of Ingland regioun
 Of Yorke did leid the Duchess of renoune ;
 And eik the King Clariodus worthie
 1020 Of Spaingie cuntrie led ane fair Ladie.
 Thair dancit monie ane uther lord and knight
 With monie ane ladie and fresch virgine bright.
 Forget was not Sir Amé de Valeir,
 Nor git the nobill Sir Charles de le Scareir.
 Sir Gilliam de la Forrest thair did go,
 Sir Richard de Maianis danfit thair alfo.
 For to be mirrie thay neidit no requeist,
 For none war glaider nor thay war of the feist.
 Full long it war thair namis to declair,
 1030 Or git to specifie thair danfing thair.
 The Queine of Ingland fat at the hie dice,
 With diverse ladies, both Duches and Countes,

Beholding on the danfing with fixit eie.
 Grite was the joy, triumphe, and royaltie ;
 Grite was the mirth, the pleafance, and the fporte,
 That was, God wote, among that luftie forte.
 Full monie ane Knight with Cupidis awfull deart
 Amongs thame thair was woundit to the heart,
 Whilk efterwart of langour did complaine,
 1040 Excellent bewtie fo did them conftreine
 Thair for to love all magrie thair intent.
 Full monie ane fecrete luike among them went.
 With full defyre thair hearts war fet on fyre,
 Throw lovis thrift, heateft of defyre.
 Thair the Lord Conftabill hurt was with ane fight,
 Sum thing that day he wift of lovis might
 Onlie throw bewtie of ane ladie fcheine,
 And at ane fight his heart all holdin beine
 To ane anone, as can my Authore tell ;
 1050 Upon fik thing as now I may not dwell.
 I will gow tell of ane [grit] aventure
 By Ladie Fortunis purvenance and cure,
 Into the Court the quhilk betyde anone,
 Quhilk ze fall heir, or that I farther gone ;
 And efter that returne againe I will,
 And of the feift the leave will tell gow till.
 So happinit in the meane quhyle to be,
 Ane Herald come [thair] from Polyne cuntrie,
 Whilk callit was to name Bonadventur,
 1060 Whom King Clariodus with biffie cure
 Had fent with credence to Polyne to the King,
 Him heighting in his weiris fum supporting
 Againis the Duike of Gravan, quhom betweine
 Full grit debait [thair] had [ane] long tyme beine :

Bot thay agriet war or his cuming ;
Thus he returnit hame unto the King.

- When it was told to King Clariodus
Of his Herald, that [he] was cumit thus,
Unto his chalmer he went the neirest way,
1070 And for the Herald sent without delay.
The Herald salust him upon his knie,
Saying to him, the eternall God zow fie ;
The King of Polyne him to zow commendis,
And to zour Hienes heartlie greating fendis,
Zow thanking offer nor I can heir reporte,
Of zour promit him to at neid fuporte.
He and the Duik of Gravan ar at ane,
Betwix them two the weiris ar all gaine :
Bot as I come out throw the realme of France,
1080 I saw the King make royall ordinance
For tornament, for joy, for feist, for play
At Pareis toun againe zour mariage day ;
To quhilk was dresfit monie ane Lord and Knight,
And monie ane lustie Ladie blyth and bright,
In companies thik ryding throw the fieldis,
With bairdit steidis, harneis, speir and scheildis ;
And in the honour of zour grit renoune,
He makis all that great provisioun.
And eik the Queine with all hir Ladies bright
1090 Zour wadding schupe to worschip at thair might
With royall feisting, danfing and disport.
And scho avowit befor that lustie forte
Unto the Powne that set was on the tabill,
This King is fuithfast and undouttabill.
And ane thing, Sir, I fall zow tell for treuth,
I saw ane sight quhairof I hade grite rewth,

- Bot heir without the toun ane litill way.
 Fyftine Knightis enarmit war perfay,
 Quhilk reveift fyvetine Virginis had unright,
 1100 Thinking with thame to ly [on] this ilk night,
 And of thair virginities them to deflore.
 Full fast the Madinis mercie did implore ;
 Bot thay with cruell heartis but pitie
 Demanis thame, that pitie is to fie.
 Then askit King Clariodus, if thay
 War passit far. He answeirit and said, Nay,
 I ges them git bot at the Woll, said he,
 Without the toun that standis by the trie,
 Whair Ladies usis in thair disport to go,
 1110 It callit is the Ladies Woll also.
 On Bonvaleur than callit he anone,
 And bad him swiftlie for his harnes gone,
 And sadell him ane courfour that was wight,
 And bad the Herald go at all his might,
 Unto the postrum suddanlie him bring,
 And thair for to abyde on his cuming.
 With speir in hand [that was] both long and wight,
 Bonvaleur sounne enarmit him [at] right,
 And he anone unto the postrum went,
 1120 And on his horse ascendit or he flint.
 Upon his heid he did his helme on lace,
 And them commandit both into that place
 That they discover him in no maner :
 Syne chargit he his varlot Bonvaleur,
 Alleane into his chalmer to sojorne
 All quyettie againe quhill he returne ;
 And if his brother the Constabill speire
 Whair he was gaine, to tell on this maner,

That he was in ane secreit erant went,
 1130 And wald againe him speid incontinent.
 And than he tuike his mightie speir in hand,
 And swiftlie he did gallope ouer the land.
 Thir Squyeris both thay sat on kneis down,
 Prayand to him that wore the bludie croun
 Him to conserue from all misaventure,
 Thay him betaught in Godis blissit houre,
 And to the chalmer founne returnit thay.

Clariodus, in all the haift he may,
 Upon the Knightis followit hes so fast,
 1140 Whill that he hes ouertaine them at the last,
 Saying, O Knightis, ze abyde for shame!
 Doe not so grit dishonour to your name,
 As for to leid the Madinis on that wayis;
 The Ordour of Knightheid ye [do] dispyle,
 On fike ane wayis fair Ladies to offend;
 For ze thair quarrell rather fould defend,
 Nor them to trubill so on fik maneir.
 Sir Knight, thay said, grit folie to zow it wer,
 As now to schaipe our deidis to correct,

1150 For at this tyme ze may ws not object.
 I fall resist, quod he, if that I may.
 Thairwith the formest schupe him to allay.
 Thay set thair speiris saddir in the reist,
 And awfullie towart uther thay preist;
 And certanlie the King Clariodus
 He hit him fik ane strake dispiteous,
 That horse and man went both unto the ground,
 Whill that his helme did from the eard redound.

The second and the third down run hes he
 1160 So fellounlie, that naine was of thair thrie

- Bot ather his leg or arme he brist in two.
 And quhen the Madinis saw he provit fo,
 Right heartfullie to God they for him prayit.
 The twelf Knightis with heartis unaffrayit,
 Then fet on him with fwordis all at onis,
 Traifing to brist him, fell, blood and bonis.
 Quhen this perfavit King Clariodus,
 With fword in hand as lyoun furious,
 Full earnestlie he enterit them amang ;
 1170 With mortall fraikis he among them dang,
 That it was wounder him to behald and fie,
 For he begouth into his wraith to be ;
 Was none fo stalwart that his fraik gainestuide,
 For as ane tyger that beine fearse and wode,
 He on them ruschit than with awfull faire,
 With bloudie fword thame chafing heir and thair,
 Bristing thair steill helmis in his ire and teine,
 Straiking thair steidis from them on the greine,
 Carving thair lymbis and armis ay in funder,
 1180 So monie of them thair steidis lay in under.
 The Knightis war abaisit grittumlie,
 Of him that them tormentit so fellounlie ;
 Ane feind thay thocht him lyker nor ane man,
 For of his fighting ever mair he can.
 Thay fraik at him so thik and fast withall
 As dois the hammeris on the studie fall ;
 Thay woundit him upon the arme full fore,
 Whairthrow his courage increffit ay the more ;
 For quhen he saw his blood rin doune so reid
 1190 He grew in anger and in mortall feid,
 And on them ruschit with sik violence,
 With so grit furie and grit vehemence,

He huntit them with [fik] ane feirfull cheire,
 Right as the awfull hundis dois the deire,
 And skaillit them full wyde before his face,
 As the fearse lyoun dois small beiftis chafe ;
 Upon the greine he gave them tant for tant,
 Whill that thay grew fo weirie and fo faint,
 And put them fo far to confusioun,
 1200 That thay could not bot ly in thair ranfoune,
 As goldin men his dintis to refave,
 And could not take the straikis that he gave.
 And quhen thay faw [that] thair was no remeid,
 Bot them to geild, or ellis for to be deid,
 Thay said to him at onis pitioullie,
 Ha ! Flour of Knightheid, grant to ws mercie,
 And fave our lyfis, for thy mikill might,
 As thow that beine in earth the gentillest Knight.
 Then said the King, Gif ge will have mercie,
 1210 Go to the toun ge fall standing us by ;
 Unto the Kingis Palice ge fall fpeir,
 And thair ge fall enter but ony feir,
 Whair ge fall entrie have for small requeift,
 And geild gow to the Ladie of the feift ;
 Your priffoun fall be foft, I tak on me,
 If that ge be all taine with hir bewtie ;
 And eike ge fall promit, or that ge wende,
 In tyme cuming ge fall gour lyfes amend,
 And never againe doe Ladies fik unright,
 1220 Bot ay defend thair quarrell with gour might ;
 And eik the Madinis ge fall reftore
 Unto thair freindis quhair thay war before.
 Thay said anone, We fall do gour bidding
 Into all poynts, fave onlie this ane thing,

That is to say, to have thir Madins againe,
 Quhilk if we doe doubtles we salbe flaine.
 This weill confiderit King Clariodus.
 The damofellis that glaid war and joyous,
 On kneis fell to him full humbillie,
 1230 And wald his feit have kiffit tenderlie ;
 Bot he wald not them suffer to do so.
 So twentie Knightis fearslie come but ho,
 Upon thair steidis fwiftlie at the spuris,
 To feik the Knights that donne them sik injuris,
 And wald with fwordis have upon them beine ;
 Bot King Clariodus lape them betweine,
 And said, My friendis, no worfchip war zow to,
 Unto thir Knights more hermis [for] to doe ;
 Then thankit be God of his eternall grace,
 1240 Thir Madinis beine recoursit upon cace.
 And quhen they have [weill] understud that he
 Was onlie victour of so grit meinge,
 Thay war fore wonderit into mikill thing,
 And come to him [full] lowlie inclyning ;
 And him thay thankit thair with all thair might,
 As of the world the most nobillest Knight,
 And prayit him his name to them to kyth.
 And he anone hes answeirit them belyve,
 My name I never denyit, nor git fall,
 1250 Clariodus of Estur thay me call.
 And quhen thay wist it was Clariodus,
 Thay fell upon thair kneis, saying thus,
 O nobillest Knight of most excellent fame,
 Out throw the world springin is zour name ;
 Zour knightlie deidis and heigh chevalrie,
 In laude and honour rings unto the skie ;

We ar not grit amervellit of this deid,
 Sen that ge ar the flour of all knighthaid,
 Whom God haith fent our chyldren to perfew ;
 1260 We falbe faithfull servitours and trew
 To 3ow for all the dayis of our lyfe.
 The nobill King ane freindschip maid belyve
 Among the Knights ; and fyne did thame requyre
 That thay wald go with him to the suppeir.
 Thay have him reverencit full grittumlie,
 Syne to the Palice thay [all] raid glaidlie.
 The other Knightis maid varlots for to gone
 Unto the wode and litteris maid anone,
 Whairin thay have four woundit Knightis laid,
 1270 And fend them hame withoutin mair abaid
 With four varlotis in thair companie,
 Quhilk ludging tuik in the nixt toun thairby ;
 Syne at the King thay tuike thair leave and went,
 Thair promise to fulfill incontinent.
 And he hes ridin againe the privie way
 Unto the postrom, as ge hard me fay.
 I leive now of Clariodus ane quhyle,
 And fumthing now my pen I will exyle,
 Schortlie to speik of thir elevin Knights,
 1280 Quhilk to the Palice for to go them dichts.
 Thir Knightis at the Palice get lichtit down,
 And enterit at the portis of renoune,
 Ascendit fyne up the gries of the hall ;
 Thay that them saw did wounder ane and all.
 As diamonds in armour bright thay schone,
 And thay all woundit war and bluid begone.
 To hall thay went and passit throw the preis,
 And or thay flint thay come to the hie deice.

Anon the menstrells ceiffit for to play,
 1290 And Lordis left the dance for the afray ;
 For as them thocht it was ane uncouth thing,
 In bluidie harneis to fie thair incuming.
 In fylence was the hall of most and leift.
 Thay speirit quha was Ladie of the feift,
 And thay tham kennit to Meliades.
 Then all on knies thay sat on humbill wayis,
 And said, Madame, unto your blyth bewtie
 We geild us heir all prefoners to be,
 To do with ws ryght as gourselfin list ;
 1300 For of this world the nobillest Knight and best
 Ws all hes conquiest with his [awin] hand,
 And uther foure in poynt of death lyand.
 Syne quhen he had ws wone with grit mellie,
 From twentie Knightis of grit crueltie
 He ws recourfit againe richt nobillie,
 And ws conserved from thair fellonie.
 They callit him the Knight of joy compleit,
 Whois heart of everie plesour beine repleit.
 Then worde by worde they [all] the maner told
 1310 Of thair meiting, and of the bargane bold,
 And of his knightlie strenth and his vigoure,
 And how he maid the [hail] difcomfiture.
 When they had long his honour done proclame,
 Thay said, Madame, if ge wald wit his name,
 Clariodus of Estur thay him call.
 Then full of blife and glaidnes was the hall,
 And thay all cryit with ane cheir joyous,
 VIVE, VIVE, LE ROY CLARIODUS !
 And that with sik ane [michtie] noyse and found,
 1320 That to the rufe the chalmer did redound.

- Meliades that blyth was this to heire,
 Ȝit changit nather countenance nor cheir ;
 Bot with ane stedfast leuke debonarlie
 Scho all beheld the mirrie companie,
 And thankit God devotlie in hir mynde,
 That her rewairdit hade on fike ane kynd ;
 And [that it] pleasit had his gracious will,
 The flour of knightheid to geive hir untill :
 And Ȝit albeit scho hade in mariage
 1330 This nobill Knight of so hie vassalage,
 And understuid and right perfytlie knew
 That unto hir he steidfast was and trew ;
 Ȝit Cupid hes hir strikin with his dairte,
 And newlie woundit hir unto the heart
 Throw new reporte maid of him be thir Knights
 In presence of so monie gudlie wights.
 What is thair mair to say of this mater ;
 Both Kingis, Queinis, Lordis and Ladies cleire
 Full joyous war thir things for to heir tell
 1340 Of him that beine of knightheid flour and well,
 And most of all Earle Estur honorabill,
 And fair Countes that was demure and stabill.
 King Philipone them treitit nobillie,
 And gart the Constabill treit them royallie ;
 And fyne the gudlie Queine Meliades
 Releivit them on fair and gudlie wayis
 Of hir prisoune, and sweitlie did them treite,
 And gave them gyftis honorabill and great.
 Thay tuike thair leave anone full courteslie,
 1350 Reverencing thir Princis humbillie,
 And most of all Meliades the Queine,
 Dressing hir bewtie and hir vertew scheine.

Syne founne upon thair horſe aſcendit thay,
 And to thair fellows tuike the neireſt way,
 Quhilk thame abaid thair, bot [ȝit neir] at hand
 In ane village that callit was Garrand ;
 To quhom they ſhew the grit nobillitie
 Was to them donne, and the grit royaltie
 Of all this feaft ; and of rewairdis grite
 1360 Whilk was thame gevin thair they did repeit ;
 And how Clariodus, of knightheid floure,
 Of twa realmis was famous conquerour ;
 And thair thay did remaine whill hail and found
 War thair fellows of everie grevous wound ;
 Syne hame thay went unto thair awin cuntrie,
 And leivit ay in trewth and chevalrie.
 King Amandur and [alſe] King Palexis,
 And the Lord Conſtabill that worthie was,
 Aſcendit on thair horſe and that anone,
 1370 And with all biſſines can them diſpone
 To meit the King Clariodus in hy.
 The King of Spaine eik in thair company
 Wold have ridin ; bot Philipon the King
 Did him requyer with wordis right bening,
 Whill thair returning to make reſidence,
 The feiſt to honour with his digne preſence.
 And as thay went to horſe on this maneir,
 Thay met the Kingis varlot Bonvaleir,
 Whom to the Conſtabill ſaid, My frind, perdie
 1380 Ȝe have this thing conſeillit weill fra me,
 To ſchaw to me quhair that ȝour Maifter went.
 My Lord, ſaid he, it war not pertinent
 To me to ſchaw, bot quhat he chargis me,
 Quhilk to conſider diſcreit anewch ar ȝe.

Thairwith he lewch, and maid [full] grit gaming.
 Thir Lords to meit the King ar gone in fanning ;
 And founne thay faw him ryde a quyet way
 Unto the postrum get without delay.
 Then the Lord Constabill unto him raid,
 1390 And on this maner lawghand to him said,
 I am of gow diffavit out of dreid,
 For I belevit ge, sa God me speid,
 Had beine devyving sum strange abuilgement
 Into gour chalmer for the tornament,
 And ge in uther materis billie wer,
 As be the Knightis weill it did apeire,
 Whom into Court amongs ws ge [did] fend ;
 Thay maid gour occupation to us kend.
 The Kingis two, quhilk war his coufings neir,
 1400 Thay maid him mirrie companie and cheire.
 The Lord Constabill persavit weill that he
 Upon the arme was hurt at the mellie,
 And speirit at him if he was hurt ought faire ;
 And he said, Nay. With that thay enterit thair
 In at the gardine get of the postrum.
 To the chalmer of Clariodus thay come.
 Thay passit founne and him unarmit then ;
 And syne ane furrit mantill have thay taine,
 And laid it him about right softlie,
 1410 And on his bed syne maid him [for] to ly,
 And to refresch him efter his weirines.
 King Amandur and [alfe] King Palexis
 Commandit he to pase unto the hall,
 And glaid the feifters at thair power all,
 And gar them play and make withall disport,
 The quhilk to doe mirrillie thay them exhort.

To hall ar went thir Princes honorabill,
 And with him left no wight bot the Constabill,
 And chalmerlandis with him two or thrie.

1420 And quhen King Philipon can behold and fie
 Thir Princes two againe returnit thus,
 He wist that cum was King Clariodus ;
 At them he speirit the maner and the gyfe
 Of all the mellie and the interpryse,
 And gif that he was hurt he did require :
 And thay to him declairit the maneire ;
 That he was hurt thay wold not plainlie tell,
 For saik of hir that was of bewtie well,
 In cace thairof scho fould take displifance,

1430 Quhairfor thay maid ane mirrie countinace.
 Unto the King thay told all privilie,
 That he was hurt, bot git not hevilie ;
 Of quhilk Meliades tuik perfaving,
 And was affrayit into mikill thing ;
 Scho fwounit neir for inwart paine and wo.
 Dame Romaryn, that hir perfavit so,
 Unto hir come, and fate doune on hir knie,
 And quhat hir aillit softlie speirit sche.
 Scho said, I dreid my Lord Clariodus

1440 Be hurt, quhairof my heart is dolorus ;
 Ze fall unto him go but tarrying,
 And in ane taikine beir to him this ring,
 And cum againe and me the maner tell.
 Romaryn then no longer scho did dwell,
 Scho went to the chalmer of Clariodus,
 And on hir kneis softlie said scho thus,
 My Ladie, Sir, hes me unto gow fend,
 And unto gow dois heartlie hir commend,

- For fair scho dreidis that zo hurt [may] be ;
 1450 Quhairfor fo full of hevines is sche,
 That scho uneis may keipe hir countinace,
 So woundit is hir heart with disperance ;
 And this scho hes zow sent in tokening,
 Thairwith anone presenting him the ring.
 Romaryn in armis he did imbrace,
 And to hir said with glaidfum cheir and face,
 Ze fall my Ladie thanke richt heartfullie,
 And say unto hir verallie that I
 Do aill nothing bot that scho may amend,
 1460 The quhilk allweith fall unto hir be kend.
 On this ilk night scho falbe medicyne
 Unto my wounde, for scho is leich full fyne ;
 And in ane tokine gif hir this roobie bright,
 And say, scho weill confortit hes hir Knight.
 Romaryn lewch quhen scho hard him say fo,
 And undertuik for to remeid the wo
 Of hir Ladie, Meliades the Queine,
 That did of painis the hevines fusteine.
 Scho tuik hir leave, and to hir Ladie went,
 1470 And unto hir the tokin hes present,
 And said as he hir bad, but variance,
 In mikill thing quhilk lowfit hir pennance ;
 And hir rewairdit with the roobie cleire,
 That hir sik tydings broght in this maneir.
 The Constabill, [richt] wyfe and componabill,
 Raillit with mirrie wordis amiabill,
 And said unto the King Clariodus ;
 This day I saw ane Ladie dolorous,
 Quhois cullour changit fumthing for zour saike,
 1480 Get up, and be alse strong as onie aike ;

Be all in joy, and thinke not of no paine ;
 Ane fight of zow might make ane Ladie faïne.
 Then lewgh the King, and faid, My brother faire,
 Ladies in heart beine pitious ever maire.
 With that King Philipon, that was worthie,
 And eike the King of Spaine, com to vifie
 Him in his chalmer with ane freindlie cheire.
 The King of Galice on the same maneir
 Com him to vifie, and Earl Estur eike,
 1490 Him to comfort with thair wordis [fo] meike.
 Ane chirurgiane, that ware was and expert,
 Him tuike in hand to heill of everie finart
 In fyvetine dayis, that he might ryde and gang.
 He was ane grit maister chirurgiane.
 Thus raillit he with King Clariodus,
 Sir, unto zow it falbe nothing noyous,
 Gif on the night ze just alse weill as day.
 He smyllit then, and faid, Maister, perfoy
 The trewth ze tell ; bot I have esperance
 1500 Of my pairtie, to have ane soverance
 Mair in the night nor in the day had I :
 For I am goldin ellis right verallie
 Alreadie to my nichts pairtie traift perdie ;
 Whairfor I think scho will more gratious be.
 The cumpanie then lewgh, and maid gud sport,
 And to the hall they went agane at schort,
 All bot the Constabill and two chalmerlanis,
 Qubilk still abaid with the chirurgianis,
 Whill visit all and tentit was his wound,
 1510 And bundit up with sawis that war found.
 Of purpur velvete he put on ane goune,
 With mertrix furrit curious of fassioune.

He gave ane uther of the famyn forte
 To the Lord Constabill, doing him exhorte
 Thairin him for to cleith; and thay anone
 Both in ane suit into the hall is gone.
 He put the gown on him at his requeist;
 Syne hand in hand thir two went to the feist,
 Quhilk lovit uther ay full tenderlie.
 1520 Of Knightis followit them grit companie.
 Unto the hall thay went without delay,
 Whair all devyfit was this mirrie play.
 Thay halfit have the mightie Princes hie,
 And thay relavit war full joyousslie.
 Meliades raife off hir mightie feate,
 Upliftit freschlie with two Earlis great.
 And this [fair] Prince full humbillie did inclyne,
 And hir he did imbrace in armis fyne,
 And kissit hir and fet hir in hir chyre;
 1530 Then minstrells playit with ane mirrie fayre,
 And thair the dance thay have begune againe.
 Clariodus his Sister tuik in hande,
 The Constabill the Queine of Galeice toke;
 The goung Knightis for joy thair heartis quoke,
 And cheifit Ladies to go into the dance.
 Thus thay disportit with mirth and grit plifance;
 Full royallie the feast of joy began;
 Meliades scho danfit not as than.
 What fould I tell zow of thair grit delyte,
 1540 Quhilk to rehearse almaist war infinit.
 When redie was the supper, then anone
 This lustie forte ar to thair chalmeris gone,
 And changit thair arayis pleasantlie,
 And them abuilzeit new and lustillie

In licht clethings, all ordanit for the dance,
 That for to fie it was ane grit pleafance.
 Of thair robes royall difpuilget them the Kings,
 And on them put hes uther licht clethings.
 Then Ladies war arrayit full richlie.
 1550 They enterit all togidder right seamelie
 Into the chalmer of Meliades;
 And fcho, the flour of bewtie moft to prais,
 Was cled in kirtill of claith of gold moft deire,
 And of the famyn hir mantill fchynit cleir.
 The croun of gold fcho changit on hir heid,
 Whilk cast ane light of ftonis blew and reid.
 Hir madinis all war in the famyn gyfe,
 In glorious mantillis gudlie to pryfe,
 Save that thay wore of claith of filver fcheine.
 1560 When Lordis and Ladies thus arayit beine,
 And everie wight, that pleafour was to fe,
 The Maifteris of houfhald, grite of dignitie,
 Unto King Philipon thay com and faid,
 The fupper readie was and on him baid.
 Than he commandit the Frenfche Conftabill,
 And the wyfe Count of Eftur honorabill,
 Unto the hall to fech the gudlie fpous.
 Then followit Knightis gudlie and famous.
 To hall thay broght this goung and luftie Queine,
 1570 As the hie deice anone up raifit beine;
 And fcho was fet with honour triumphant,
 With mightie Kingis upon ather hand,
 And luftie Queinis frefch and amiabill.
 And fcho of bewtie flour incomparabill
 Surmuntit all the Ladies in the hall,
 As rubie hes renoun imperiall

- Of everie stone ; as right as Phebus bricht
 Beine Lord and Prince of all etheriall light,
 Blinding the starrie hevine with his bewtie,
 1580 Richt so hir bewtie, angel lyke to fe,
 And blyth aspectis glaidis all the tabill,
 As parradyce of joy inestimabill.
 The King Clariodus and his companie
 Unto thair chalmer passit joyoullie,
 And sowpit thair with royall feist and cheir.
 The sound of trumpits mirrie was to heir,
 The coursis come of number inestimabill,
 With instrumentis glaid and delectabill ;
 The wynis ran, that wight war of meafouris,
 1590 From horribill monsturis and fearfull of figouris ;
 And other liquoris mightie and pretious
 Of dyverse wynis mightie and mervellous
 Ran out of virginis papis quhyte as snow :
 All kynd of fleuris in the hall thay flow :
 By incantatioun of grit practitioneris,
 By astrologis and art magicianis,
 Grite fortologis with thair enchantments
 Of thair artis gave fik experiments,
 That thay appeirit lyvelie and visibill :
 1600 Strong furious lyonis and dragonis horribill,
 Gaiping as thay the peipill wald devoure :
 Thair was hunting of all gritest plefoure,
 The hardie hundis of full grit quantitie
 Chaling the heartis with thair heidis hie :
 Richt pleasant war the coursis of birds above,
 Etheriall foullis in air might mak na rove
 For lustie falkonis that was gentill of kynd :
 All joy was, that man might have in mynd

- Everilk plefour that might revert in spreit :
- 1610 Fresch nightingells thair song with notis sweit,
 With blythfull birdis in the blomit spray,
 Befor dame Natur in hir fresch array.
 I can not tell zow in ane houris space
 The grite excelling pleafoure in that place,
 Nor of the joyous feisting infinit,
 Nor of the instruments of grit delyte,
 With dulce musicianis of princis chappellis feir,
 Quhilk song with curious craft and [wondir] cleire.
 It war ouer long heir for to declaire.
- 1620 The intermeifis that war playit thair
 Amongs the courfis most delitious,
 Quhilk war of proces superstitious.
 The heralds and minstrellis that thair wes,
 Thay all full loudlie did thair cry Lairges
 Of the most royall Prince Clariodus,
 That gave them gyfts mightie and pretious.
 The fupper long induirit on this wayis ;
 [Clariodus then joyouslie upraife,]
 And Maisters of houshold gart raife the tabill hic.
- 1630 The grace was faid with grit folemnitie,
 About and ouer the Palice circuleir.
 The noyse of ministrells mirrie was to heir,
 And everie wight [grit] joy and mirthis hade.
 Anon began the dance but more abaid,
 Increffis ay of mirthis more and more,
 With gritter preis of peiple nor before.
 Long war the proces [all] now for to tell
 Of thair difporte and joy that did excell,
 Quhilk till midnight [I wote] induirit still.
- 1640 The Maisteris of houshold then schew them till,

That it was lait and tyme to go to rest ;
 Then everie wight thair unto bedis drest.
 The Kingis of Ingland and [eik] of Spaine
 Hes tane this rofe of bewtie foverane,
 Meliades, and to hir chalmer gois.
 Clariodus, of knightheid flour and rofe,
 Unto his chalmer convoyit beine with Kings ;
 Syne tuike thair leave with humbill inclynings.
 In chalmer thair with him abaid no mo,
 1650 Bot the Lord Constabill that he lovit so,
 That he could not be but his companie.
 Four Knightis beine his chalmerleins worthie,
 Ane was Sir Broun de Lamour [full] wight,
 Ane uther Gilzeam de la Forrest height,
 Sir Richard de la Forrest was in feir,
 The ferd was Sir Penant de la Careire,
 Quhilk four to him so tender was trewlie,
 That he to them gave trest of his bodie.
 And quhen anon with them he was unclod,
 1660 In furrit mantill he fet hes on his bed,
 And him befyd he fet the Constabill,
 And with him fell in speiking delectabill,
 Whill that Meliades in bed was gone,
 Whair Ladeis as than was with hir none
 Save hir awin Mother, and the Queinis two
 Of Spaine and Galice; thir wald not fra hir go,
 Whill scho in bed was brocht, and then anone
 Thay tuike thair leave, and to thair bedis gone.
 Then Romaryn, bening and gracious,
 1670 To chalmer went to King Clariodus,
 And schew to him that the Queine was in bed,
 And he anone to [hir] chalmer him sped,

And the Conftabill into his companie,
 Quhilk then at his bed [fide] richt privalie
 Tuik leave and bad guid nicht on humbill wayis.

Clariodus to fair Meliades

Enterit in bed quhom Venus did convoy,
 Not in his bed bot in his hevin of joy.

What is thair mair, bot that the floure of armis

1680 Ane rofe of bewtie lapit in his armis ;

And fo thir two thay enterit in thair blife,

Whilk with thair merit is weill defervit is ;

And thay, that lovit uther above all things,

Paffit that night with joy and thair lykings,

Quhilk joy doubtles full deir was coft befor,

Whairfor thair joy ay multipliet the more.

I will not tak in hand for to indyte

Thair joyis all, for them I can not wryte ;

For in fik thing I am not prakticate,

1690 Quhilk never my Ladie had in fik ane ftate.

Termis I want fik materis to prefer,

Quhairfor ze loveris to zow I it refer,

That taiftit hes of the ilk famyne tune,

And on fik wayis zour Ladies now hes wone ;

For to confider thair joy is ouer meafoure,

Of love they have now fund the theafoure,

Whilk long thay have with pane and pennance foght.

I know the paine, the pleafoure know I nocht ;

The wo I felt, thocht I the blis not bruikie.

1700 O ze my Ladies that luikis on this Buikie,

To zow I me compleine on humbill wayis,

That fhe nocht bot difdaine for my fervice.

Wald God gif [that] fum pairt of zour pitie

War mixit with my Ladies [rare] bewtie ;

For war scho mercifull as scho is faire,
 In all this world scho had non [to] compaire ;
 In everie vertew naine nicht hir amend.

My mater now no longer to transcend,
 Thir loveris two full litill felt of forrow,
 1710 Whill bright Phebus them helfit on the morrow,
 In at the windo and on the courtines schone,
 And everilk wight adreffit up to gone,
 With Kingis, Princes, and Ladies of honoure,
 And everie Ladie hir dressit in hir boure,
 And did thair bodies lustillie array,
 Lyk to the Mayis bloffome on the spray.
 Clariodus, as on the day before,

In clothing that was pretious and decore,
 Is vestit, and quhen tyme was opportune,
 1720 For the Lord Constabill he sent full soun ;
 Syne to King Philipon [anone] he went,
 Whair all the Kingis togidder war present.
 The Queine Meliades did freschlie hir attyre
 In cloath of gold bright twinkling as [the] fyre,
 In kirtill quhilk was glorious to sie,
 Of purple velvot ane gown on had sche.
 Ane lustie huid scho had upon hir heid,
 With pearlis quhyte and rubies lustie reid
 Sternit ouer all, quhilk Earle Estur hir fend

1730 Into the morrow with ane recommend.
 Scho thus arrayit I let in chalmer dwell,
 And quhat betyde in Court now I will tell.

The King Clariodus, on fair maneir,
 With the Lord Constabill, his companioun deire,
 Is to the King of Spainzes chalmer gone,
 And unto him thir wordis faid anone,

- My fair Brother, [now] harkin unto me,
 Ze have ane Sifter mariet for to be,
 Whilk is right fair, benigne, and gracious ;
 1740 And I ane Coufing have and Prince famous,
 Whilk is ane valiant Knight, as weill ze know ;
 War it gour will, I wald that it war fo,
 That our alyance might togider go
 [By mariage of thir richt nobill two.]
 The King anfwairit and said, My Brother faire,
 I will as ze will, fchortlie to declaire,
 We think that alway it war convenient.
 He thankit him with wordis reverent ;
 And syne he past unto King Philipon,
 1750 And fchew to him all hail how it was gone ;
 And he was glaid. Thair is no more to tell.
 Arayit beine this lustie damofell
 On gudlie wayis, alfe fresch as fould a bryde.
 King Amandur, upon the uther fyde,
 Abuilzeit him in fresch and regall weid,
 As he that was ane Prince of nobilheid ;
 And King Palexis on the same maneire,
 Whilk handfast was with Ladie Cader cleir ;
 All for the mariagis drestit them anone,
 1760 And thay all four ar to the chappell gone.
 Within the mightie Palice of renoune
 Up gois the trumpit and the clarioun.
 Convoyit thay war with nobill companie
 Of Kingis, Princes, and Lordis royallie,
 And mightie Queinis upon ather fyde.
 I bid not on the proces to abyde ;
 Thay mariet war with full grit dignitie,
 And halie consecrat efter thair degrie.

- The mes was song with note full curious,
 1770 With organ found and thimphand melodious.
 Efter the mes was donne upon this wayis,
 And finallie compleitit the service,
 The zoung Quenis war led from [the] chappell
 With Kingis that in honour did excell;
 Then to thair chalmeris thay went them to recray,
 And alse to cleith them in ane new aray;
 And syne discendit into the triumph hall
 In the grite clofe that stuide imperiall,
 On lenth and breid, [on] height and [on] lairgnes,
 1780 Of riche apparralling and lustines.
 The tabill up raifit richlie was anone.
 The two zoung Queines to the hie deice ar gone
 With grite estait and regall dignitie;
 On ather syde sat Kingis fresch to sie,
 And Quenis alse [full] lustie to behold,
 In rich apparrall and regale cloath of gold,
 Whois radious rich apparrall brightlie schone
 With emerand and pearle but comparifon
 In corronalds, bright jefpe, and diademes.
 1790 Bot if ane wight of death war in extreames,
 It fould him comfort and reiose to sie
 Thair excellent and imperiall blyth bewtie.
 When everie King and Prince of nobilnes,
 And everie Princes, Ladie, and Duches
 Beine set at tabill efter thair degrie,
 The trumpits foundit with ane noyse full hie,
 Whill that the royall Palice did refoun.
 Anon the courfis come with sik fusioun,
 That I wald irk for to report them heire,
 1800 And ze fould think it tedious for to heire;

- Or if I told gow all the circumstance
 Of them in England, Ireland, and of France,
 Galice, Garnat, and [eik] of Castalgie,
 Of Spainge land, and of Estur cuntrie,
 How thay war marchellit, or quha maid them cheir,
 Or of the diverse intermifis feire,
 Or of the dulce and hevinlie minstrallie,
 Or of thair musike and diverse melodie,
 Or of thair diverse playing instruments,
 1810 Or of thair plifant and trim abuilgements,
 Or of thair mirrie cheir maid at the tabill,
 To tell or to report it war inestimabill ;
 The sweit luikis and amorus beholding
 Betwix the Knightis and the Ladies ging,
 Or of the heralds in thair coat armouris
 Of syndrie Princes of grite honouris ;
 Upon sik thing war long for to abyde,
 Whairfor as now I will let it ower flyde.
 King Amandur and King Palexis
 1820 Rewairdit heralds with gold and grit riches ;
 They cryit Larges all the hall about.
 And quhan all dynit had this nobill rout,
 Buirdis on loft beine raifit by and by,
 And graces said be Bisshopis devotlie ;
 And all the Lordis that in chalmeris dynit,
 Whois grite estait can not be [heir] defynit,
 Unto the court of nobilnes discendit,
 Quhilk unto nothing bot to honour tendit,
 Larges, jentrice, and [eik] nobilitie,
 1830 Trewth, manheid, justice, and liberalitie ;
 Away was fallit, away was wretchitnes,
 Away was nigardie and all skarschnes.

- None covitice let them of thair difport,
 Thair heartis gevin to all glaidnes at fchort ;
 Nor naine invy at utheris dignitie
 Might them depairt from thair cheritie ;
 More grace amongs them wald aboundand be.
 [Full oft has beine fik royall companie ;]
 Bot not alway exampillis, for to wryte,
 1840 For fo infatiabill beine thair apeteite,
 That all the world micht flokin not thair thrift,
 Whill daith of clay ingrafe them in ane kift.
 Into this hall triumph and paleftriall,
 Up gois the joyous found instrumentall ;
 With dulce, melodious hermonie and fweite,
 Raifing the breift with curage, and the fpreit
 Of them that luftie beine and amorus.
 Two Earlis, that beine worthie and famous,
 Thir two goung Queinis leidis to the dance,
 1850 Whom matrimonie hes donne fo advance.
 The Conftabill leidis Meliades.
 Thir Kingis two full frefch at all devyfe,
 King Amandur and King Palexis,
 Hes taine two Queinis of grit luftines,
 And danfit on [maift] fair and gudlie wayis
 Danfis that all men [ever] could devyfe ;
 Knightis and Ladies full gudlie for to feine,
 And virginis in thair drefsit hairis fcheine,
 The dance continuing with bening countinacce.
 1860 Thus they difportit them with all plefance,
 Whill that the fupper was redie at all ;
 Then unto chalmer went this court royall,
 And frefchlie thair thay changit thair rayments,
 And pat on them for playis abuilgements.

And Ladies hes thair gounis laid afyde,
 And taine on mantillis that war large and wyde
 Of cloath of gold, purple, and cramosie.
 The fair Meliades debonarlie
 Hes hir dispuilzeit of hir gounes velvate,
 1870 And put on hir ane rosey of dew bewate,
 Ane gounes of gudlie hewit cramosie;
 Upon hir heid ane crowne of gold mightie,
 Whairin was stonis pretious and decore,
 That worth ane Kingis ransoune war and more,
 With goldin chainze about hir halfe so quhyte,
 Whom to behold ane hevine was of delyte :
 Her proper persoun glorious was and gay.

When everie Ladie hade changit hir array,
 To the triumph hall ascendit thay anone.
 1880 Kingis, Princes, and Ladies everie one,
 War fet at supper efter thair degrie.
 The silver trumpits maid a noyse full hie,
 The pleafant courfis come abundantly ;
 And buirdis beine [all] servit by and by,
 The minstrellis sang with curiositie,
 Sweit as the marmaid in the orient sea.
 Full long thay sat and maid right mirrie cheir,
 And founne anone thay raise from the suppeir,
 And newlie gois to thair abaitments
 1890 With joyous found of pleafant instrumens.
 Then all the nobillest King Clariodus
 For Emayne sent ane Ladie gracious,
 Of the chalmer of the Duches Bellavoy,
 Quhilk was of Spaine ane verie flour of joy,
 And hir delyverit to the Lord Constabill,
 To go in dance; and he right honorabill

Thankit him lowlie and tuik her be the hand.
 Thir two zoung Queinis, lustie and pleasand,
 Led with two Kingis danfit thair ane beafe.

1900 Meliades be worthie Palexis

Was led in dance as goddes Apolleine,
 Quhilk to behold was lyke ane thing devine.
 Thus thay disportit quhill it was neir midnight,
 Syne unto beddes thay passit everie wight.
 King Philipone and King Clariodus,
 With countinace mirrie and joyous,
 Convoyit unto chalmer lustillie

Thir young spoufis ; and syne on wayis gudlie
 Thair leavis tuike and syne to chalmeris went.

1910 Thir two fresch Kingis, fresch in thair intent

War of thir Ladies fair and weil beseine.
 Syne everie King taine hes his awin Queine,
 And gone to bed with thame with all pleasance :
 Bot now it war ower long ane circumstance,
 To tell thair grite pleasance and all thair joy ;
 Glaider war never Sir Troylus of Troy,
 When he had Cressed in his arms windin,
 Nor war thir Kingis quhen thay to beds cumin,
 [To] thair lustie Queinis quhom thay loved long.

1920 Bot now the tyme me list not to prolong,

For to declair zow all thair mirrines,
 Or into lovis the nights bissines.
 In joy and blife in armis still thay lay
 With glaidfum night, quhill cumin was the day.

Apollo restles and unfatigabill,
 Cleir in the eist devoid of habite sabill,
 Upon his course was cumin in the hevin,
 Twentie degries large and thairto fevin,

- Quhen everie King and Prince of nobilnes,
 1930 And everilk Queine, Ladie, and Duches,
 Adressit them full gudlie in thair weid.
 Meliades the flour of womanheid
 Was cled in goun of velvete luffillie,
 Furrit with greice right fair and [full] seamlie ;
 And of the famyne suite scho gave also
 Unto the new maid Quenis gounis two,
 And to the Queinis of Galice and Spaing
 Two gounis of the famyne fort gave scho ;
 And scho that wes of bewtie crope and rute,
 1940 Did them besek to go into ane suite
 With hir that day ; and thay with cheire bening
 Hir thankit, and did grant to hir this thing.
 To mes thay went, and fyne disjunit all ;
 Syne to the skaffalds in lustie apparrall
 Went everie Prince and Princes amiabill,
 And everie Lord and Ladie delectabill.
 King Philipone with monie ane auncient Knight
 War set on skaffold to confave at right
 What Lord or Knight did best in the assay.
 1950 The Knightis com all lustie in array
 In cloathes of gold full fair [and] schyning bright.
 Unto the rinke com monie seamlie Knight
 So weill at poynt that wounder was to sie.
 Of trumpits sound full noyis rais on hie.
 The French Constabill com first in the assay,
 On gudlie wayis in right knightlie aray,
 Servit be the nobill King Clariodus,
 Whois wound to him was git fumthing noyous,
 And for that cause he justit not as than.
 1960 Thair might be seine monie ane seamlie man.

The Constabill was in the range with him,
 Whilk than was [the] maist liklie for to wine.
 Of Bellavoy the Duike was [then] without,
 [And] servit be King Amandur full stoute,
 Weill accompanied with knightlie companie,
 For he all tyme was nobill and worthie.
 The Duike of Brissland enterit in the feild,
 In knightlie fassoun both with speire and scheild,
 In his inarming cleire as ony sonne,
 1970 Quhilk as I traist fall not be lightlie wonne ;
 And he was servit be King Palexis,
 Becaus he of [the] Galice natioun was.
 The fresch Knightis com far to the justing,
 Sir Charles de la Careir as ane lamp schyning,
 The nobill and duchtie Sir Ame de Valeir,
 Ane gracious Knight Sir Gorius de Grampeir,
 With monie uther lustie pleafand Knight.
 Knightis of Ingland schone as angellis bright,
 Sir Broun de Amouris cristalleine of hew,
 1980 And nobill Sir Hewmon de la Mantigue,
 Sir Richard de Maianis of grite renoune ;
 Sir Gilgeam de la Forrest of Scottis regioun,
 Ane Knight he was of fair condition ;
 Thair was Sir Hew de la Bas of that natioune.
 The Knight Lumbard, Sir Ame de la Pleafance,
 Com to the preife with manlie countinace.
 Of Portingall Sir Porus of renoune
 Was thair, the Knight quhilk was the [weird] lyoun.
 It war forsuith ane grit prolixitie
 1990 To tell thair namis all in thair degrie ;
 For thair was both within and eik without
 Aucht hundreth Knightis that war [stark and] stout,

Young, strong, [and] fresh, and also amorus,
 Antrus, ardent, and [also] richt defyrus
 To do thair deidis valiant at thair might,
 In presens of thair Ladies and thair fight.
 Or onie Knight encounterit with ane lance,
 Thir Lordis heralds heighlie did advance
 In thair coat armuris of gold, stiffe and cleire ;
 2000 And with hie voice that all the feild might heire
 Cryit the heralds of the Lord Constabill,
 POURE LAMOUR DELE ; [and] with grite joy thairtill
 The Duike of Brislandis heralds cryit hie,
 SANS POYNT FALTRE ; and so with royaltie
 Thair maisteris wordis thay pronuncit loud.
 Syne to the scharpe affay of knightlie schroud
 Addressit Lordis with thair speiris joynit ;
 The cleirlyke trumpits and clariounis tunit.
 Thus Mars his fonnis chevalrus and bauld,
 2010 In bright arming and triumph to behauld,
 Leiming of jespis wounder glorious,
 And provit in armis so victorious,
 That it war mervell for to be rehearfit ;
 Thair hie valour with pen can not be verfit.
 Thay brayit on utheris lyke lyounis and bairis,
 The air all rumblit with the crake of speiris,
 The earth about all dynnit and it schoke,
 The reike up raise [like] as ane smodie smoke ;
 The trenscheons of thair speiris up gois on loft,
 2020 Doune gois the Knightis with ane fall unsoft ;
 With speiris strong so upon breift thay beit,
 The steidis wox all quhyte with fame and sweit ;
 Cheildis lay scatterit in the feild full wyde,
 The bright helmis did from thair heidis glyde,

The cleir scheildis beine all in funder brift,
 Knightis beine out of thair fadillis thrift;
 The grit steidis togidder gois with gronis,
 Whill giltin ruifis rattillit all at onis,
 And bukillis brekis and birneis gois to ground,
 2030 Whill with the reard thair breiftis did redound.
 The grite Constabill of France regioun
 That day wan mikill honour and renoune ;
 He did grit worschip to the realme of France,
 For monie ane Knight he drave doun with [his] lance ;
 He fairis alfe wode as lyoun in ane rage,
 Whois ardant heart desyrus might not affwage
 The thrift of knightheid, governance, and name ;
 For scho was thair that maid him to eschame
 Of cowardyce and of flewthfull curage ;
 2040 He did fuithlie full nobill vassallage,
 His knightheid scho enforeit with hir luike.
 Full weill then provit of Bellavoy the Duike ;
 For he that was right famous of thir deidis
 Stronglie buire doune both Knightis and thair steidis,
 And did full valiantlie and lyke ane Knight.
 Sir Charles de la Carere, bold and wicht,
 Full weill he provit, as myne Author tellis,
 In fame of knightheid and chevalrie excellis.
 Rycht weill him held Sir Richard de Mayanis.
 2050 The Knight Lombard, Sir Amé de Plifance,
 Sik wounderis wroght, that wounder was to fie,
 Throw his grite force and magnanimitie.
 And eik Sir Porrus de la Portingall
 On him that day [did take] so grite travell,
 And weill atchevit to the letter end.
 The Knights of England wan full grite commend.

And right swa thay of Spaingie and [of] France,
 Thay rewlit [thair] with knightlie góvernance.
 For to behold it was ane nobill fight
 2060 So monie ane valiant and so lustie Knight
 Into ane feild, [and] dought fo long contine.
 The pepill had grit pleafance them to feine.
 To ryn at other did thay never fine,
 Whill bright Appollo waftward did declyne,
 And him ischerowdit in his mantill reid,
 And quhill the goldin traces of his heid
 Men might behold ftraught and lyneall
 Abone the earth, with beames colaterall,
 With ane deaureat fupperiall light
 2070 Leiming the grund; and whill he out of fight
 Bening descendit from his hemifpheire,
 And Lucine of the hevine had the impyre,
 And lustie Venus schew hir lustie face,
 And let hir goldin traces out of leace,
 Glaiding the hevinlie ringe imperiall,
 And everie blythfull ftarne celestiall
 As roobie twinklit in the firmament.
 And quhan that nature maid impediment,
 And them denyit had the light of day,
 2080 Thay most neids twine. Thair is no more to fay,
 The King hes gevin command out of his feit,
 In trumpet found to blow up the retreat;
 The quhilk command thay let no tyme ouerpas,
 The found gois furth of silver and of brase,
 With sik ane noyse, whill all the listis rang;
 Men might of mettall heir ane hevinlie fang,
 When all the trumpits tonit up at onis;
 Then fra the preis the Knightis them disponis.

- Bot or the King wold off the skaffald discend,
 2090 He askit quha the honour and commend
 Deservit for to have of the justing.
 The antient Lordis long war advyding,
 Full grit commend gave to the Knightis all,
 And them right hie did praise univerfall,
 Saying, in thair tyme thay never had seine
 More valiant Knightis under scheildis scheine,
 Nor better provit at justing nor tornay ;
 Bot most the laud and the triumph they lay
 Upon this Lord the mightie Frenche Constabill,
 2100 And on the Duike of Bellavoy honorabill.
 The King discendit from his scaffald doune ;
 Kingis, Princes, and Ladies of renoune,
 Unto the Palice went full royallie,
 With the victorius found of minstrallie ;
 And everie Knight unto his ludging went.
 Clariodus, the Knight armipotent
 The Constabill led to chalmer royallie,
 Quhair he alfweith unarmit was hastillie,
 And put on him ane gown of velvete thair,
 2110 Furrit with mertrix pretious and fair.
 King Amandur led the Duike of Bellavoy
 To chalmer with all melodie and joy.
 Be this the supper was alreadie dicht,
 The sex fresch Queinis, in attyre [full] bricht,
 Com to the hall arrayit nobillie,
 And at the tabill set with royaltie,
 With monie ane Ladie, Countes, and Duches,
 And monie grit Maistres and Barrounes.
 The Kingis in ane chalmer soupit all.
 2120 And all the Knightis went unto the hall,

That war all day with travell fatigat ;
 The Lord Constabill grittest of estait,
 And Duike of Bellavoy ane buird begane ;
 Syne efter thair degrie right everie man
 Was fet at tabill, and servit honorabillie.
 Anone the trumpits blew up mirrillie,
 They maid grit feist with joy and melodie.
 Then buirdis beine [all] servit by and by,
 As thay in midis of the supper wer,
 2130 Aucht Heraldis come in coat armour cleir,
 And aught Knightis [full] valiant and worthie,
 And askit at the nobill companie,
 Quhilk of the Knightis fould the honour have
 Of the justing and praise ouer [all] the leave.
 In hall they had diverse opinioun
 Amongs the Kingis and Princes of renoune
 What Knight fould have the lawd and the honoure,
 Them all thay praitit to be of grite valour ;
 Bot to the Constabill thay gave grit loving,
 2140 And to the Duike of Bellavoy condong.
 When this was said, Clariodus the King
 Sent to Meliades the Queine bening,
 And bade hir fend unto thir Lordis two
 Rewairdis fair. The message furth can go,
 And schaw right as [that] ze have hard devyle.
 And then the lustie Queine Meliades
 Baid Romaryne feche unto hir of gold
 Ane firmaleit and chaine fair to behold ;
 And with fair Emayn of Bellavoy them fend,
 2150 And gart ane uther Ladie with hir wend
 Unto thir Lordis two. And quhen that thay
 Unto thair prefence com, thus can thay fay

- To the Constabill that worthie was and wyfe,
 Our Soverane Ladie Queine Meliades
 Requieris zow this chaine for to resave,
 As ze that at the justing ouer the leave
 That war within hes won renoune and praife :
 Bot he alway that courtes was and wyfe,
 Laith was the chaine for sik caus to resave ;
- 2160 Bot nevertheles he most neidis it have,
 At the requeist of Princes him about.
 He thankit them and courteslie did lout,
 And gave [to] them two diamantis faire.
 The Ladies kneillit with cheiris debonair,
 And to the Duike of Bellavoy the firmaleit cleir
 They have presentit syne on this maneir,
 Saying, The lustie Queine zow sent this gift.
 He it resavit withouttin ony schift ;
 The Queine he thankit, and gave the Ladies gent
- 2170 Two royall rubies bright and redolent.
 Thir Lordis two hes taine thir Ladies bricht,
 And to the hall them led, whair everie wight
 Had soupit and up ryfin from the tabill,
 And enterit in ane dance full amiabill.
 Thair thankit they the Queine Meliades,
 And syne begouth the dance in humbill wayis
 With thir ilk forsaid Ladies in thair hand.
 Full glorios wox the feist and triumphand
 Of glaid disport : bot it did not long left,
- 2180 The mirrie Knightis mifter had of rest,
 And went to bed anone and sleipit still,
 Whill bright Phebus schynit ouer holt and hill.
 And be [that] it was fullie houris nyne,
 Full gudlie Knightis cleir and cristallyne

Enterit againe into the lustie meid
 With scheild and lance enarmit upon steid,
 And justit all the day continuallie;
 Whairof the hie renoun and victorie,
 As [that] myne Authore tellis for certaine,
 2190 Wes gevin to the mightie Duike of Brilland,
 And to the Duike of Bellavoy thir two.
 The feist triumphall glaidlie induirit so
 The tyme compleit of monethes two all out;
 Grit was the joy amongis that bliffull rout.
 Clariodus, the best and nobillest [King]
 That levit then efter Mars his ring,
 Gart make ane generall Proclamatioun
 In everie province of his regioun,
 That every vailzeand Knight [thair] under scheild
 2200 Compeir fould on sik ane day and feild,
 And for his Ladies love to rin ane lance,
 And for the luif, and uther circumstance.
 The day is cumit, and eik the Knights also.
 Grit was the preis that in the field can go;
 Thair might be seine monie ane lustie Knight
 Of countries strange, inarmit schyning bright
 Againe the face of Titan, leiming cleire
 Of redolent stonis pretious and deire.
 All Kingis, Queinis, and the Ladies fair,
 2210 War set on scaffalds plesand and preclaire,
 Beholding all the maner and the gyfe
 Of everilk Knight and of his interpryse.
 Thair namis dar I not discryve at all;
 For of this haill world univerfall
 Thair beine the chose of all [of] hie renoun
 Of Knightis of all fyndrie natioun.

The justing was begun with triumph found,
 Whill it redoundit from the cludis doun.
 Knightis of Ingland, Galice, and of Spaine,
 2220 That day did not all thair deidis in vaine,
 For monie ane Knight and horse doun thay buire,
 Nobillie thay provit, and did long endure ;
 So did the strong Knightis, the fuith to fay,
 For monie ane fair course was run that day :
 Bot he that beine the patron of all Knights,
 The sone of Mars of bodie and of mights,
 I meine Clariodus enarmit bright,
 This potent Prince, as planeit casting licht,
 Schynit all of stonis and of carbunkellis deire.
 2230 As Jupiter surmounting in his spheir,
 Or Lucifer in pairting of the night,
 So all in gleime and glorious as angell bright,
 He enterit in the field and that anone ;
 For then all noy of his wound was gone.
 His mightie speir he faikit in his hand,
 And on his steid he glydit ouer the land,
 And buire the Knightis from thair horse alloft,
 And on the grund maid them to fall unsoft ;
 Might none resist his straikis of sik force,
 2240 Befor his face to grund went man and horse.
 Him to behold it was ane ferlie sight,
 For he was of sik strenth and of [sik] might ;
 Right as the agill in the air at will
 Devoris the terrestriall volateill,
 And dantis the etheriall birdis small ;
 So the terrestriall fame victoriall
 Ringit in him of knightlie governance.
 Nocht can my pen discryve, nor git advance

His valiant deidis nor his chevalrie,
 2250 So far as might be reafoun fatiffie
 Him that in French hes red this hiftorie ;
 To fik ane rethorik nather be laud and glorie,
 As unto him that did this buik compyle
 In French, illumining with his goldin ftyle ;
 And he, that did it out of French tranflait,
 Hes it depaint of langwage full ornate,
 And luftie termis richt poeticall :
 Bot I, the third and fecundest of all,
 Can not fo meitter as thay put in profe ;
 2260 Full oft I put the nettill for the rofe,
 And oft the bindweid for the lillie quhyte.
 The god armipotent might have delyte
 To fie his kuightlie fair and governance,
 His hie regall victoriorious importance.
 His mightie corpis fark and unfatigat
 Maid monie ane Knight to ly on face profrat.
 From fum he ftraike the helme, and fum the fcheild,
 And fum he laid on groufe upon the feild,
 And fum he ran down fearflie and eik his horfe,
 2270 To leive the place behuifit them on forfe.
 The Conftabill, that on him followit ay,
 Sik wounder had to fie the grit deray
 Amongs the Knightis hurling on the feild,
 He did huife fill long tyme, and him beheld,
 And mervellit on his ftrenth and hie curagis,
 That as ane furious lyon on them ragis.
 King Amandur and King Palexis,
 Wha fillit war of manheid and nobilnes,
 So weill them held, that wounder was to tell,
 2280 Full monie ane Knight befor thair lanfis fell.

The royall houfheld of King Philipon
 So nobillie thair lanfis did difpone,
 That monie ane Knight befor them geid to grund.
 Was never hard in all this eard fo round
 Of fairer jufting and nobiller tornament ;
 For then under the ftarrie firmament
 Of knightlie fame and lawd was Britan bauld,
 As git us tellis the Chronicles auld.

So hapinit then ane Knight in feild to be 2290 Of grite vigoure and [eik] ftrenuitie,
 That he in diverfe landis was victoure,
 Feill Knightis war conquift be his valoure.
 Of jyant corpis was this grit campioun,
 Out throw the feild he playit the lyoun,
 With mightie fpeir as Mars he did furth ryd,
 Defoylgeand Knightis foullie in his pryde.
 To fie his bright enarming was delyte,
 Correfpondent to his corpis perfyte,
 That fair it was to leuike on fike ane Knight,
 2300 Fulfillit of fik vertew and fik might,
 Quhilk rarious was, and redolent of hew,
 Of Leflay he height Sir Leonard Perdew.
 Melancholike he brunt of pure invy,
 That Sir Clariodus the King worthy
 So far in valiant deidis did excell ;
 Quhairfor alfe wod as ony tiger fell
 He fet on him with mightie lance in hand.
 The nobill King him mightillie gainftand.
 Thay frufchit thair fpeiris frefchlie in funder
 2310 So fellounlie, to fie that it was wounder.
 And quhen he faw he could him not vincus,
 Then he requierit King Clariodus

Him for to draw apairt, and to assay,
 Quhilk of them two vinqueis [the] other may.
 Clariodus him grantit hes this thing.
 And then withoutin ony tarying
 They drew them to ane fyd, and hes anone
 From thair fquyeris two mightie speiris tone,
 And raid at uther, fchortlie to conclude,
 2320 Right as two dragonis that war fearce and wod ;
 Thair speiris brake and sprang into the air,
 The royall Palice reardit with the rair.
 And fyne with all thair courage and [thair] might
 Thay strake at other with thair fwordis bright.
 As two wyld boaris irouslie thay faught,
 From both thair helmes the low geid as fyrflaught
 Throw dintis fers on [the] hard forgit steill,
 Thay did assay if it was temperit weill,
 Quhilk rang full loud and gave an awfull found,
 2330 Thair brandis cleir wantoun up and doun
 Againes the fonis fervent beamis bright ;
 Unto the pepill terribill was the fight.
 Thir cruell Knightis with thair feirfull cheir
 Rufchit on uther ay in fik maneir,
 Whill helmis [and] habrigis all to brift ;
 Out throw the steill full fast thay [ay did] thrift.
 So sad straikis thay [did] on other fet,
 Whill both thair brandis bloodie was and wate.
 Sir Leonard for ire almost grew wode,
 2340 That he fo long in feight againis him stude,
 And him nicht not vinqueis in no maneir.
 In scheith he put his fword of mikill cleir,
 And trowit with his vigour and his force
 To draw the nobill Knight from [off] his horie.

Clariodus perfavit him anone,
 His steid he spurrit and toward him is gone,
 And in his forcie armis wight and strang,
 He did the Knight out of his sadill fwang,
 And laid him on his hors nek him before,
 2350 And to the barras magrie him full fore
 Him buire, and fet him down curagious.
 They cryit on height, VIVE CLARIODUS!
 The stalwart Knight full sounne on fute he wan,
 He said, Thou art ane quike devill and no man ;
 For I have beine in Spaingie and Itallie,
 In Denmark, Duchland, and throw all Germanie,
 Zit fand I never thy peir into no land.
 To blow the retreit the King gave command ;
 For than Phebus had put his course to end,
 2360 And bright Venus did in the eist ascend.
 I may not tarry all the proces on ;
 Kingis, Lordis, Knightis war warnit anon,
 And schortlie cled into [full] rich array,
 Syne to the hall they went the neirest way ;
 For thair the tabillis war richlie bespred.
 Then Kingis, Quenis, Duchefes them sped
 Unto the deice to thair seats honorabill,
 Whair thay war servit with coursis inestimabill ;
 For to discus thair is no man on lyve,
 2370 That can the twentie pairt thairof disceryve
 The grite triumph and feisting beine and cheir,
 Whair that sa monie Knightis beine in feir.
 Right as the latter course come in the hall,
 Then Heraldis in cote armours royall,
 And twelf Knightis that aigit war and wyse,
 Quhilk in thair tyme [richt] mikill was to pryse,

Unto the hall they ar all went in feir,
 And cleirlie the opiniouns did fpeir
 Of everie Prince and Lord of grit renoun
 2380 Whois was the laude for [the] conclusioun
 Of all the Knights that in the justing wer,
 And who most valiantlie did perseveir,
 And who the helme [had] conquieft and renoune ;
 For it the maner was in that regioun,
 That who at justing or at tornament
 The honour wan, thair was to him present
 Ane mightie helme circulat with gold cleir,
 And circumferat with stonis that war deir.
 They spake of monie [grit] and diverse Knight,
 2390 Of worthie King Palexis that was wight,
 And of his brother Amandur the King,
 And the Lord Constabill nobill and conding,
 Sir Charles, Sir Porrus, Sir Amé de Plifance ;
 They said they beine all worthie to advance.
 Grite worfchip spake they of the Duikis twane
 Of the cuntries of Bellavoy and Brisland,
 And of Sir Leonard de la Pardew,
 Whom King Clariodus out of his sadill drew.
 Bot King Clariodus they most commend,
 2400 And finallie they all did condiscend
 To give him all the lawd and honour hie,
 To quhom no uther wight was so worthie ;
 For thair might Knightis be of [full] grit fame,
 Bot nothing all to his imperiall name ;
 For he in grie stude [ay] superlative
 Abone all uther Knightis [fair] in lyve,
 In fame of Knightheid and of fortitude :
 Whairfor the companie did all conclude

- The helme of honour to give him onlie,
 2410 That pryfit beine the flour of chevalrie.
 Be this was said, aucht Virginis fair to fie,
 In trazit hairis of ferlifull bewtie,
 Four of Spaingie, and four of Galice land,
 Com in the hall with countinace pleifand,
 And broght with them the helme deaureat bright,
 Owerfret with mightie stonis casting light,
 And fet it doun before him on the tabill,
 Saying to him with wordis amiabill,
 Sir, be advyfe and counfall generall,
 2420 Of Kingis, Princes, Lordis, ane and all,
 This aureat helme is maid for to be gouris,
 For the grite worschipe and the hie honouris
 That ge have won with mightie speir and fcheild
 This day at tornay, be justing in the feild.
 Clariodus thankit the Virginis ging,
 And also he remerfit everie King,
 Saying, thairto he was not dingne nor abill,
 And offerit it unto the Lord Constabill,
 Quhilk it refusit, and so did all the leave ;
 2430 For he himfelfe most neidis it refave,
 Constraintit be the nobill Princes all.
 Then he upon ane Armiger did call,
 And gart ane Maister of houshold come him till,
 Quhilk callit was Sir Henrie Gordonill,
 To quhom he rounit and ordanit secreitlie,
 To have the Heraldis with him quyetlie
 To his wairdrope, and thair rewaird them all,
 And give them gouns of cloath of gold royall ;
 And bad him give of silver and of gold
 2440 To everie ane ane thousand merks doun told ;

And to the Knights he gave twelf courfers fair,
 [Into this world none might with thame compair.]
 Richt as he bad this Lord hes donne anone.
 Syne he commandit two squyeris for to gone
 To chalmer with his helme; and ordanit eik,
 That thay fould take with them thir Virginis meik,
 And tak aught goldin chaingeis avenant,
 And put to everie chaine ane diamant,
 And [fyne] put [thame] about thair throttis quhyte;
 2450 The quhilk was donne, schortlie [for] to indyte.
 Thir Knightis and the Heralds all in feir
 Enterit againe unto thair suppeir,
 [All] remerfing the King Clariodus,
 In prefence of the companie famous.
 The Heralds cryit Larges upon hie
 Of the grit gentrice and liberalitie
 Of the most hie, excellent [and] mightie
 Clariodus, the flour of chevalrie.
 Thus foupit thay with joy and mirrines;
 2460 And fyne [thay] from the tabill can them dres,
 And enterit in the dance full luffillie
 With hevinlie found of hevinlie minstrallie.
 Clariodus hes causit the strange Knights
 With Ladies dance; and so the luffie wichts
 Weill long difportit them on this maneir;
 Syne spyce and wyne was broght with mirrie cheir,
 Depairting fyne the companie with joy.
 Clariodus full glaidlie did convoy
 The strange Knightis unto the Palice get,
 2470 And gart be given to them giftis grit,
 Robis of filk gudlie [and fair] to fie,
 With gold and silver in grit quantitie.

Thay tuike thair leave and to thair lugings went.
 At morrow as bright Phebus did up blent,
 Thay raid into thair cuntries everie one,
 And schew unto thair Princes thair anone
 Of all the feist the fassioun and the cheire,
 Of all the justing, also the maneir,
 And of the fredome of King Clariodus,
 2480 And of his knightlie deidis [and] famous.
 The nobill Kings of Spaingie and Galice
 Bad ordane thair estaits in gudlie wayis,
 To pas at morrow hamwart but delay.
 The night ower went, and cuming was the day,
 The Kings did them adres in thair array,
 And maid them redie with all heft thay may,
 And thair two Queinis ; and fyne went in feir
 And tuike thair leive on gudlie fair maneir
 At Philipon [the King] and at his Queine,
 2490 And fyne [anon] at his Court all bedeine.
 In the meine quhyll Sir Amé de Plesance,
 The Knight Lumbard but longer tariance,
 Sir Fortun de Amouris, and nobill Sir Porrus,
 They schoupe to ryd ; to quhom Clariodus
 Gave grite thesawre [of] riches and monie,
 And cloathes of gold most pleafant for to fie,
 And gart convoy them with fair companie
 Of Knights that beine [richt] nobill and worthie.
 Thaireftir sounne thir Kingis excellent,
 2500 And eike thair Queinis, in maner reverent
 Thair leave hes taine at all the Court royall,
 At everie Lord, Ladie and damosell,
 Bot at Clariodus and the Lord Constabill,
 Whilk them convoyit with Court most honorabill

- Unto thair schipis quhilk did on them abyde,
 Whair mony royall gyfts on everie fyde
 Was gevin and taine with monie rich jewell,
 With cloathes of gold, that was [ane grit] mervell
 To be rehearfit to gow in this place.
- 2510 Then to the sand discendit thay in peace,
 Reddie to enter all into thair schipis,
 Lordis in armis each other thair beclipsis.
 The King Clariodus, that was worthie,
 Imbracit thir two Kingis tenderlie,
 And eik the Queinis two he kissit ifeire,
 And thay in barges enterit ase the peir.
 And last of all his leave tuik pitiouslie
 At his Father the Earle full tenderlie,
 He him imbracit and eik his Mother fyne,
- 2520 And reverentlie to them he did inclyne.
 God waite thair was ane sorrowfull depairting,
 They weipit all with teiris distelling.
 And Mandonat with sorrowfull effeir
 Hir bright visage bedewit all with teir,
 Thus with hir onlie Brother to depairt.
 The sword of dollour did glyd throw hir heart.
 For to behold the fight was dollorus,
 And the depairting fore and pitious,
 Betwix the onlie Sifter and the Brother,
- 2530 And more betwix the one Sone and the Mother.
 I will not longer tell gow of thair sorrow,
 Anone they twynit with Saint John to borrow.
 And be the sameine houre the nobill King
 His leave hes taine with heartlie imbracing
 At the two Kings, and right so at Palexis,
 Syne at the Earle Estur of worthines,

And at the Queinis, and at the fair Countes,
 On ather syde kneilling with humbillnes.
 The guid Lord Constabill tuike leave also 2540 At Kingis, Queinis, Ladies ; and fyne did go
 To schipis sweith quhair failis went on heicht.
 They go to seawart as [ane] foule on flicht.
 Sa weill of winde servit them Eolus,
 And so the flude temperit Neptunus,
 That to the land approachit thay belyve,
 And into helthfum portis did arryve ;
 And everilk Prince and Lord in thair degrie
 Ar passit hame in gud prosperitie,
 Whair thay refavit war with [all] blythnes,
 2550 And leiveit in joy and in mirrines ;
 And oftymes heartlie greating sent betwine
 To King Clariodus and to his Queine.
 The King Clariodus that nobill was,
 King Amandour and [eik] King Palexis,
 The Constabill, and all thair companie,
 Returnit hamewart ar full mirrillie,
 Whair that thay fand the King with his Court all
 Disporting them with triumph royall ;
 With joy and pleafance pat thay ase the night.
 2560 And on the morn as Phebus gave the light,
 The Constabill anone did him addrese
 Unto his schipis with all biffines,
 And tuike his leave at Philipon the King,
 And at the Queine and at hir Ladies ging,
 And at the [lustie] fresch Meliades ;
 And this he did upon most humbill wayis,
 Whair monie [ane] rich gift and jewell great
 Was gevin and taine, quhilk I will not repeat :

- Bot treft ze weill that wo was everie wicht
 2570 For the depairting of the gentill Knight.
 On horse he hes ascendit fuddanlie,
 And furth he raid with all his companie.
 Clariodus he fand without the port
 Abyding him with ane [richt] lustie forte
 Of Kingis, Lordis, and Knights of honour ;
 Both King Palexis and King Amandur
 War in the Court with all thair companie ;
 And furth anone thay raid full mirrallie,
 Whill [that] thay com to the sea strandis cleir,
 2580 Whair that the schipis all [full] redie wer.
 The King Clariodus and the Lord Constabill
 With friendlie cheir and wordis amiabill
 Imbracit uther they have tenderlie,
 And thay that lovit uther heartfullie
 Uneis might hold them from weiping then for wo
 When that thay wist they wald fra uther go,
 Promitting othér with humanitie
 For evermore treuth and fidelitie ;
 Syne tuik thair leave at uther pitiouffie.
 2590 The nobill King, that could weill courtesie,
 Tuike leave [then] at Sir Charles de la Careir,
 And at the worthie Sir Amé de Valeir,
 And [fyne] at the French Knightis everie one.
 Full monie ane jewell of gold and pretious stone
 Amongst them gevin hes the nobill King.
 And fyne his Coufings two, thir Princes geing,
 Thair leave has taine at the Lord Constabill,
 Imbracing uther with wordis confortabill ;
 And efter that he went into his barge,
 2600 Quhilk pullit up anone hir faillis large,

And ower the fluid [then] freschlie did he fair,
 Alfe swift as dois the Eagill in the air ;
 At Calice thay arryvit esilie,
 And thair alfweith [thay] tuike thair harborie.
 And on the morne as cleirit up the day,
 They all prepairit and put them on the way,
 And biffellie they sped them day and night,
 Whill [that] of Parice walls thay gat ane fight ;
 And so withoutin rest this Court furth raid
 2610 Straight to the Palice quhair the King abaid,
 And syne discendit from thair horse anone ;
 And the Lord Constabill to the King is gone,
 And helfit him on knies full reverentlie,
 And he refavit him full joyouslie.
 This Lord apairt [fyne] went with him but mo,
 And schew at lenth or he wald farther go
 The pleasant cheir of the triumphall feist,
 And all the intermeisis most and leift,
 With all the grite disport and abaitments,
 2620 And of the royall justing and turnaments,
 And of the commendatiouns ane and all
 Whilke war unto him send in speciall.
 Glaid was the King his wordis for to heir,
 And bad that he fould on the same maneir
 Go schaw the Queine the tydings delectabill.
 At his command [foun] went the Lord Constabill,
 And helfit hes the Queine and hir Ladies.
 Scho him refavit in ane joyfull wayis.
 He told hir all the maner mair and les,
 2630 How treitit him Clariodus of nobilnes,
 With all the heartlie commendatiouns
 Of Kings and Princes of full great renouns ;

Of quhilk scho was [richt] joyous for to heir,
 And so was all hir lustie Ladies cleir.
 The King for joy gart cry ane grit justing
 Into the honour of his hame cuming.
 In mirrines and joy I leave them thus,
 And speik I will of King Clariodus.

Returnit is the King Clariodus,
 2640 And his two Coufings nobill and famous,
 Unto the Kingis Palice of renoune ;
 And he, that was imperiall under croun,
 Obeyit was with sik estait royall,
 That in this world King was none mortall
 Whome to was donne more worschip and honour
 Nor to this Prince, of chevalrie the flour ;
 And this was donne ower all Britane so braid.

When he aught days thair sojournay had maid,
 He for his four Maisters of houshold fend,
 2650 And them he hes commandit then to wend,
 And ordain richlie for his hie estate,
 Arraying all thing that beine pertinat
 For him and for his Queine Meliades,
 That all fould redie be on gudlie wayis
 Within aught dayis for to take the sea ;
 For he his Coufings with all royaltie
 Wald put in thair realmes, and them convoy
 And leave them thair to ring as Prince and Roy.
 Thir four Lordis past [furth] without demand,
 2660 And in all heaft fulfillit his command.

When all was readie as him list devyse,
 He tuike his leave, and eik Meliades,
 At Philipon the King, and eik the Queine,
 And prayit God thair keiper for to beine

Into the realme whill thair againe cuming.
 And he anone hes taine in hand this thing.
 King Amandur and eik King Palexis
 Thair leave hes taine with all grit humbilnes
 At King and Queine, and all thair companie,
 2670 And on thair horfis ascendit royallie,
 With more triumph nor I can zow defyne ;
 And thay anone raid to the port marine,
 And thair anone went to thair schips ifeir ;
 Bright was the hevin and Phebus schyning cleir.
 Thay raifit sailis bent unto the height,
 And fuire ower fluide as falcon fair on flicht ;
 And in fyve dayis, as Dame Fortoun wald,
 Toward the land [full] lustilie thay hald,
 And saiffe arryvit into Garnet land,
 2680 And into ane toun callit Varrogand.
 The Thrie Estaitis of that regioun
 Full glorioufflie them met with trumpit found,
 And with ane nobill and lustie companie
 Them all [out] throw the cuntries fair thay gy,
 Whill thay com into the toun of Durant.
 The tounschip thair with maner richt plifant,
 Met them with found of diverse instrumens,
 With intermeifis and blyth abaitments.
 In Palice regall, with feist and grit honour,
 2690 Anon refavit was King Amandur,
 And thair as Lord thay maid to him homage :
 Thus Fortoune hes him fet in full hie stage.
 The King, quhilk had resignit him the croun,
 Was then profest into religioun.
 Ane moneth out thay fojornit in that land
 In feistuell joy and pleafance triumphand,

- And fyne Clariodus his leave hes taine,
 And eike Meliades his foverane,
 At Amandur and Donas eik his Queine,
 2700 So did Palexis and lustie Cadar scheine :
 Bot nevertheles they haive done thame convoy
 Unto the sea ; bot thair was litill joy ;
 At thair departing pitie was to tell.
 Whan thay had done full long in armis duell,
 King Amandur and eik his lustie Queine
 Hame to thair Palice againe returnit beine,
 Whair thay full long did leve in joy and blis,
 Joyfing the realme in peace as thay wald wis.
 The King Clariodus and his companie
 2710 In schippis enterit hes, and suddanlie
 They drew up saillis and ouer the wavis schare.
 They glyde anone alfe swift as onie fyre,
 And day and night thay sojorne not nor rest ;
 Bot furth thay held over fluid with saillis prest,
 Whill towards Castalgie Eolus them draveit,
 Whair thay struik fail and suddenlie aryvit ;
 And fyne on horse full royallie ascendit.
 The Lordis of the land on them dependit,
 And throw the cuntrie them convoyit with honour.
 2720 And he that was the realmes governour,
 He met them in the toun of Gandaleyis,
 And feistit them on [the] most gudlie wayis.
 On morrow furth thay raid with royaltie
 Unto the principall toun of Castalgie,
 Quhilk callit was the toun of fair Vallance.
 They enterit in the Palice of plifance,
 Whair that the antient King did them relave,
 Both Lord and Barroun, Knight, and all the leave,

Them welcoming and feisting with great cheir,
 2730 And to them gart be maid ane grit denneir.

Thair courfis all to tell zow it wald cumer,
 Thair intermeifis fo war out of number.

When thay had dynit, the King of grit renoun
 In both his handis he tuike his royall croun,
 And put it on Palexis heid richt thair
 Befor the companie condigne and fair,
 In his rob royall alse he did him vest;
 Syne King of all his realme [he] him poffest;
 And he him self of heigh devotioun

2740 Anone did enter into religioun.

Thay sojornit still with pleafant abaitments,
 With feisting, juffing, and with tornaments,
 Whill [that] fex oulkis war out worne ilk day;
 Syne tuik thair leave withoutin more delay.

Palexis them convoyit to the fea,
 Bot the depairting pitioufe was trewlie
 Betwix him and his Eame Clariodus.
 To twin with other thay war dolorus,
 The quhilk never twinit for weill nor wo,

2750 Uneis thay might depairt utheris fro.

On everie fyd they tuik Saint Johne to borrow
 Agane to meit, quhilk levit hes thair forrow.
 Ather did uther imbrace and faid Adew.
 This King Palexis hameward did perfew,
 Unto his Palice into fair Vallance,
 And with his Queine thair levit in plifance.
 The land he rewlit as ony wald devyfe,
 And keipit it in peace and in justice.

When that the nobill King Clariodus

2760 Now fchipit beine and all [his] Court famous,

In Irland thay did fuddanlie arrayve,
 And thair on horse ascendit they belyve,
 And throw the toune of Gargaly [thay] raid,
 Ane fair village, with wallis heigh and braid,
 Whair two mightie Duikis of that regioun,
 With diverse utheris Lordis of renoune,
 Him met, and to the toun him did convoy
 Full plifantlie, with honour and with joy,
 And him refavit in ane Palice fair,
 2770 And royallie that night him feistit thair ;
 And as thair King thay made to him fewtie,
 And swore to him the aith of fidelitie.
 Allé sone as he the morrow did espy
 To horse he went, and all his company,
 And raid out throw the cuntrie at his will,
 Whill he com to the toun of Marmavill,
 Surmunting all the tounis of Irland,
 Whair that the auld King was [as git] livand.
 He enterit at the ports of the toun,
 2780 Quhilk was arrayit of ane rich falloun.
 The streitis flintit war full royallie
 With arras and with filkis most mightie,
 The minstrells playit on diverse instruments;
 Full monie sports and monie abaitments
 Devyfit war before him on the streit,
 And full of joy was all the toun repleit ;
 The mirrie found of trumpits did out thring,
 And all at onis did the bellis ring ;
 The tounschip met him in thair best array,
 2790 Him doing all the honour that thay may.
 He enterit in the kirk full royallie,
 And thair he lightit and his fair Ladie ;

And quhen [that] they had maid ane orifoun,
 [And mefs was fingin with an hevinlie found,]
 Unto the kirk he liverit grit thefawre ;
 Syne to the Palice raid with grit honour,
 And thair anone from horfe they did difcend,
 And up the gries unto the hall they wend,
 Whair that the antient King into ane chyre
 2800 Was borne with Knightis them abyding thair,
 Whilk grevit was with age, and febillit fo
 That he might not into thair meiting go ;
 To quhome the King Clariodus is gone,
 And heartillie in armis hes him tone.
 Thir Kingis two imbraicit uther thair
 With plefant wordis that war fweit and fair.
 Now am I glaid, this aigit King can fay,
 My deirreft Nevoy that fie now I may
 Within my realme in fik prosperitie,
 2810 I cair not now quhidder I leive or die.
 Then off his heid he tuike his croun pretious,
 And with it crounit King Clariodus,
 And to him did resign his regioun.
 When of this thing was maid conclusioun,
 His chyre to chalmer was borne royallie ;
 The fyd of it buire two Duiks honorabillie,
 The uther fyde Clariodus the King
 Up buire, and fo to chalmer did him bring,
 And on his bed him fet [then] full foftlie.
 2820 Then King Clariodus full courteslie
 Tuike leave as then, and to the hall is gone,
 [Whair that the dinner readie was anone.]
 Grite was the feift, and plefant was the cheir
 Within that hall of diverse courfis feir.

When thay had dynit and ryfin from [the] tabill,
 Lordis begouth and Ladies delectabill
 To dance anone, and minstrells gane to play.
 The portis oppinit war, the fuith to fay,
 And thairin enterit everie lustie wight,
 2830 That list to dance, to sing, or to have fight
 Of that glaid feist, furmunting in plesance,
 And everie wight maid plesant countinace
 At the cuming of thair new Prince and King ;
 For song and play the long hall [all] did ring.
 The feist was great and lestit inteirлие
 Ane monethes space, it lestit larglie
 With glaid disport, justing and tornament.
 Clariodus the King most excellent
 Of Lordis he had diverse mariagis,
 2840 For to inforce with Irland his linagis.
 He maryit thair the sex Virginis cleir,
 That winit with the Ladie de la Careir,
 With potent Lordis of Irland cuntrie,
 That nobillest war and gritest of degrie ;
 And Romaryn he wadit honorabillie
 Upon ane Count of Irland right mightie ;
 Sir Gilgeam de la Forrest he mariet also,
 And Sir Richard de Mayanis they two
 With two grit Countesses of that cuntrie,
 2850 With all the feistis and grit royaltie ;
 And fynit war the mariagis all
 With justing and with tornament royall.
 When he sex monthis had maid sojorning,
 And was obeyit both with auld and ging,
 And conquiest all the heartis of that land,
 Then under him he maid ane Livetenand ;

Syne he his leave hes taine at the [auld] King,
 Wha was forrowfull at his depairting.
 Diverse Lordis and Ladies of renoun,
 2860 He tuike with him to Inglands regioun.
 When he his leave had taine at everie wight,
 Then to the sea he schortlie hes him dight ;
 Heralds greatlie of gold and of money
 He left behind him into that cuntrie ;
 Syne with his Court he raid out throw the toun
 With found of trumpit and of clarioun.
 Convoyit him to sea his Luiftenand.
 And quhen thay war discendit to the strand,
 First at the King he tuike his regiment,
 2870 And fyne he tuike his leave and hamewart went
 Unto the King with commendatioune
 From King Clariodus of grit renoune,
 Saying, that foune againe he fould returne,
 And longer then into the land sojorne.
 Blyth was the King to heir of his rehearse.
 Up gois the faillis preifit in the mase
 Of all the schipis of King Clariodus,
 Whilk be support of the god Eolus,
 And be the help of him and lord Neptune,
 2880 Thay war aryvit in the cuntrie foune.
 Thus quhen Clariodus arryvit beine,
 Both he and eik Meliades his Queine,
 Went to the land with all thair companie,
 And on thair horfe ascendit royallie,
 And throw the cuntrie raid with Court royall.
 The tyding ran out throw the cuntrie hail
 Of thair hame cuming, both to more and les ;
 And unto Belvell first thay can them dres,

- And thair they hard how that the King anone,
 2890 And eik his Queine, war in religioun gone,
 Nocht fra the toun two mylls in ane Abay,
 To quhilk they did returne but more delay ;
 And thair this nobill Prince [hes] lichtit doun,
 And eik his Queine Meliades of renoune,
 And enterit in the Abay in feir.
 This auntient King and Queine advertift war
 Of thair cuming, and com in thair meiting.
 They helfit uther with tender imbracing,
 And kissit uther on ane freindlie wayis.
 2900 And quhen the King and Queine Meliades
 Had commoned long with them on this maneir,
 He tuike his leave, so did this Ladie cleir,
 And said thay wold againe right oft returne.
 When thay had long tyme maid with them sojorne,
 On horse thay have ascendit, and furth raid
 Unto Bellvilladoun but [mair] abaid,
 Whair all the piple him met with trumpit found,
 Crying, Welcum our Prince of most renoune,
 Uneis for throng he might thring in the freit,
 2910 All circumstance I omit to repeat.
 Then at the Palice portis of renoune,
 He and his royall Court all lightit doun,
 And unto hall ascendit, and that anone,
 Whair he refavit Lordis monie one,
 That wounder glaid was of his hame cuming,
 For thay him lovit ouer all uther thing.
 The Lordis of Irland, that war with the King,
 Seing the joy maid at his hame cuming,
 And how he was lovit in his cuntrie,
 2920 Thay thought in happie tyme chofen was he

- To be thair King and alse thair governour,
 Whilk of this world was Prince of most honour.
 The King gart mak ane Proclamatioun,
 And send Heralds in everie regioun,
 That thay, that wold renoun in armis win,
 Sould schaw, and thair ane tornament begine
 In the realme of England on fik ane day ;
 And quha defyrit knightlie to affay
 His nobill deidis, thair sould he servit be.
 2930 And soun the tyding sprang in ilk cuntrie,
 Of quhilk the King of France was blyth to heir,
 And all his Court both Lord and Bacheleir.
 So happinit quhen the Heralds com to France,
 The Lord Constabill with royall ordinance
 Was makand war furth into far cuntrie ;
 Whairfor the King, full valiand of buntie,
 Send threttie Knightis to the tornament
 In right knightlie and fair abuilgement,
 Led be the Knightis thrie of nobill fame,
 2940 The first Sir Charles de la Careir to name,
 The secund was Sir Charles de la Valeir,
 The third Sir John was de la Barneir.
 Thir threttie Knightis war so diligent,
 That two dayis befor the tornament
 They com to prefence of King Clariodus,
 That glaid was of thair cuming and joyous.
 Then speirit he of the King, and how he fuire,
 Thair speirit he of the Queine of lustie figure,
 Then how the Constabill did eik askit he.
 2950 They said all war in gud prosperitie,
 And that both King and Queine did them commend,
 And heartlie greating to his Hienes send ;

And said the Constabill in Bethingham is went,
 With men of weir at the commandiment
 Of the nobill King, quhilk chargit him fo.
 Then was the King Clariodus full wo
 That he not cumin was with them, for he
 Him lovit for his wit and his buntie.
 Quhen thay had spokin long upon this wayis,
 2960 He bad them pas to Queine Meliades,
 And schew to hir the novelties of France.
 Two Knightis them convoyit with plesance
 Unto the Queine, quhom thay full courteslie
 Helfit, and everie thing did specific
 To hir as thay did to the King before.
 And scho, that was of bewtie so decore,
 Glaid was to heir of the prosperitie
 Of the gude King of France and his meingie,
 And of the Queine that was so honorabill,
 2970 And of hir Ladies fair and amiabill.
 In chalmer war thay put for to recray,
 Syne efter war in joyis all the day.
 Upon the morne, from monie far cuntrie
 Com monie ane Lord and Knight of grit buntie.
 King Amandur, and eik King Palexis,
 Hes Knightis sent of full grit nobilnes.
 The King of Spainze and [the] Earle Estur
 Send lustie Knightis of [full] grit valoure.
 The Count of Glocester, with fair meingie,
 2980 Cumin is from the cuntrie of Spaingie,
 Not with Clariodus git seine is he ;
 For quhan he was into Spainze cuntrie,
 This nobil Count of manlie efferis
 Upon the Sarafeinis lay at the weiris.

So monie Lords and Knights is gatherit thair,
 That fillit was the royall Palice fair.
 What is thair more to tellin of this thing,
 When cumin was the day of thair justing,
 The Knightis com all armit in the feild,
 2990 Whair thair devoir they did with speir and scheid,
 That grit plifance it was them for to sie.
 The Ladies sat upon skaffaldis hie.
 Anone the trumpits blew ane mirrie tune,
 And so with lancis did the Knightis june ;
 Both heir and thair to grund gois horle and man,
 The earth dinnit as thay togidder ran :
 Bot all the nobilest King Clariodus,
 The floure of knightheid, fearce and chevalrus,
 Inarmit schyning as ane angell cleir,
 3000 Sik wounderis wroght that ferlie was to heir ;
 From sum he straike the helme and sum the scheid,
 Sum men and hors he dryves down in feild
 Throw his grit vigour and strenuitie,
 Quhilk was in deids of arms ane A per se,
 Might none him ather gainstand nor abid ;
 Whairfor in feild thay maid him roum to ryd.
 Full long the justing induirit on this wayis,
 The Knightis all war nobill for to pryse,
 In all the feild was naine of them that feinges ;
 3010 Full loud the heralds cryit thair ancheingeis
 Of all thir Lordis worthie and famous.
 Heraldis eik of King Clariodus,
 With voices cryit, ELU COUNT A LA BELL !
 And he, that so in knightheid did excell,
 In feild that day hes conqueist sik renoune,
 That it was hard in everie regioun

Of his victorious deidis triumphall,
 Whairthrow his honour did so far excell ;
 Ower all the world quhile that he was on lyve
 3020 His knightheid ran in grie superlative.
 This tornay duirit quhile the bliffull fun
 His course diurnall had compleitlie run,
 And did his purpur visage all scheroud
 In the occident under the noxiall clude,
 And quhill that Venus schew hir cristall light ;
 Then from the feild they go for falt of fight.

Ane moneth out did lest this [grit] tornay,
 That the Knights did him counter day be day ;
 Bot King
